4259. Right of successor to reversion—Against person claiming under original lessee.]—A. being seised of an ancient mill, together with a stream of water diverted out of a river, & flowing from thence unto her mill, & B. being possessed of other mills, together with a stream of water diverted out of the same river, above the stream of A., by means of a head weir, & flowing from thence through the lands of A. down to B.'s mills, as appurtenant to the same: B. erected upon other lands below the lands of A., & near the said watercourse, two other mills, whereby it becoming necessary for him, B., to have a larger supply of water, he widened & deepened his watercourse in the soil of A., & raised & heightened the head weir, & thereby diverted the greatest part of the water into the watercourse for the use of his mills, so that the water was prevented from flowing down to the mill of A. so copiously as it had formerly done, & thereby A.'s mill became of no use. A. having recovered damages in one action against B. on this account, & having afterwards brought a second action for subsequent damages, in order to prevent all further disputes B. agreed to take a grant from A. of the use & benefit of the watercourse so widened & deepened, & of the liberty of diverting the water out of the river. By lease reciting these facts, A., in consideration of £1,500 paid by B., demised to B. the use of the watercourse so widened & deepened as aforesaid, & the free liberty of diverting so much of the water of the river into & along the watercourse as should be necessary for the use of B.'s mills habendum for the use of ninety-nine years, if three persons therein named should so long live, at an annual rent. Soon after the execution of this deed A.'s mill was destroyed. B. or those claiming under him, continued to enjoy the watercourse & the use of the water during the term, & paid the rent. The lease having determined by the death of the last surviving cestui que vie, the person claiming under the grantee continued to enjoy the watercourse in the manner described in the grant, & paid rent for it. The reversion in the lands, upon which A.'s mill formerly stood, having vested in C., it was held that the latter might maintain indebitatus assumpsit for the use & occupation of the watercourse & the water running therein, against the persons who claimed under B.—*DAVIS v. 4260. Sub-tenant holding over—Liability of tenant—Underlease exceeding period of lease.—Defts. took certain premises of pltf. for nine months, at a rent certain, with the option, at the end of that time, of taking a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years. Before the expiration of the nine months, defts. let the premises to a co. for six months, who actually occupied them for that period:—Held: at the end of a year from the expiration of the nine months, defts. were liable to pltf., in an action for use & occupation, for a year's rent.—WARING v. KING (1841), 8 M. & W. 571; 11 L. J. Ex. 49; 151 E. R. 1166.

4261. Tenant at sufferance.—By indenture of lease, dated June 26, 1810, between A., the father of pltf. & B., the father of deft., reciting a former lease of July 27, 1801, made between S. & M. his wife, & A., which recited that M. was entitled to moiety of lands in West Fen, & to two-thirds for life or for some other estate of freehold, & that A. was entitled to the other moiety & the other third part, respectively, or some other share of the same lands, for some estate of freehold, etc.; & by which S. & M. his wife demised the moiety & two-third parts respectively of M. to A. for forty years from Apr. 5, 1801, A. demised to B., amongst other premises, the lands of which M. was by the recital in the lease of 1801, said to be entitled to two-thirds & himself, A., to one-third, of the lands in West Fen, for the remainder of the term of forty years, except the last ten days. A. died in 1813, & B. in 1818, leaving pltf. & deft., their respective representatives. Deft. continued in the occupation of the lands in West Fen down to the time of the trial, he & his father having regularly paid rent to pltf. & his father down to Lady Day, 1841, when the lease of 1801 expired. In debt for use & occupation of an undivided third part of the lands in West Fen, since Lady Day, 1841:—Held: the recital in the lease of 1801 was prima facie evidence that A. was entitled to one-third of the lands in West Fen, in fee, & pltf. had a right to treat deft. as a tenant at sufferance of such undivided third part, for the period during which he held on after the expiration of the lease, & to sue him for use & occupation in respect thereof.—*BAYLEY v. No rent had been paid & defts. distrained for it. In an action in which pltf. obtained damages for wrongful distress defts. counterclaimed for use & occupation:—Held: as pltf. went into possession under the agreement of tenancy & not under an implied agreement to pay what the premises were reasonably worth defts. failed in their counterclaim for use & occupation.—FOX v. SLAUGHTER (1919), 35 T. L. R. 668; 63 Sol. Jo. 704.

4281. Deed not delivered—Not operating as lease.—A lease of premises from pltf. to P., containing the usual words "signed, sealed & delivered," was executed by both parties, pursuant to a previous agreement to let, in which the annual rent was stated to be £55, & by which it was agreed that P. should pay £100 for pltf.'s goodwill & fixtures, & that the lease should not be delivered, but remain in pltf.'s possession until the whole of the £100 was paid. P. paid £50 of that sum & entered into possession & carried on the business of a baker, pltf. keeping possession of the lease. P. became bkpt. without paying the remaining £50, the lease still remaining with pltf. Deft. became assignee in bkpy. In an action for use & occupation, it appearing that deft. had accepted the tenancy:—Held: the evidence warranted the jury in finding that there had been no delivery of the deed so as to operate as a lease, & until the payment of the remaining £55 only a tenancy from year to year existed, & therefore, deft. was liable for rent in an action for use & occupation.—(GUDGEN v. BESSER (1856), 6 E. & B. 986; 26 L. J. Q. B. 36; 21 J. P. 196; 3 Jur. N. S. 212; 5 W. R. 47; 119 E. R. 1131.

4282. Void agreement—Grounds of fraud.—Use & occupation is not maintainable where the express agreement is void by reason of fraud; but pltf. having paid the rent to the superior landlord, the count for money paid was supported.

Use & occupation is not maintainable without a contract.

Where a tenant from year to year, having no authority from his landlord to let in a new tenant, falsely represented to pltf. that he had, & thereby induced him to pay £100 for allowing him to enter into possession, & also to take the stock at a valuation; but the landlord refusing to accept him as tenant, he had to leave after a year's occupation, & it was left doubtful, on the evidence, whether, on the whole, pltf. had become a loser or gainer; & deft. had paid the first half of the year's rent to the landlord; the jury, in an action for the false representation, were directed that they were at liberty, finding for pltf., to give a sum less than the £100, or even nominal damages, & in a cross action by deft. against pltf. in that action for half a year's rent, they were directed to find for pltf. on a count for money paid.—(*CRACKNELL v. Where the legal estate is in trustees for the benefit chiefly, but not entirely, of one person, that one person cannot treat himself as the principal, & the trustees as his agents, so as to maintain an action in his own name for a breach of the tenancy.

Accordingly, where testator devised a term of five hundred years to a trustee, in trust, amongst other purposes, to raise £3,000, & £2,000, for a portion for his daughter, to cease on these purposes being satisfied, & then to his son A. in strict settlement, reserving to such son a power to make leases under his hand & seal, & to appoint a jointure; & an agreement was made for a lease by A. with deft. under which deft. held, during the life & after the death of A.: & by marriage settlement, a term of ninety-nine years, if A. should so long live, & subject to the larger term, was vested in trustees to pay an annual sum to pltf. (A.'s intended wife) & then to pltf. for life, & during the life of A. deft. attorned to the trustees under the marriage settlement, & paid them rent up to & after his death, & they gave receipts, & subsequent to the death of A., agreed to reduce the rent in the character of trustees:—Held: the tenancy under the agreement for a lease, not being in execution of the power, determined; the purposes for which the original term was created remaining unsatisfied, the trustees of the second term must be considered, subsequent to A.'s death, to have acted as agents for the estate generally, & therefore, pltf. could not maintain an action for use & occupation.—MORGELL v. PAUL (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 303; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 200.

4286. Application of rule—No right of action in beneficiary—Tenant by elegit.—By an inquisition taken on an elegit against C., it was found that, at the time of the judgment, he was seised of certain lands in the occupation of B. In point of fact, these lands were vested in certain trustees in trust for C. & for raising a sum of money for A., but the trustees permitted C. to receive the rents:—Held: the tenant, by elegit, could not sue B. for the rent.—*HARRIS v. Pltf. declining to sanction any other than a yearly letting, a correspondence ensued between him & deft., in which the latter intimated that, as he could not get a lease, he should leave as soon as he could, & he did leave before he had been six months in possession:—Held: he was not liable to pltf., either in trespass or use & occupation; & semble: he was not liable at all.—*SLOPER v. 4289. — — — Legal estate by estoppel—Payment of rent by tenant.—Parochial trustees, under the authority of a local Act had built a workhouse on lands belonging to charity trustees in the same parish, & in 1821 disputes arose between the two sets of trustees, as to whether any rent was payable therefore, & the question was brought before the Master of the Rolls by an amicable suit in 1821, who decreed that a certain rent should be paid by the parochial trustees, which was accordingly paid till 1833:—Held: use & occupation might be maintained for the rent in arrear from 1833, as the decision of the Master of the Rolls was binding upon the parties, & the payment of rent under the circumstances was an estoppel on the parochial trustees.—*ALLASON v. —Right against subtenant.—A., being tenant of B. of a house, sub-let it to C., & afterwards B. told A. that he had no objection to accepting C. as tenant, but that he would not exonerate A. from the rent :—Held : (1) as B. still held A. liable for the rent A. might sue C. for the rent as due from C. to him, in an action for use & occupation ; (2) a verbal agreement between A. & C. for A. to grant C. a lease of the house & some ground at a joint increased rent, but which lease A. afterwards refused to execute, afforded no answer to an action for use & occupation of the house by A. against B.—*DAWSON v. A. entered into possession, but did not sign the agreement, & it appeared that B. had no power of conferring the right of sporting, nor could he procure the glebe land. In an action for the use & occupation of the farm :—Held : evidence was admissible to show the annual value of the land without such right which might be ascertained by the jury, independently of the amount of the rent reserved by the agreement.

Dft. in an action for use & occupation, as in an action of debt for rent, might show an eviction of the whole or of part ; that, in case of an eviction of part, the jury must ascertain, independently of any agreement, what dft. ought to pay ; & that an eviction of part of the subject-matter of the demise . . . having been clearly proved in the present instance the rule for a new trial must be discharged (per CUR.).—*TOMLINSON v. Before the term expired, the new tenant, by consent of all parties, was admitted in place of the outgoing tenant ; & the rent was paid at the rate of £47 to the end of the original term. Disputes arising on the new agreement, it was abandoned ; but the new tenant continued to occupy :—Held : it was a question for the jury, in an action for use & occupation, what rent was fairly payable for the continued holding ; no necessary inference arising, under the circumstances, from the former holding at £47.—THETFORD CORPN. v. TYLER (1845), 8 Q. B. 95 ; 15 L. J. Q. B. 33 ; 6 L. T. O. S. 124 ; 10 Jur. 68 ; 115 E. R. 810.

Pltf. applied by summons for final judgment under R. S. C., Ord. 14, r. 1. At the hearing of the summons deft. objected that the writ was not specially indorsed within R. S. C., Ord. 3, r. 6, & the master adjourned it, giving pltf. leave to amend the indorsement by striking out the claim for use & occupation. A copy of the writ so amended was served, & upon the adjourned summons, there being no affidavit of merits, the master made an order for final judgment for the liquidated amount:—Held: deft. had not appeared to a writ specially indorsed under R. S. C., Ord. 3, r. 6; the application for final judgment was improper; the amendment "nunc pro tunc" was improper; & the order for judgment was made without jurisdiction.—GURNEY v. premises, & that subsequently he had become assignee of the lease, & had paid rent to pltf. in accordance with the terms of the lease from 1870 to Mar. 1874. The statement further alleged breaches of the various covenants, & pltf. claimed (a) possession of the premises; (b) £157 10s. for arrears of rent to Sept. 29, 1875, or for use & occupation; (c) damages for breaches of the covenants in the lease; (d) mesne profits from Sept. 29, 1875, to the date of recovery of possession. Deft. in his statement of defence denied that he was assignee of the lease, or that it ever became vested in him, or that he had broken the covenants in the lease. He admitted that the lease had been avoided, & that pltf. was entitled to possession of the premises; he also admitted that he was in possession up to Sept. 29, 1875, but alleged that he ceased to have possession from that date & he paid £25 into ct. to answer pltf.'s claim in respect of mesne profits:—Held: the facts as set out in the pleadings did not support the claim made by pltf. upon deft. for use & occupation of the premises up to Sept. 1875, & pltf. was not entitled to sign judgment, under R. S. C., Ord. 14, r. 4, for the amount he claimed in respect of such use & occupation.—HANMER (LORD) v. FLIGHT (1876), 36 L. T. 279, C. A.

4356. Consolidated rate—Portion payable by landlord.]—(1) By a local Act, a single rate known as the consolidated rate was substituted for the several rates theretofore existing. By sect. 3 of the Act it was enacted that the consolidated rate meant the poor rate as by the Act authorised to be levied & collected; & by sect. 7 the poor rate was to be called the consolidated rate of the parish for which the same should be levied. By sect. 10: "One-eighth of the consolidated rate shall be borne by the owners of the property rated thereto, but in every case the whole rate shall be paid in the first instance by the occupiers of the property rated who are hereby empowered to deduct out of their rents the amounts paid by them on behalf of the owners: Provided," etc.:—Held: the consolidated rate to the extent of one-eighth thereof was a landlord's rate & was not a tenant's rate within Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862 (c. 103), s. 15.

A hereditament in Newcastle was let to an occupier at a rent of £100 a year. The occupier at first paid all the rates imposed on him in respect of the hereditament, & deducted from the rent £7 being one-eighth of the consolidated rate, & paid £93 to his landlord. Afterwards by agreement with his landlord the terms of the tenancy were altered, so that the occupier paid a rent of £93 & paid the consolidated rate without deducting one-eighth or any other proportion therefrom. The hereditament was assessed at a gross estimated rental of £100. The occupier appealed against the assessment, claiming that £93, the annual rent free from the £7, the one-eighth aforesaid, which he contended was a usual tenant's rate, was the gross estimated rental of the hereditament. The rating authority confirmed the assessment. Upon a special case stated on the occupier's appeal to quarter sessions:—Held: the sessions were warranted in fixing the gross estimated rental at £100.—*SLAYTOR v. The surface was let for agricultural purposes to another tenant, who was assessed to the income tax in respect thereof. No work was done by the co. on these minerals, & they were not assessed in respect of them. Before paying the £60 to applt., the co. deducted the income tax thereon, claiming a right to do so either under Income Tax Act, 1842 (c. 35), s. 42, or under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 24 (3). Applt. was assessed to income tax in respect of this £60:—Held: the co. were not entitled to deduct the tax, & applt. was properly assessed under Income Tax Act, 1842 (c. 35), s. 60, Sched. A. i. Rent.

4377. ———— No rent paid for several years—Landlord's tax paid meanwhile—Subsequent payment of rent without deduction.]—By a lease dated in 1907, certain premises were demised to a co., & the co. thereby covenanted to pay the rent & taxes in respect thereof, except land tax & landlord's property tax. The co. never paid any of the rent reserved, but made certain payments in respect of landlord's property tax. In 1911 a debentureholders' action was commenced & a receiver was appointed. Subsequently the lessor threatened to distrain for the rent in arrear, & in order to avoid distress the receiver signed an undertaking by which he undertook to pay an occupation rent, & also to pay the "arrears of rent" then owing out of a particular fund. The receiver paid one year's landlord's property tax, & subsequently made a payment of occupation rent without deducting anything for property tax.—Held: (1) the joint effect of Income Tax Act, 1842 (c. 35), Sched. A., No. IV., r. 9, & Income Tax Act, 1853 (c. 34), s. 40, was to treat the payment by a tenant of landlord's property tax as a pro tanto payment of rent; (2) the receiver was entitled to deduct the payments made by the co. & himself in respect of landlord's property tax from any future payments of rent to be made by him under his undertaking.

It is on the payment of the rent for which he is liable, not the rent for a quarter of a year, or a year, or any other particular periods, that he is "to deduct & retain thereout the amount of the rate of duty which at the time when such payment becomes due shall be payable (WARRINGTON, J.).—*Re STURMEY MOTORS, LTD., RATTRAY v. Tax on full rent—Before deductions under Licensing Act for compensation.]—The right given by Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23), s. 3, to a license holder to deduct from his rent a portion of the amount paid by him in respect of compensation charges does not affect the "rent payable" to the landlord within the meaning of the Income Tax Act, 1842 (c. 35), & therefore the tenant of licensed premises is entitled to deduct from the next payment of rent the tax that he has paid on the total rent payable by him to his landlord, although he has not paid to the landlord the whole amount of that rent, but has deducted from it a proportion of the compensation charge in accordance with the provisions of the Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23).—*HANCOCK & Co. v. Annuity equal to former rent—Payable for duration of lease assigned.]—Pltf. the owner of a leasehold interest expiring in 1912 in certain property which was sub-let at a gross rental of £195 but subject to the payment of a ground rent of £300 to the superior landlord, contracted with defts. for the sale to them of his interest, the transaction being carried out by two deeds of even date. By the first deed pltf. conveyed & assigned the property to defts. for the residue of the term, subject to the payment of the £300 ground rent to the superior landlord, which defts. covenanted to pay, the consideration for the assignment being expressed to be the payment by defts. of the sum of £1,000 to pltf. & the execution by defts. of a deed of even date. By the latter deed defts. covenanted with pltf. to pay him until the last day of the term the sum of £1,625 per annum by quarterly payments;

no sum was fixed as the total amount to be paid. Defts. in making the quarterly payments deducted Income Tax at the current rate under Income Tax Act, 1853 (c. 34), s. 40, & Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 24 (3). Pltfs. sought to recover amount deducted:—Held: the intention was for pltfs. to receive an income to the end of the term of the same net amount as he previously received as rent, & the payments were payments of an annuity or other annual payment within Income Tax Act, 1853 (c. 34), s. 40, & were not the payment of a fixed amount by instalments, & the deductions in respect of income tax had therefore been properly made by defts.—*CHADWICK v. 4382. Money spent in repairs—In lieu of rent.—In the course of negotiations for the granting of a lease of some stables for a term of years at a certain annual rent it was agreed between the parties that, instead of the landlord putting the premises in repair, the tenant should undertake to do the repairs "in consideration of no rent being payable for the first year of the term." Accordingly a lease was executed reserving a peppercorn rent for the first year & the agreed money rent for the residue of the term, & on entering, the tenant executed the repairs. The tenant paid the property tax payable in respect of the premises for the first year & claimed to deduct it from the money rent payable to the landlord for the second year, upon the ground that the expenditure on the repairs was to be treated as the equivalent of the rent for the first year of the term within Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), Sched. A., No. VIII., r. 1.

In an action by the landlord for rent:—Held: the expenditure on repairs was not to be treated as rent, but was to be accepted as the substitute for an agreement to pay rent, & the tenant was not entitled to deduct the tax payable the first year of the tenancy or to counterclaim for the amount of the tax as money paid for the use of the landlord.—DRUGHORN v. MOORE, [1924] A. C. 53; 93 L. J. K. B. 161; 130 L. T. 321; 68 Sol. Jo. 138, H. L.; affg. 89 C. C. A. MOORE v. DRUGHORN, [1922] 2 K. B. 492, C. A.

4385. Whether production of collector's receipt essential.—A landlord is bound to allow, by way of deduction from or discharge of rent due from the tenant, a payment of property tax made by the tenant to the Inland Revenue authorities, notwithstanding that the tenant refuses to show him the collector's receipt for payment of the tax.—*NORTH LONDON & GENERAL PROPERTY CO., LTD. v. It was also enacted, that the tenants should first pay the whole rate & deduct a moiety out of the rent, & that every landlord should allow of such deduction "notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary." After the passing of this Act, certain premises in the parish were leased, the tenant covenanting to pay all rates & taxes. The landlord having refused to deduct half the church rate from the rent, on the ground that the act extended only to agreements in existence at the time of its passing, plff. served him with a plaint from the county ct. Lessor having given his written licence, of even date with the lease, for lessee to build on the land, buildings were erected, whereby the value of the estate was greatly improved, & the amount of taxes increased in proportion:—Held: lessor was liable for the amount of taxes calculated upon the rent of £79 12s. 6d. but not for the amount calculated upon the improved value of the land, occasioned by the erection of the buildings.—*WATSON v. Previous to the lease being granted, C. the lessee, had erected buildings upon the land, whereby its annual value had been greatly increased, but ever since the lease was granted it had continued of the same annual value:—Held: C. was only entitled to deduct from the rent the land tax & sewers rates, payable on the rent reserved, & not that payable upon the annual value.—*SMITH v. embassy—Diplomatic privilege—Liability of sub-contained a covenant by the lessee to pay the sewers rate, & all other rates, taxes, assessments, & impositions of what nature or kind soever, &

whether Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which then were, or at any time thereafter during the term should be assessed, charged, or imposed upon the demised premises, or on the land in respect thereof. By a local Act relating to parochial rates in the parish in which the demised premises were situated it was provided that every rate or assessment made, laid or assessed by virtue of the Act in respect of any land, ground, house, etc., which any ambassador, envoy, resident, agent, or other public minister of any foreign prince or state, or the servant of any such ambassador, envoy, resident, agent, or public minister, or any other person not liable by law to pay such rate or assessment then did or thereafter should inhabit, should be paid by & be recoverable from the landlord, owner, lessor or proprietor, of such land, ground, house, etc. The lessee of the demised premises assigned the same to an attaché of a foreign embassy who occupied them as his residence. The assignee having claimed exemption from liability to pay a parochial rate made in respect of the premises under the local Act, the parish authorities enforced payment of the same against the lessor. In an action brought against the lessee by the lessor to recover the amount so paid by him:—Held: payment of the rate was not enforceable against an attaché of a foreign embassy, & the rate was therefore under the local Act recoverable from the lessor; & the lessee was under the covenant bound to repay to the lessor the amount of the rate so paid by him.—

A lessee covenanted "to pay all Parliamentary, parochial, & other taxes, tithes, & assessments, then, or thereafter to be, issuing out of all or any of the demised premises, or chargeable upon the landlords or tenants thereof, for the time being, in respect thereof":—Held: a rentcharge, imposed on the premises in lieu of the land tax, which had been furnished by a former tenant of the premises under Land Tax Redemption Act, 1802 (c. 116), was a Parliamentary tax or assessment, within the covenant.—*CHRIST'S HOSPITAL (GOVERNORS) v. At the passing of the Act certain rates upon a tithe rentcharge were due & in arrear. The overseers subsequently demanded, & obtained payment of, these rates from the occupiers of the land, purporting to act under Tithe Commutation Act, 1836 (c. 71), & Tithe Act, 1837 (c. 69). The occupiers deducted the amount from their rent, & the landlord deducted that amount from the next payment of tithe rentcharge:—Held: by reason of the repeal contained in sect. 6 of above Act, the payment by the occupiers & the allowance by the landlord were voluntary, & the landlord, therefore, was not entitled to deduct the amount from the next payment of tithe rentcharge.—ROBERTS v. In pursuance of local Acts, a tithe rate of £11 9s. 3d. was assessed upon the demised premises & was recoverable by distress according to those Acts. The present lessees by assignment of the residue of the term claimed as against the freeholder to deduct this amount from their rent under the terms of the lease:—Held: the definition of "tithe rentcharge" in above Act was inapplicable to any payment within the City of London; & further, this tithe rate, having regard to its origin & nature, was in no sense a rent issuing out of land but a rate assessed by virtue of ownership which the lessees could not deduct from their rent under the terms of this lease.—Re SALTER & AWDRY'S LEASE, PROPERTY & ESTATES CO. v. 4460. Whether poor rate included.—Covenant in a lease for years to indemnify against all charges on the land; poor rate not within the same.

Poor & church rates are taxes payable in respect of the land; but they are not payable out of the land for the personal estate only is subject to them, whereas the land tax does immediately charge & affect the land, & therefore is properly called an imposition upon that land (Eyre, C.J.).—CASE v. STEPHENS (1731), Fitz-G. 297; 94 E. R. 764.

4461. Abatement of nuisance.—An agreement for the lease of certain premises stipulated that the landlord should keep the premises in good & substantial repair, & should pay & discharge all rates, taxes, tithes, & other charges payable in respect of the premises. A piece of ornamental water formed part of the demised premises, in which a deposit of foul mud accumulated, which became a nuisance. The local authority took proceedings under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, & obtained an order of the magistrates against pltf., the tenant, as the person by whose act or default the nuisance arose, for the removal thereof. The tenant, previously to the making of the order, but after the commencement of the proceedings against him, entered into an agreement for the cleansing of the piece of water, & upon the completion of the work, paid the contractor a reasonable sum for the same. He then brought an action against the landlord, deft., for breach of his agreement to pay all rates, taxes, & charges payable in respect of the premises, & for money paid to his use:—Held: (1) the landlord was not liable, under the agreement to repair, to cleanse the piece of water, & the expense of removing the nuisance was not a charge within the meaning of the agreement; (2) as the contract for cleansing was entered into before the order was made by the magistrates, pltf. was a volunteer, & could not, therefore, recover the sum laid out as money paid to deft.'s use.—BIRD v. BIRWES (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 225; 37 L. J. Ex. 91; 18 L. T. 727; 32 J. P. 691; 16 W. R. 1120.

4462. Tithe rentcharge.—A lease contained a covenant that the lessee would pay the rent reserved without any deductions in respect of any taxes, rates, assessments, or charges whatsoever, the landlord's property tax only excepted:—Held: he was not entitled to deduct the amount of a tithe rentcharge paid by him from the rent payable to the lessor, for that word "charges" is wide enough to include it, & is not confined to matters ejusdem generis with taxes, rates, & assessments.—LOCKWOOD v. WILSON (1874), 43 L. J. C. P. 179; 30 L. T. 761; 22 W. R. 919.

See, now, Tithe Act, 1891 (c. 8).

4463. Sewering & paving.—Deft. became tenant of a house under a lease by which he covenanted to pay "all rates, taxes, charges, & assessments whatsoever which now are or may be charged or assessed upon the said premises, or any part thereof, or upon any person or persons in respect thereof," land tax & property tax excepted. The local board of health gave notice to pltf. as owner, he having acquired the lessor's interest in the premises, to sewer, level, pave, etc., the street in which the house was situate; & upon his failure to comply with the notice, the board did the work, & made an apportionment upon him in respect thereof, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, & the Acts amending that Act, & he was compelled to pay the amount & interest:—Held: this was a "charge upon the premises," or "upon a person in respect thereof," from which by his covenant deft. undertook to relieve pltf., & therefore pltf. was entitled to maintain an action against deft. in respect of the money & interest so paid by him.—HARTLEY v. HUDSON (1879), 4 C. P. D. 367; 48 L. J. Q. B. 751; 43 J. P. 784.

discharge all land tax, sewers rate, main drainage rate, & all other rates, taxes, assessments, charges, or impositions whatsoever, Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, taxed, charged, assessed, or imposed upon the demised premises, or on the lessor for or in respect of the premises. The lessee also covenanted to repair. The lessee failed to repair, in consequence of which a drain on the premises got out of order, & caused a nuisance. The sanitary authority made an order on the lessor, under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), directing him to repair the drain. The lessor incurred expenses in complying with this order, & sued the lessee to recover the amount:—Held: the expenses so incurred were a charge imposed on the lessor in respect of the premises, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—SMITH v. ROBINSON, [1893] 2 Q. B. 53; 62 L. J. Q. B. 509; 60 L. T. 434; 58 J. P. 73; 41 W. R. 588; 9 T. L. R. 493; 37 Sol. Jo. 585; 5 R. 469, D. C.

4465. ———.]—A lease for years, granted by pltf. to deft., contained a covenant by the lessee to pay during the term "the sewers rate & all other taxes, rates, charges, & assessments whatsoever, Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which then were or thereafter should be imposed, charged, or assessed upon or in respect of the premises, or payable by either the owner or occupier in respect of the same." The lease also contained a covenant by the lessee to repair & keep in repair. In compliance with a notice given by the local authority, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 94, pltf. did the work necessary to abate a nuisance caused by a defective drain upon the premises, & brought this action to recover the cost of that work:—Held: the expenses of doing this work came within the terms of the covenant as a "charge imposed upon or in respect of the premises or payable by either the owner or occupier in respect of the same"; & the lessee was therefore liable to pay the expense thereof himself.—GEORGE v. COATES (1903), 88 L. T. 48, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 3.—DUTIES.

4466. Drainage expenses.—Deft., who was the lessee of pltf., covenanted to "pay the land tax, sewers rate, & all other taxes, rates, duties, assessments, & impositions, Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which now are or shall at any time during this demise be assessed or imposed on or in respect of the said demised premises." Very shortly after the commencement of the lease the sanitary authority served a notice on pltf., as owner, under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), directing him to abate a nuisance on the premises, & for that purpose to take up a defective drain & lay a new drain throughout the premises. Pltf. incurred expenses in complying with the notice, & sued deft. to recover the amount:—Held: the obligation to lay the new drain was a "duty imposed in respect of the premises," & deft. was liable to pay to pltf. the amount expended by her in complying with the notice of the sanitary authority.—BRETT v. ROGERS, [1897] 1 Q. B. 525; 66 L. J. Q. B. 287; 76 L. T. 26; 45 W. R. 334; 13 T. L. R. 175; 41 Sol. Jo. 258, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 4.—IMPOSITIONS.

4467. Drainage expenses—Abatement of nuisance.—A lease for years contained a covenant by the lessee to "pay & discharge all taxes, rates, including sewers main drainage assessments & impositions whatsoever which now are or which at any time or times hereafter during the continuance of the said term hereby granted be taxed rated assessed charged or imposed upon or in respect of the said premises or any part thereof on the landlord tenant or occupier of the same premises by authority of Parliament or otherwise howsoever, landlord's property tax & tithe only excepted." There was no repairing covenant in the lease. Notice was given to the lessor by the sanitary authority of the district, under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), to abate a nuisance caused by a foul & offensive privy on the premises, by removing the privy, & constructing a water-closet in accordance with the bye-laws of the London County Council. The lessor thereupon did the work required by the notice, & subsequently sued the lessee to recover the expense incurred by him in so doing:—Held: this expense was covered by the words "impositions charged or imposed upon or in respect of the said premises on the landlord tenant or occupier of the same" in the covenant, & therefore the action was maintainable.—FOULGER v. ARDING, [1902] 1 K. B. 700; 71 L. J. K. B. 499; 86 L. T. 488; 50 W. R. 417; 18 T. L. R. 422; 46 Sol. Jo. 356, C. A.

4468. ———.]—A landlord let a house to a tenant for three years at the "clear yearly rent" of £54, to be paid "free & clear of & from all deductions whatsoever," property tax excepted. The tenant covenanted to pay the rent & to pay & discharge "all rates, taxes, assessments, & impositions whatsoever," whether "Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise," that might become due or assessed in respect of the premises during the tenancy, property tax excepted, & to keep the premises in as good repair as at the commencement of the tenancy, fair wear & tear excepted. The landlord covenanted to keep the main walls and roof in repair during the tenancy:—Held: the duty & expense of complying with a notice from the sanitary authority to reconstruct the drains constituted an "imposition" within the agreement which fell on the tenant notwithstanding the absence of such words as "imposed on the landlord or tenant," & notwithstanding the shortness of the tenancy.—Re WARRINER, BRAYSHAW v. 4470. Water rates.]—By a covenant contained in a lease of a warehouse in the city of London the lessor covenanted with the lessees to pay all rates, taxes, & impositions whatsoever, whether parliamentary, parochial, or imposed by the corp. of the city of London or otherwise, howsoever, which then were or thereafter might be rated, charged, or assessed on the said premises, or any part thereof, or on the said yearly rent, or on the landlord, owner, or tenants of the said premises in respect thereof. Water having been supplied to the demised premises for domestic purposes by the New River co. under the provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), the lessees paid the water rates due in respect of such supply, & sought to recover the same from the lessor:—Held: such water rates were not rates or impositions imposed on or in respect of the premises within the meaning of the covenant, & therefore the lessees were not entitled to recover the same from the lessor.—BADCOCK v. HUNT (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 145; 58 L. J. Q. B. 134; 60 L. T. 314; 53 J. P. 340; 37 W. R. 205; 5 T. L. R. 148, C. A.

The lease having expired, the tenant remained in possession as tenant from year to year at a rent of £46 5s. The local authority of the district claimed from the landlord, pltf., the sum of £188 2s. 9d. for the cost of making up the road, which pltf. paid, & sued to recover from the tenant, deft.:—Held: the covenant being plain & unambiguous, it was not open to the tenant to say that it was not such a sum as was contemplated by the parties to the lease, & the tenant, having held over upon the terms of the lease, was liable to pay.—LOWTHER v. CLIFFORD (1926), 42 T. L. R. 432; 70 Sol. Jo. 544; 90 J. P. Jo. 229, C. A.

4475. Expenses incurred voluntarily by owner.]—The owners of a house let to deft. for a term of three years at a rent of £70, deft. agreeing to pay "all rates, taxes, assessments, & outgoings whatsoever in respect of the said premises." After the expiry of the term deft. continued in occupation of the house without any fresh agreement, & paid rent for it at the same rate. Subsequently, & whilst deft. was still in occupation, the sanitary inspector of the district served upon the owners of the house an intimation under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 3, that the house was in such a state as to be a nuisance owing to the drain being defective. The owners gave notice to deft., & required him to do the work necessary to abate the nuisance. Upon deft. refusing to do so, the owners proceeded to do the work themselves at once without waiting to be served by the sanitary authority with a notice under sect. 4 of the said Act requiring them to do the work. The expense incurred by them in doing the work amounted to £70 1s. 6d. In an action by the owners to recover that sum from deft. under his covenant to pay all outgoings:—Held: the action could not be maintained because the owners, having done the work immediately upon receipt of the intimation of the existence of the nuisance & before service of any notice requiring them to abate it, did it voluntarily & not under any obligation, & the expenditure was consequently not an "outgoing" within the meaning of the covenant; & even if a covenant to pay outgoings would cover such an expenditure, it was not, having regard to the proportion which the expenditure bore to the yearly rent, a covenant which was applicable to a yearly tenancy, & deft., in holding over after the expiry of his term & paying rent, could not be presumed to have intended to become a yearly tenant on the terms of such an obligation.—HARRIS v. HICKMAN, [1904] 1 K. B. 13; 73 L. J. K. B. 31; 89 L. T. 722; 68 J. P. 65; 20 T. L. R. 18; 48 Sol. Jo. 69; 2 L. G. R. 1.

4476. Caused by failure of landlord to repair.]—Deft. agreed with pltf. that if pltf. would put the drains of pltf.'s house into a sound & proper condition, he would take a lease of the house. A lease was subsequently executed by deft., which contained covenants by deft. to pay all outgoings payable in respect of the premises during the tenancy, & to keep the premises in repair. Pltf. did not, either before or after the execution of the lease, put the drains into a sound or proper condition, & by reason of her failure so to do a nuisance from defective drainage was caused on the premises during the currency of the lease, & pltf. incurred expense in complying with an order of the sanitary authority to abate the nuisance, under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 75). Pltf. sued deft. to recover the sum expended by her:—Held: deft. was not liable, on the grounds that the covenant to pay outgoings did not apply to a payment for work rendered necessary by pltf.'s failure to repair the drains in accordance with the agreement; & the covenant to keep the premises in repair did not apply to the drains unless & until they had first been put in repair by pltf.—HENMAN v. BERLINER, [1918] 2 K. B. 236; 87 L. J. K. B. 984; 119 L. T. 312; 82 J. P. 300; 34 T. L. R. 456; 16 L. G. R. 707.

4477. Whether within reasonable contemplation of parties.]—In a contract of demise between landlord & tenants a covenant by the tenants to pay "all rates, taxes, assessments & outgoings of every description, payable in respect of the premises during the tenancy, except the landlord's property tax," must be assumed to relate only to matters which may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated by the parties as being within the purview of such a contract.

In the case of a tenancy of a cottage & yard from year to year under a lease at the annual rent of £20 where the lease contained such a covenant & the tenant had held the said premises for over ten years:—Held: a supply of water to a water-closet required by the sanitary authority under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), was, & the paving & draining of a yard & repairs to drains required by the said authority under the said Act were not, within the reasonable contemplation of the parties to the demise.—*VALPY v. The local board made a claim upon the landlord & tenant for £68 15s. 11d., the share of the expenses of paving the road abutting on the house which had been apportioned to it:—Held: the words of the agreement were large enough to cover this payment; & their meaning could not be regarded as altered because the agreement was only for a term of three years; therefore, the tenant must pay the amount claimed by the board.—*BATCHELOR v. (2) The assessment was made in certain proportions upon the owners & occupiers. For four years deft., the tenant, paid, in the first instance, both his own share & that of pltf., his landlord, & upon each half-year's settlement of accounts for rent due, with pltf.'s agent, who was ignorant of the agreement, the sum so paid was allowed towards the rent, & receipts were given for the balance:—Held: in an action brought upon the agreement, to recover the sums so allowed as arrears of rent, the facts supported a plea of payment.—*WALKER v. Thereupon, the occupier, without forwarding the document to the owners, or informing them of it, caused the work to be executed, & then sought to recover the amount expended thereon from the owners:—Held: the occupiers, not being compellable to execute the work, had acted as mere volunteers in doing so, & had no claim to be reimbursed by the owners.—THOMPSON & NORRIS MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. During the term of three years pltf. expended £83 in reconstructing the drainage of the house in compliance with a notice from the local authority:—Held: the tenant was liable to pay the expense of doing this work as an "outgoing" within the meaning of the agreement, although the term was short & the rent small.—STOCKDALE v. The lessor covenanted to "keep the exterior of the said dwelling-house & buildings in repair." The sanitary authority served notice during the term on the lessor under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), stating that a nuisance existed on the premises arising from an outside defective drain & requiring him to do certain work which involved the renewal & reconstruction of the drainage system outside the house; & an order of justices was made directing him to do the work. The lessor accordingly did the work required, & claimed to recover from the lessee the cost thereof so far as it exceeded mere repair:—Held: the lessee's covenant to pay "all outgoings imposed on the landlord in respect of the premises" must be read as being subject to the performance by the lessor of his covenant to keep the exterior of the buildings in repair, & as the work of renewal & reconstruction was necessary in order to enable the lessor to perform his covenant to repair, he was bound to bear the cost thereof.—HOWE v. 4501. ————.]—No right to deduct amount paid.—Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 96, empowers a local authority to require the payment of any expenses, which the owner of any premises may be liable to pay, from the owner or occupier of the premises, & provides that the owner shall allow the occupier to deduct what he so pays "out of the rent from time to time becoming due in respect of the said premises, as if the same had been paid to such owner as part of such rent." There is a proviso that nothing in the sect. contained shall be taken to affect any contract whatsoever between landlord & tenant:—Held: a payment made by a tenant to a local authority under this sect. is not a payment of or on account of rent, but a payment of or on account of expenses, therefore, when a tenant has covenanted with his landlord that he will bear the expenses which he has under sect. 96 of above Act paid to the local authority, he has, by reason of the proviso, no right to deduct from the rent the amount which he has so paid, & the landlord's right to distrain for unpaid rent is unaffected.—*SKINNER v. in respect thereof. The lease was determinable by six months' notice. The landlords gave notice to determine it, & contracted to sell the property. The district board of works gave notice to the landlords of apportionment of expenses of paving a new street, under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 77, fixing no date for payment. The landlords paid the amount claimed. The work was commenced after the notice to determine the lease had expired. In an action by the landlords to recover under the covenant the amount paid by them to the district board:—Held: the words of the covenant included the expenses of paving the new street, & when the district board gave notice to the landlords of the apportionment & charge, the charge became operative, & the landlords became liable to pay the amount, & were entitled to recover it from the tenant under the covenant.—*WIX v. In an action against his lessee to recover the expenses under a covenant contained in the lease, by which the lessee covenanted to pay, bear, & discharge, inter alia, every other rate, tax, charge, assessment, burthen, duty, & imposition whatsoever, Parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, to which the lessor then was, or should, or might thereafter, be liable:—Held: the lessor was entitled to recover.—Re ROBERTSON & THORNE (1883), 47 J. THOMPSON* (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 144; 37 L. J. C. P. 134; 17 L. T. 506; 32 J. P. 135; 16 W. R. 314.

In an action brought by the landlord to recover the amount paid by him in respect of a rate made by the vestry for the paving of the street:—Held: the tenant was not liable to repay the amount to the landlord, the rate being in the nature of an expense incurred for permanent improvements, & therefore, not the kind of rate mentioned in the covenant; & not being by Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 96, imposed upon the premises or the occupier of them, but upon the owner.—ALLUM v.

COLLYER (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 1; 53 L. J. Q. B. 278; 51 L. T. 299; 48 J. P. 791; 32 W. R. 614, D. C.

4509. ———— To pay rent without deduction.]—Pltfs. were tenants of a house in Lambeth under a lease from deft., by which a rent of £40 was reserved "to be paid without deduction, except landlord's property tax, by equal quarterly payments, free & clear from all deductions for main-drainage & sewer rates, metropolitan & local improvement rates, taxes, land tax, tithes rent-charge, & commutation in lieu of tithes," & the lessees covenanted to pay "the said yearly rent of £40 at the times & in manner aforesaid, free & clear of all deductions except aforesaid," & to pay & discharge during the said tenancy all maindrainage & sewers rates, etc., following the words of the reservation. In May, 1890, the Lambeth vestry required deft. as owner of the premises to construct a drain into the common sewer under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 73, & deft. not complying, did the work themselves, & recovered the costs, £17 17s., from pltfs. under Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 96. Pltfs. deducted this amount from their next half-year's rent, & upon deft. threatening to distrain, brought this action for an injunction to restrain him:—Held: the payment in question was not within the express covenant in the lease, & the covenant to pay the rent without deduction could not be construed as a contract between landlord & tenant to exclude the tenant's right to deduct this payment from his rent under Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 96.—HOME & COLONIAL STORES v. deft. the expenses of making a drain, which under Sanitary Act, 1866 (c. 90), s. 10, deft., as "owner," might have been required by the sewer authority to make, but which pltf. had made under an arrangement with deft. by which the expense was to be borne by the party liable.

The drainage having become defective, the sanitary authority of the borough within which the hereditaments were situate caused a notice to be served upon pltfs. requiring them, as owners, to abate the nuisance, & the notice not having been complied with, obtained an order from a justice to the like effect. D. Local Acts.

4528. Liability of landlord—Right of tenant to deduct from rent—Rights of outgoing tenant.]—

Where, by a local Act, it was provided that a drainage tax should be paid by the tenants of the lands & grounds charged with the same, who might deduct & retain the same out of the rents payable to their landlord. Also, that in case of neglect to pay, the tax might be levied by distress on the goods & chattels which should be found on the lands charged with the tax in arrear, & if the same should be untenanted, or no sufficient distress could be found, the lands & grounds chargeable should remain as a surety for the payment thereof, & might be taken possession of, & let in discharge of the tax:—Held: the tenants to be charged with the tax were those in whose time the tax accrued due, & not the tenants for the time being, therefore, where an outgoing tenant having paid his rent in full, had left property on the premises, which was afterwards distrained for the tax due during his tenancy, & he was obliged to pay it, he might recover the same in an action against his landlord for money paid.—DAWSON v. LINTON (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 521; 1 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 117; 106 E. R. 1281.

4529. — Notwithstanding covenant by tenant—Breach of duty by landlord.]—By a local Act the council were empowered to order streets to be sewered & paved by the owners of the adjoining premises, & in case of default by such owners, to do the work themselves, & to charge the respective owners with their proportionate parts of the expenses thereof, to be recoverable by action of debt, etc. By way of additional remedy, the council were empowered to require payment from any present or future tenant or occupier, to be levied by distress, & it was made compulsory on the owner to allow such payments to be deducted from the rent. In 1863, premises in G. Street were demised by pltf. to deft. for seven years, at the "clear yearly rent" of £90, the latter covenanting that he would "pay & discharge all taxes, rates, assessments, & impositions whatsoever, except property tax, which during the term should become payable in respect of the demised premises." In 1865 the council gave notice to have G. Street sewered & paved. Pltf. neglecting to do the required work, the council caused it to be done, & assessed his proportion of the expense at £213 3s. 6d., which he paid:—Held: the payment having been made by pltf., not for a rate, assessment, or imposition which had become payable in respect of the demised premises, but for the breach of a duty imposed upon him by the Act of Parliament, he was not entitled to call upon deft. under his covenant to repay him the amount.—TIDSWELL v. WHITWORTH (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 326; 30 L. J. C. P. 103; 15 L. T. 574; 15 W. R. 427.

4530. Liability of tenant—Under covenant—Paving.—By a local Act, the comrs. appointed thereby were authorised to pave & flag footways, & the costs thereof were to be paid by the tenants or occupiers of the houses next adjoining; in default whereof, they were to be recovered by distress. Another clause empowered the tenant to deduct the costs so paid by him out of his rent:—Held: this charge was within the terms of a covenant in a lease subsequently made, whereby the tenant covenanted to pay all taxes, rates, duties, levies, assessments, & payments whatever, which were, or during the term might be rated, levied, assessed, or imposed on the premises.—*PAYNE v. 4531. ———— Payment in first instance by landlord—Recovery from tenant.—Pltf., the owner of certain premises, demised them to defts. for a term of years at a yearly rent "clear of all present & future rates, taxes, & deductions," & a covenant was contained in the lease that defts., "their successors or assigns should & would during the term, well & truly pay, or cause to be paid, the yearly rent thereinbefore reserved, & also should & would bear & pay all the rates, taxes & outgoings, then payable or thereafter to become payable, whether by landlord or tenant, in respect of the said premises." The corp. within whose limits the premises were situated incurred, under the special Act, certain expenses in paving, etc., the street adjoining the premises, which expenses they were empowered to charge upon the owners of buildings & lands in the street.

Pltf., on demand, paid the expenses incurred by the corp., & brought the present action to recover them from defts. under the covenant in the lease:—Held: the omission of the word "outgoings" in the reddendum clause did not qualify the covenant, & pltf. was therefore entitled to recover.—GARDNER v. FURNESS RY. CO. (1883), 47 J. P. 232.

4532. ———— Fire escape—London Building Act, Amendment Act, 1905 (c. cclx).—In May, 1903, resp. let a house in London to applt. for twenty-one years, the lessee covenanting that he would "execute all such works as aro or may under or in pursuance of any Act or Acts of Parliament already passed or hereafter to be passed be directed or required by any local or public authority to be executed at any time during the said term upon or in respect of the said premises whether by the landlord or the tenant thereof." At that date there had been passed Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 70), which enacted that owners of factories should provide means of escape in case of fire. Two years after the date of the lease London Building Act (Amendment) Acts, 1905 (c. cclx), was passed, by which the owner of a house such as that demised by resp. was required to furnish means of escape from fire, & by sect. 20 of which it was provided that the owner on satisfying that requirements might apply to the county ct. judge of the district to apportion the expenses of the work between him & the lessee, & that the ct. might "make such order concerning such expenses or their apportionment . . . as appears to the ct. to be just & equitable in the circumstances of the case, regard being had to the terms of the lease or contract affecting such building." In 1915, the house was burnt down, & the London County Council under the Act of 1905, required applt., as being the owner of the house for the purposes of the Act, to provide sufficient means of escape from fire. He complied with the requirements & applied to the county ct. judge to apportion the expenses as between him & his lessor. The county ct. judge decided that the lessee must bear the whole burden of the expense:—Held: having regard to the language of the covenant & the fact that there was at its date a statute in force which imposed an obligation upon the owners of another class of buildings to provide means of escape from fire, the lessee must be presumed to have contemplated the possibility of an Act being thereafter passed imposing a similar obligation upon the owners of houses such as that which he was about to rent, & under these circumstances no other order than that made by the county ct. judge would have been, "just & equitable" within sect. 20.—MONRO v. BURGHCLERE (LORD), [1918] 1 K. B. 291; 87 L. J. K. B. 366; 118 L. T. 343; 82 J. P. 86; 34 T. L. R. 131; 62 Sol. Jo. 231; 16 L. G. R. 210, D. C.

4533. ———— Improvement charge—Claim against landlord abandoned—London County Council Improvements Act, 1899 (c. cclxvi).—The improvement charge, which by the above Act is placed upon all lands adjacent to, & enhanced in value by, the operations carried out under the Act, is an overriding charge upon the lands as a whole. The Council have a statutory right to recover the full amount of the charge from any owner, lessee, or occupier; & they are not limited in their right to recover against lessees by the fact that the Council have abandoned the charge as against the freehold reversioners.—*HOLBORN & FRASCATI, LTD. v. 4534. Nature of duty—"Outgoing."—In 1907 pltf. became tenant to defts. of a public-house, & he covenanted to pay "all taxes, rates, assessments, & outgoings whatsoever now or hereafter to be taxed, rated, or assessed on the premises or on the landlords or tenant in respect thereof." He deposited a sum of money with defts. as security for the due performance of his covenants, & this sum was to be retained by them until pltf. should have transferred the licence to their nominee. The licence was transferred to new tenants in July, 1910, & pltf. thereupon demanded the return of his deposit; but defts. claimed to retain same under the pltf.'s covenant, to meet the new licence duty imposed by Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), which was chargeable on any licence granted after July 1, 1909, but the amount of which had not yet been decided by the Inland Revenue Comrs.:—Held: the new duty was an "outgoing" within pltf.'s covenant, & defts. were entitled to retain the deposit to meet such duty.—WAUER v. HOARE & Co., LTD. (1910), 27 T. L. R. 16.

deft. & lessee, on the demised premises, sufficient rough timber, not on the stem, to enable them to repair & put into tenable repair the premises, & although lessee did not before the assignment or at any time repair or put into repair the premises: yet deft. did not after the assignment repair or put into repair the premises, nor yield up same well repaired at the expiration of the term, but suffered them to be ruinous, etc., for want of repair, & so left them at the expiration of the term. Deft. pleaded among other pleas, as to suffering the premises to be ruinous & out of repair, & so leaving them: that lessor did not at any time from the assignment till the expiration of the term provide on the premises sufficient rough timber, not on the stem, to enable deft. to repair, nor any rough timber whatever; & he demurred specially to the declaration. Pltf. demurred to the plea:—Held: (1) the declaration was good; for the covenant to put in repair ran with the land, & bound the assignee, though the lessee, in this part of the deed, covenanted only for himself & his exors. & administrators, & the payment of £400 to the lessee was no ground for construing this covenant as limited to him personally; (2) it was sufficient, on this record, to aver that the lessor was always ready & willing to furnish timber, without stating that he actually did furnish it; (3) a covenant to yield up in repair at the end of a term runs with the land & binds an assignee, though not named; (4) the plea was bad, for that the condition precedent to deft.'s obligation to repair was sufficiently performed if he was ready & willing to supply timber when required.—*MARTYN v. 4544. —.]—A declaration stated that, by indenture, A. in consideration of the rents & covenants on the part & behalf of B., his exors., administrators & assigns, to be paid, done & performed, demised to B., his exors., administrators & assigns, a certain messuage & lands for a term of sixty-three years; with liberty to B., his exors., administrators & assigns, to make any erections or buildings on any part of the premises. B. for himself, his heirs, exors. & administrators, not saying assigns, covenanted that he, his heirs, exors., administrators or assigns would pay the rent reserved; & that he, his exors. or administrators would repair the messuage & farm, outhouses, barns, stables & all other erections & buildings which should or might be thereafter erected during the term on the demised premises; & same being so repaired, that B., his exors., administrators & assigns would at the end of the term yield up. The declaration then stated that the interest of B. in the demised premises, by assignment, vested in defts., & that pltf. became seized of the reversion, subject to the term. First breach: that defts. did not repair the messuage, etc., & other buildings which were

during the term built on the demised premises. Second breach: that defts. yielded up to pltf. the premises out of repair. Second plea: to the breaches, on equitable grounds, that while defts. were possessed of the demised premises, by indenture they demised them to pltf. for a term, less by thirty days than their own term; that pltf. covenanted to repair & yield up in repair, defts. finding certain timber & iron work. The plea then alleged that the want of repair complained of by pltf., was caused by his default & was a breach of his covenant; & that defts. were ready to find timber & iron work; & that they are entitled to recover from pltf. the same amount of damages as he sought to recover from them. The plea concluded by offering to set off the damages. Third plea: as to not repairing & yielding up in repair certain buildings erected on the premises during the term; that the buildings were not in being at the time of making the indenture, & were built after the commencement of the term, & were then entirely new erections & not built in the place of anything standing on the land at the time of the demise:—Held: (1) the third plea was bad; for as the covenant was not a covenant absolutely to do a new thing, but to do something conditionally, viz. if new buildings were erected on the demised premises to repair them; & as when built they would be part of the thing demised, the assignee was bound though not named; (2) the second plea was not good as an equitable defence; or as a defence at law, in avoidance of circuity of action, inasmuch as the covenants were not co-extensive, & the damages could not be identical.—MINSHULL v. OAKES (1858), 2 H. & N. 793; 27 L. J. Ex. 194; 4 Jur. N. S. 169; 157 E. R. 327.

4546. Assignee of underlease—Covenant in respect of premises not included in underlease—Collateral covenant.—There is no authority for the proposition that a covenant in a lease to do an act not in respect of the demised premises, but which will protect from forfeiture the estate of the lessee in those premises, is a covenant which runs with the land.

A lease for years of land contained a covenant by the lessee to keep in repair all buildings erected on the land & a proviso for re-entry for breach of that covenant. Of several houses erected on the land two were demised by an underlease in which the underlessor covenanted for himself & his assigns with the underlessee & his assigns (a) for quiet enjoyment; (b) for the performance of the covenants of the head lease by the lessee thereof so far as they affected the land included in the head lease & not demised in the underlease; (c) to indemnify the underlessee & his assigns against breaches of those covenants. The underlessor's assignee, in whom the head lease had vested, failed to perform the covenant to repair in the head lease, & the head lessor re-entered on all the land demised by the head lease & ejected the assignee of the underlessee from the two houses demised by the underlease:—Held: the covenant in the underlease to perform the covenant in the head lease relating to premises not demised by the underlease, being a covenant not touching or concerning the land demised in the underlease, did not run with the land, & the assignee of the underlessor was not liable for breaches of the above-named covenants in the underlease.—*DEWAR v. Plea, that, after defts. had become tenants to pltf., & before the committing of the breach, or the accrual of the cause of action in respect thereof, pltf., by due course of law, conveyed, assigned, granted, & assured all his estate, etc., of & in the demised premises, & of & in the reversion expectant on the determination of defts.' tenancy, to one B.; & that pltf. thenceforward, & before the accrual of the cause of action, ceased to have anything in the demised premises, & defts. thence ceased to be, & never since had been, tenants thereof, to pltf.; concluding with a verification:—Held: the plea was no answer to the declaration; the tenancy therein alleged, being, a tenancy under pltf. & his assigns.—BICKFORD v. 4552. —.]—A declaration in covenant stated, that one F. & G. being seised of an estate in fee demised by indenture to deft. & his assigns leave to dig for clay therein, & make such adits & erect sheds, engine-houses & buildings as he should think necessary for working the clay, & to have & hold the same for twenty-one years, determinable by a twelve-months' notice; that deft. covenanted with F. & G., their heirs & assigns, to pay compensation to them, their heirs & assigns, for all such lands within the limits thereof as he might injure by such digging, the amount in case of difference to be settled by an arbitrator; & that deft. would keep such "works," & all houses, sheds, engine-houses, etc., in good repair; that deft. entered & got the clay until May 31, 1853, when F. & G. by indenture granted & conveyed the lands to pltf., his heirs & assigns for ever, who thereby became seised thereof in fee, & that the interest of deft. was determined by a notice to quit. First breach, that although deft. by digging for clay after pltf. so became seised did injure & destroy part of the land, for which the pltf. was entitled to a compensation, & although pltf. appointed an arbitrator to ascertain the amount, yet deft. refused to appoint one. Second breach, that deft. did not keep the "works" in repair. Pleas, first, not guilty; secondly, that deft. in digging for clay after pltf. became so seised did not injure the lands. It was proved at the trial, that deft. had in digging for the clay injured the lands, but that such injury was done before the conveyance of the land to pltf. The judge amended the declaration by striking out the words "after pltf. so became seised." On motion to enter a verdict for deft. & in arrest of judgment:—Held: (1) the claim to damages in respect to the injury to the land being merely a chose in action did not pass to pltf. by the conveyance of the land to him, & the agreement as to ascertaining the amount of injury was merely incidental & annexed to the substantial matter, & was to be exercised by the person who was the owner of the land at the time the injury was done, & to whom the compensation ought to be made; (2) the conveyance of the land to pltf. during the existence of the term in the incorporeal hereditaments was an assignment of the reversion within 32 Hen. 8, c. 34; (3) the covenant to repair, as it directly touched & concerned the thing demised, was assignable with the reversion, & the action might be brought in the name of pltf., who was entitled to the benefit of the covenants.—MARTYN v. All three leases contained onerous covenants to repair the premises & to keep them & yield them up in good repair. The sub-underlease became vested by assignment in deft. On Dec. 18, 1917, pltf., who had been a tenant to deft. of the same premises, & was liable to him under a covenant to repair less onerous than those in the three leases above mentioned, agreed to purchase, & on May 1, 1918, took a conveyance of the fee simple of the premises together with the benefit of the covenants in the head lease. At the expiration of all the leases the premises were out of repair & deft. was threatening pltf. with an action on his covenant. Thereupon pltf. obtained an assignment of the full benefit of the lessee's covenants to repair contained in the sub-underlease, & commenced an action against deft. as assignee of the

A. & B. being entitled to copyhold premises in certain shares, B. demised the whole to deft., in his own name, by lease in writing not under seal, for one year, at a rent payable half-yearly; & B. thereby agreed for himself, his heirs, etc., & assigns with deft. that he should peaceably hold the demised premises. Before the first half-year's rent fell due, B. surrendered his interest in the premises to A., of which deft. had notice, & afterwards paid that rent to an agent employed by A. & B. 4558. — Written agreement for holding over.—By an indenture of lease dated Feb. 24, 1913, the lessee of a house in London for a term of ten years, hereinafter called the lessor, demised the first, second, & third floors thereof, with the hall on the ground floor & the staircases & passages, to deft. for five years from Dec. 25, 1912, the lease reserving to the lessor & her employees a right to use the hall for the purpose of gaining access from the street to the shop & premises occupied by her. The lease contained covenants by deft. that she would keep & yield up the premises in good & tenantable repair, that she would not make any alteration or addition to the premises without the consent of the lessor, that she would pay for the gas consumed in the premises including the hall, & that she would use the premises for carrying on occupations of a quiet & inoffensive nature only. The lessor covenanted that she would pay the rent & perform & observe the covenants in the lease under which she held, & would pay all rates, taxes, & outgoings payable in respect of the demised premises. By an agreement between the administrators of the lessor who had died & deft. contained in correspondence, it was arranged that on the expiration on Dec. 25, 1917, of deft.'s lease she should as from that date continue to occupy the premises on a quarterly tenancy. On June 20, 1918, deft. gave a quarter's notice to quit the premises on Sept. 29, 1918. Before the expiration of that notice, by an indenture dated July 10, 1918, the administrators demised the premises to pltf. for the residue of the term created by the head lease less three days. Pltf. sued deft. for alleged breaches of the repairing covenants:—Held: pltf. was the assignee of the reversion expectant upon the determination of deft.'s tenancy; the terms of the expired lease as to repairs were to be implied in the new agreement in writing for a quarterly tenancy; those terms being implied in the written agreement were "therein contained" within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 10 (1); & therefore pltf. was entitled to sue for breaches of the covenants to repair as contained in the agreement for the quarterly tenancy.—COLE v. KELLY, [1920] 2 K. B. 106; 89 L. J. K. B. 819; 123 L. T. 105; 36 T. L. R. 262, C. A.

4559. — What written agreement sufficient to satisfy Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 10.—In Sept. 1895, a lease was granted of certain premises for twenty-one years, expiring in Mar. 1917. The lease contained full repairing & painting covenants, including a covenant by the lessee that he would at the expiration of the lease deliver up the premises in good & substantial repair. In 1900 the lease was assigned to deft. In 1910 the lessors granted a building lease to G. for ninety-nine years, subject to, but with the benefit of, the lease of Sept. 1895. In 1911 G. deposited his building lease with N. by way of equitable mtge. In June, 1915, G. was adjudicated bkpt. Shortly afterwards N. entered into possession of the mortgaged premises under the powers contained in his mtge. In Feb. 1917, N. agreed with deft. verbally that he should hold over after the expiration of the lease on the terms of the old lease subject to an increased rent, & accordingly deft. remained in possession. In July, 1917, the trustee in bkpcy. of G. assigned the ninety-nine years' building lease to N. In Sept. 1918, N. made another verbal agreement with deft., that he should remain at the premises as tenant from Sept. 29, 1918, to the Declaration of Peace, but at an increased rent. This verbal agreement was confirmed in writing by a letter dated Sept. 7, 1918, signed only by N.'s agent, deft. not signing any document. On July 22, 1900, N. assigned the building lease to pltf., who at the same time acquired the freehold of the premises. Deft. in Nov. 1920, gave up possession of the premises, as pltf. alleged, in a serious state of dilapidation. Pltf. brought an action to recover damages from deft. for breaches of the repairing & painting covenants:—Held: the letter of Sept. 7, 1918, notwithstanding that it was signed only by the landlord's agent, constituted a sufficient agreement in writing within above sect. to entitle pltf. to maintain the action for breach of the covenant to deliver up the premises in good & substantial repair.—*RYE v. Demurrer:—Held: the declaration was bad in substance: no obligation to do substantial repairs on notice being implied by law from the relation of landlord & tenant.

4565. Voluntary repairs by landlord—Negligence causing injury to tenant—Liability a question of fact.—A well was let from year to year, neither landlord nor tenant being bound to repair the steining. The well being out of repair the tenant complained to defts., the landlords, who sent in men to repair it. The well was destroyed by the negligence of the workmen employed. An action having been brought by the tenant to recover damages for the injury sustained by him:—Held: defts. were not necessarily responsible, but it was a question of fact for the jury what was the nature of the obligation incurred by them by reason of their interference.—*MILLS v. 4568. Effect of covenant by tenant—On implied obligation—Standard of repair differentiated.]—A dwelling-house which as regards rent was within the Housing of the Working Classes Acts as well as the Rent Restriction Acts, was let to a tenant under an agreement by which he agreed “to keep & leave the premises & fixtures in good & tenantable repair, state & condition (fair wear & tear only excepted).” By the Housing of the Working Classes Acts an undertaking was implied in the contract of letting that the house should during the holding be kept by the landlords in all respects reasonably fit for human habitation. The landlords served three notices of increase of rent upon the tenant under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest Restrictions Act, 1920 (c. 17), s. 2 (1) (d), in all of which they claimed an increase of 25 per cent. upon the basis that the landlords were responsible for the whole of the repairs. The tenant paid the increases demanded, & subsequently claimed to recover rent overpaid on the basis that the notices of increase were invalid, as the landlords were not responsible for the whole of the repairs:—Held: the standard of repair required by the tenant’s covenant to keep & leave the premises & fixtures in good & tenantable repair (fair wear & tear only excepted) was higher than the standard of repair imposed on the landlords by the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, & therefore the clause in the tenancy agreement was not void & the landlords were not responsible for the whole of the repairs.—*JONES v. Being unaware of the defect, which could only be detected by an expert examination, the tenant had given no notice to the landlord with regard to it. In an action by the tenant claiming damages for a breach of the undertaking by the landlord implied by sect. 15 of the Act to keep the house in all respects reasonably fit for human habitation, the county ct. judge gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: the absence of notice to the landlord of the latent defect in the ceiling did not preclude the tenant from recovering.

SUB-SECT. 2.—UNDER COVENANT.

A. Nature of Covenant.

Runs with the reversion.]—See Sect. 1, ante.

B. Construction of Covenant.

4570. General rule—Same construction as lessee’s covenants.]—(1) A covenant by a lessor to keep the outside walls of the demised premises in repair will be construed as a covenant to repair on notice, & there can be no breach of such a covenant until the lessor has notice of want of repair.

(2) The principle of construction that under a covenant to repair, the covenantor need not renew a building worn out by age or decaying from faulty construction applies to the case of a lessor as well as to the case of a lessee who has entered into such a covenant; & for the purpose of construing such a covenant there is in this respect no distinction between the two cases.

In 1890 the three upper storeys of a house in London were demised to the lessee for a term of eighteen years from Mar. 25, 1890, at a rent of £150. The lessor covenanted to keep the outside of the demised premises in good & substantial repair. The lessee covenanted to keep the inside in repair, to permit the lessor to enter & view the state of repair, & to use the premises for the business of a private hotel-keeper. In 1905 pltf. was the assignee of this lease, & deft. was the owner of the reversion. On July 13, 1905, the London County Council served on the premises a notice requiring the owner to take down the front & back walls of the house as being dangerous structures. Pltf. at once communicated this notice to deft. & required him to repair the walls. Deft. did nothing, & the London County Council themselves took down the walls from the first floor upwards, propped up the floors with timber, & left the place uninhabitable. Pltf. brought this action against deft. for breach of the covenant to keep the outside in repair. Deft. had no notice before July 13, 1905, of any want of repair. At that date the house, which was about 200 years old, had by the natural effect of time become so worn out & decayed that it was impossible to repair it except by taking it down & rebuilding:—Held: there had been no breach of the lessor’s covenant to repair.—TORRENS v. WALKER, [1906] 2 Ch. 166; 75 L. J. Ch. 645; 95 L. T. 409; 54 W. R. 584.

4577. To put in good tenable repair—No obligation to repair for special purpose.]—Deft., in Nov. 1865, agreed in writing with plffs. as follows, “I hereby agree to let to you, for the term of five years, the whole of the warehouse & cellars, now occupied by P. & co., for the annual rent of £600, the building to be put by me into good tenable repair.” Repairs were, thereupon, done by deft., who knew that the premises were to be used by plffs. in their business of silk & linen merchants & warehousemen; & in Jan. 1866, plffs., who had previously inspected the premises, entered into possession, making no complaint of their condition or want of repair. The building had originally been a dwelling-house, & had been converted into a warehouse by the addition of two storeys, without strengthening the outer wall, which was only fourteen inches thick, & as a warehouse it had been occupied by P. & co. By reason of the insufficient thickness of the outer wall, & the weight of the linen stored by plffs. on the premises, the outer wall began to give way some time between Mar. & June, & in Oct. 1866, a portion of it fell, rendering it necessary to pull down & rebuild the whole wall, which was done by deft., plffs. being for sometime deprived of the use of the premises, & otherwise sustaining damage thereby. In an action by plffs. to recover damages from deft. for an alleged breach of agreement to put the premises into “good tenable repair”:—Held: deft.’s contract was clearly performed at the time plffs. took possession of the premises, & made no complaint of their state of repair: there was no contract on his part to put them into good tenable repair for any particular or specified purpose; & if plffs. required any extra support for their goods, they should have called deft.’s attention thereto whilst the repairs were going on.—MCCLURE v. C. Notice to Repair.

4581. General rule—Necessity for notice.]—

(1) If plff. declares on a general covenant to repair a messuage, & assigns a breach, per quod he was put to expense, it is sufficient for a tenant to plead performance as to all except as to the repairs of a party wall, & that those repairs were rendered necessary, & were done under Fire Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), & did not become necessary by deft.’s default, & that deft. was not the owner of the improved rent. If plff. is possessed of any facts to charge deft. with a proportion of the repairs, he ought to reply them.

(2) The lessor may charge the lessee without notice; for the lessor is not on the spot to see the repairs wanting: the lessee is; & therefore the lessee cannot charge the lessor for breach of repairs without notice, for the lessor may not know that repairs are necessary (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—MOORE v. 4588. ——— Personal knowledge of tenant.]

—The implied obligation of a tenant of premises which the landlord has covenanted to keep in repair to give notice to the landlord of the want of repair of the premises before bringing an action against him for damages for breach of the covenant springs from the special knowledge which the tenant's occupancy of the premises is presumed to give him, coupled with the state of ignorance in which the absence of such occupancy is presumed to leave the landlord. Semble : no such implication arises in the case of a covenant by the landlord to keep in repair a sea wall erected by him for the common protection of a number of holdings.

Pltfs. were judicial tenants to deft. of adjoining holdings situated near the sea coast of Kerry. Deft., during the currency of these tenancies, erected a sea wall for the protection of the holdings from the incursions of the sea & employed a local agent to look after the wall. On the revision in 1916 of pltfs.' rents for a new statutory term the order of the chief comr., in the case of each tenant, was made on the basis that the landlord kept the wall in repair as theretofore. In Sept. 1918, the sea wall was damaged by high tides, with the result that pltfs.' holdings were flooded, & separate actions, which were tried together, were brought against the landlord to recover damages in respect of such floodings. No notice of any want of repair of the sea wall had been given either to the landlord or to his agent:—Held : (1) the acceptance by deft. of the enhanced rent on the basis of the condition imposed by the Land Commission was evidence of an agreement to be bound by the condition, whether that condition was authorised or not; (2) in the circumstances of the case notice to deft. of the want of repair of the sea wall was not a condition precedent to the maintenance of the actions.—MURPHY v. HURLY, [1922] 1 A. C. 369; 91 L. J. P. C. 116; 127 L. T. 49; 38 T. L. R. 386; 66 Sol. Jo. 314, H. L.

D. Breach of Covenant.

(a) In General.

4592. Defence to breach of covenant—Interference by lessee.—A covenant to repair a house, deft. would not suffer it, & demurred, but ordered to answer.

Pltf.'s bill was, that he leased a house to deft., & did covenant to build & repair it before a day, which being at hand, & showed that he had prepared timber & workmen to perform same; but deft., as well to have him break his covenant, as to free himself from his covenant to keep it in reparations, did interrupt & threaten the workmen, whereby they durst not proceed to repair, & so the houses were decayed, & pltf. had no remedy to force deft. to suffer him to repair: deft. demurred upon the bill, alleging pltf. had sufficient remedy by law, which kind of answer this ct. allowed not; therefore a subpoena is awarded against deft. to answer.—WOOD v. TIRRELL (1577), Cary, 59; 21 E. R. 32.

4593. ——— Prior determination of tenancy by lessee—Under option to determine.—In a lease of premises for a term of twenty-one years determinable by the lessee at the end of the first four years by a six months' notice, the lessor covenanted to rebuild the premises after the expiration of the first four years of the term upon a six months' notice from the lessee requiring him to do so. Before the expiration of the first four years of the term the lessor on many occasions told the lessee that he would be unable to procure the money for rebuilding the premises. The lessee in consequence of this statement by the lessor gave the requisite notice under the provisions of the lease to determine the term at the end of the first four years. After the determination of the lease he continued to occupy the premises for some months, paying rent to the lessor's mtgees., on the chance, as he stated, of the lessor's procuring the money to rebuild. The lessor being, however, unable to rebuild the premises, the lessee claimed damages against him for breach of the contract to do so:—Held : the covenant to rebuild never having been actually broken, because the lessee had before the time for its performance determined the term, he could not recover unless there had been a breach of contract by anticipation within the doctrine of Hochster v. De la Tour (1853), 2 E. & B. 678, & Frost v. Knight (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 111, by reason of a wrongful repudiation of his covenant by the lessor before the time for performance; what had been said by the lessor did not under the circumstances of the case amount to such a repudiation; & if it did, such repudiation before the time of performance arrived would not amount to a breach of the contract, unless the lessee elected to treat it as putting an end to the contract except for the purposes of an action for such breach, & the lessee had not under the circumstances so elected; & he could not therefore maintain his claim. Qu. : whether the doctrine of Hochster v. De la Tour (1853), 2 E. & B. 678, can be applicable to the case of a lease or other contract containing various stipulations where the whole contract cannot be treated as put an end to upon the wrongful repudiation of one of the stipulations of the contract by the promisor.—JOHNSTONE v.

of the want of repair does not apply where a landlord has let his land to a tenant for grazing purposes & cove-nanted to keep the fences in repair & look after the stock, & the landlord resides near the land & the tenant at

4599. — Time for bringing—Repudiation by lessor of liability.]—(1) A covenant by a lessor to repair the external parts of the demised messuage comprises the boundary walls of it, though they adjoin other buildings. At all events the lessor is liable under it to compensate the lessee for the damage arising from non-repair of such a wall, which arises after the adjoining building has been pulled down, though the damage be a consequence of such pulling down, he having made no attempt to prevent the damage arising from the further sinking of the wall, & though the adjoining building was pulled down in execution of powers given by an Act of Parliament, which contained a clause for the compensation of persons sustaining damage by the exercise of them. Qu.: whether in such a case an action will lie against the lessor before a reasonable time has elapsed for the restoration of the wall by him, & held that, even if so, an action would be maintainable before such reasonable time had elapsed, he having, on application, contested his liability to do repairs, & given an unqualified refusal to do them.

(2) In such an action, the lessee, after such refusal, having rebuilt an external wall, is entitled to recover the cost thereof, the jury having found that this was the proper mode of restoring it. He may also recover the price of damage done to plate glass & fixtures in consequence of the sinking of the wall.

(3) But the lessee cannot recover the rent paid by him for the occupation of other premises, during the progress of the repairs, though during that time the demised premises were not safely habitable.—GREEN v. EALES (1841), 2 Q. B. 225; 1 Gal. & Dav. 468; 11 L. J. Q. B. 63; 6 Jur. 436; 114 E. R. 88.

4600. — Tenant holding under agreement for lease—Subject to conditions therein stated.]—Deft., by agreement under seal, agreed to grant a lease of certain premises to pltf., which lease was to contain a covenant that he (deft.) would paint the outside of the premises once in every three years, & it was agreed that in the meantime, until the lease should be granted, pltf. should be tenant from year to year, "subject to the terms & conditions thereinbefore specified." In an action for breach of this agreement, the declaration treated it as containing an express covenant to paint once in three years:—Held: it was no variance.—PRICE v. BIRCH (1842), 4 Man. & G. 1; 1 Dowl. N. S. 720; 11 L. J. C. P. 193; 6 Jur. 265; 134 E. R. 1.

4601. — On parol agreement—Subsequent written agreement silent as to repair.]—An action may be maintained by a tenant against his landlord upon a parol agreement by the landlord to put a house in tenantable repair, although a written agreement for a lease made shortly afterwards is silent as to the terms of such parol agreement.

N. verbally agreed with M. upon Sept. 13 to put a house of N. in tenantable repair, if M. would become tenant thereof. An agreement for a lease made on Sept. 17 set out the terms of the tenancy, but was silent as to the terms of the verbal agreement of Sept. 13. An action having been brought by M. upon the verbal agreement, the jury found for pltf.:—Held: the verbal agreement sued on & the written agreement for a lease were independent agreements, & rule to set aside the verdict for misreception of evidence refused.—MANN v. In an action for damages:—Held: (1) the omission to complete the works was a continuous breach of contract after the fixed date, & the stipulated daily sum was not a penalty, but was recoverable down to the date of action as liquidated damages; (2) as the contract had been in effect abandoned, further damages down to the date of judgment were on the evidence rightly assessed as within the contemplation of both parties.—DE SOYSA v. DE PLESS POL, [1912] A. 4607. Difference between actual value & value if properly repaired—Computed from notice to repair to assessment of damages.]—The landlord of a dwelling-house subject to the Rent Restrictions Acts had covenanted to "keep the cottage dry & the outside in repair." The cottage was one hundred & fifty years old, without any damp courses, & in a bad state of repair, the cost of the repairs would be about £600, & the tenant's furniture was injured by the damp. The tenant, after receiving a valid notice to quit, remained in possession as a statutory tenant & requested the landlord to comply with his covenant, but the latter repudiated liability. In a claim by the tenant against the landlord for damages for breach of the covenant:—Held: (1) the measure of damages was the difference in value to the tenant of the house during the period from the date of the request to the assessment of damages between the house in its unrepaired condition & the house in the condition in which it would be if the landlord, on receipt of the notice to repair, had fulfilled his obligation; (2) the damage to the tenant's furniture during the aforesaid period caused by the landlord's default in repairing. Both items would be subject to the extent of the landlord's obligation, having regard to the age & structure of the premises; (3) the fact that it was inconvenient or unprofitable to the landlord to fulfil his obligation should not be considered.—HEWITT v. ROWLANDS (1924), 93 L. 4610. —.]—In an action by a landlord against his tenant for non-repair & waste, the first count of the declaration stated an agreement of demise of a messuage & premises, & assigned as the only breach, the non-repair of the windows & premises. The second count stated, that deft. became tenant; o pltf. of a certain other messuage & premises on the terms of using the last-mentioned messuage & premises in a tenantable manner, & assigned as breaches the cutting down of shrubs & the removal of turf & flowers. It appeared that the only agreement of demise was that stated in the first count: pltf. proved the breaches under both counts, & obtained a verdict on both:—Held: pltf. could not retain the verdict on both counts; & the agreement to use the premises in a tenant-like manner, being implied by law from the relation of landlord & tenant, ought not to have been stated as a separate contract, but might have been alleged as part of the contract in the first count.—HOLFORD v. DUNNETT (1841), 7 M. & W. 348; 11. & W. 67; 10 L. The new building was not erected, nor the old warehouse repaired, on Apr. 1, but no objection was made by the intended lessees, who then occupied part of the premises under a former agreement, & shortly afterwards the whole premises were destroyed by fire. Upon a bill filed by the landlord, for specific performance of the agreement, & for debts. to rebuild the premises, & to accept a lease:—Held: in such circumstances it was a condition precedent that the premises should be put in repair before the lease was granted, & as the landlord had not performed his engagement within the time limited, the contract could not be enforced in equity, & the bill dismissed.—COUNTER v. In an action by the lessor for not repairing:—Held: the lessee's covenant to repair was absolute: & the words "having or taking," etc., "without committing," etc., did not amount to a condition precedent that there should be a sufficient supply of that kind of timber on the premises; but only to a licence to the tenant to take it, if it were there, for repairs, even if made necessary by his own default, without being liable for waste.—BRISTOL (DEAN & CHAPTER) v. 4638. — Material to be provided on notice.—The tenant agreed to keep the buildings in good repair. The landlord, by a subsequent clause, agreed, on notice from the tenant, to find materials for repairs, the tenant doing the drawing & labour. A barn requiring repair the tenant gave the landlord notice to find materials, which he failed to do for more than the allowed period. The barn remained out of repair, in consequence of which a storm damaged the roof, & the rain entered & damaged the tenant's corn:—Held: the tenant was not entitled to damages for the injury done to his corn, for that his obligation to repair was not conditional on the landlord finding materials, & the damage arose from his own failure to carry out his part of the contract, & he ought to have repaired, & claimed the cost of the materials from the landlord.—TUCKER v. LINGER (1882), 21 Ch. D. 18; 51 L. J. Ch. 713; 46 L. T. 894; 30 W. R. 578, C. A.; affd. on other grounds (1883), 8 App. Cas. 508, H. L.

of twenty-one years. The lease contained, among the covenants by the lessee, the following covenant: " & also will from time to time during the term at his own cost (being allowed all necessary materials for this purpose (to be previously approved in writing by the lessors) & carting such materials free of cost a distance not exceeding five miles from the farm) when & so often as need shall require well & substantially repair & maintain . . . the farm house, stable, land & premises . . . with all manner of needful & necessary reparations . . . (damage by accidental fire excepted)". Towards the end of the deed there were certain covenants by the lessor. The deed contained a power to the lessor at any time to resume possession of & determine the tenancy as to any portion of the demised premises in the event of his selling or letting same for any purpose, with certain exceptions, on giving three months' notice, allowing a proportionate abatement of rent, provided that if more than twenty-six acres were taken the lessee might on giving notice determine the lease. The deed also gave the lessor power to determine the lease at the end of the first seven or fourteen years with a view to selling or letting the land for any purpose, with certain exceptions; & it gave the lessee an unfettered power to determine the lease at the same periods; in each case on giving twelve months' notice:—Held: the clause above set out within brackets, when read in conjunction with the rest of the deed, was a qualification of the lessee's covenant to repair, & not a covenant by the lessor to supply the materials necessary for the repairs.

(2) Whether the clause is intended to be a covenant by the lessor or a qualification of the lessee's covenant depends in each case upon the provisions of the lease as a whole. A clause may be both a covenant & a qualification:—Held: evidence of a custom that "the landlord provides the tenant with materials necessary for the proper repair & maintenance of the demised premises, lands, & hereditaments, & the tenant repairs & maintains same with such materials & provides the necessary cartage," was inadmissible inasmuch as it would be inconsistent with the terms of the lease, which dealt with this subject in a particular manner.—WESTACOTT v. HAHN, [1918] 1 K. B. 495; 87 L. J. K. B. 555; 118 L. T. 615; 34 T. L. R. 257; 62 Sol. Jo. 348, C. A.

B. was let into possession, & paid rent for some years but no lease was granted, & ultimately he filed a bill for specific performance, & an account of & payment for materials. A. objected that B. had committed breaches of covenant which would have entitled A. to determine the lease. The Ct. being of opinion that it was doubtful whether A. could, in the circumstances of the case, have determined the lease for breaches of covenant, decreed specific performance, but ordered the lease to be ante-dated, so that the question might be tried at law:—Held: though the claim for materials might be a mere money demand, yet as the Ct. decreed specific performance of the main part of the agreement, it had jurisdiction to give relief in respect of this claim also.—LILLIE v. LEIGH (1858), 3 De G. & J. 204; 44 E. R. 1247, L. J.J.

Breach, that deft. did not expend £100 on substantial improvements & additions to the dwelling-house, under the direction or with the approbation of a competent surveyor, to be named by & on the part of pltf., but neglected & refused so to do, although pltf. was always ready & willing to appoint a competent surveyor to approve of such substantial improvements & additions :—Held : the breach was bad, for that the appointment of a surveyor was a condition precedent to deft.'s liability to expend the £100.—*COOMBE v. "into the demised premises or any part thereof in the name of the whole, & repossess, retain, & enjoy same as of his former estate." By indenture of July 30, 1852, between E. of the one part, & pltf. of the other part, after reciting an indenture of lease of Feb. 18, 1852, whereby S. demised to E. certain land, including the land in question, for ninety-nine years, & that E. had made underleases, E. assigned to pltf. the leasehold premises, "& all the estate right, title, & interest of him the said E. in, to, or out of the premises," for the residue of the term of years granted by the aforesaid indenture of lease; subject, nevertheless, to the underleases therein-before referred to. 4646. ———.]—In 1807 a lease was granted to F., containing a general covenant to repair, a covenant to repair within three months after notice, & a proviso for re-entry for breach. Pltfs., the assignees of the lessee, in 1868 granted an underlease to deft. with similar covenants, except that the notice was to be a two months' notice. In Sept. 1872, the premises being out of repair, the reversioner served on the premises a notice to repair pursuant to the terms of the lease of 1807. Deft. not having complied with this, pltfs., on Mar. 20, 1873, served him with a notice "to repair the premises in accordance with the terms of his lease"; & being threatened by the reversioner with proceedings to enforce a forfeiture, they entered & did the required repairs themselves, & before the expiration of two months after their notice brought an action against deft. upon the covenants in his lease :—Held : they were not entitled to recover substantial damages on the general covenant, the premises not being out of repair at the commencement of the action; nor could they sue on the special covenant, the action being brought too soon, as deft., being no party to the lease of 1807, was not bound by the earlier notice of Sept. 1872.—*WILLIAMS v. B. granted an underlease of the field to one C., who granted other underleases to several persons, who erected houses in the field:—Held: the covenant to repair contained in the lease to B. did not extend to the houses erected during the term in the field.

Where there is a general covenant to repair & keep & leave in repair, the proper inference from that is that the party undertakes to repair newly erected buildings; on the other hand, where there is a particular covenant to repair demised buildings, then no such liability arises (CHANNEL, B.).

(2) I think that if an addition had been made to an old house, by putting up a lean-to, a barn, or a stable, it would have been part of the house within the meaning of the covenant; but I cannot see that the covenant applies to that which is a separate, new & independent dwelling-house (BRAMWELL, B.).—*CORNISH v. The lessee built six houses, as to which it was impossible to say which two were actually completed first; but the judge came to the conclusion on the evidence that the six were built simultaneously & finished at the same time:—Held: the covenant to repair extended not only to the two houses which the lessee covenanted to build but to all the six houses.

During the currency of the term, however, the various assignees of it from time to time built houses upon the land, so that at the expiration of the term in 1877, not only the site of the original messuage & garden, but also the one-acre field lying behind, was covered with numerous small houses, all of which were at that date out of repair, & a large number of them in a state of ruinous dilapidation. Defts. during the time the term was vested in them erected no buildings. Pltfs., as reversioners, sued defts., as assignees of the term, for damages in respect of all the buildings on the demised land, defts. contending that they were only liable in respect of the buildings erected on the first-mentioned piece or parcel of land, the site of the original messuage & garden:—Held: the covenant to repair extended to the whole of the demised land & the buildings thereon erected, & defts. were therefore liable to the full extent of pltf.'s claim.—*HUDSON v. process," consisting of pyrites burners, four reaction chambers, & two so-called "towers" usually known as a "Glover tower" & "Gay-Lussac tower." The "towers" & the three chambers were so erected before the 1868 lease, but the fourth chamber was put up between 1868 & 1910. Three of the chambers were of great size, approximately one hundred & forty feet long, twenty feet wide, & fourteen feet high, & each consisted of a rectangular leaden vessel supported by & enclosed in a substantial wooden framework, the lowest part of which consisted of a series of beams resting mainly on but not fixed to stone walls & pillars, except in the case of one chamber, which rested almost entirely on unfixed iron columns. The fourth chamber was really an open tank standing on a wooden platform upon beams themselves rested on the stone walls & pillars. Each of the "towers" was in effect an upright "chamber" enclosed in a wooden framework & supported by four wooden posts having iron "shoes" & resting by their own weight on a necessary foundation. In 1916 a fire occurred on the premises, & shortly afterwards deft. co. determined their lease & removed all that was left of the materials of the chambers & towers. In an action by the lessor for damages for breach of the covenants in the 1912 lease:—Held: the chambers & the towers must, having regard to all the circumstances, be regarded as integral portions of one composite building permanently annexed to the freehold, & not as chattels or as tenant's fixtures, & they were within the express terms of the covenant in the 1912 lease to repair & yield up.—*POLE-CAREW v. 4677. Reasonable fitness for occupation required—"Habitable repair."—The term "habitable repair" means a state of repair reasonably fit for the occupation of an inhabitant. Where a tenant takes premises which are out of repair, & agrees "to put the premises into habitable repair," this implies that he is to put them into a better state than that in which he found them; & regard being had to the state of the premises at the time of the agreement, & of their situation, & to the class of persons likely to inhabit them, he is to put them into a condition fit for a tenant to inhabit.

A covenant by a lessee, "to put premises into habitable repair," binds him to put them into such a state that they may be occupied, not only with safety, but with reasonable comfort, for the purposes for which they are taken.—BELCHER v. M'INTOSH (1839), 8 C. & P. 720; 2 Mood. & R. 186, N. P.

By the covenant deft. was bound to do all that was necessary to leave the house in a good condition, with reference to the obligation of a tenant. As to that, you must consider the character & condition of the house; thus, if he takes an old house, he must not let it tumble down, he must keep it up; but only as an old house. No tenant is bound to leave for his landlord a new house; but the house which he took, in a state of fit repair, as such house. If he has painted the outside in three years, & the inside within seven years, he is not bound to do it again when leaving, unless so far as is required by actual dilapidations or destruction of the paint; & so of other repairs. He may if he likes, have the benefit of his repairs, so as he leaves the premises in a fit state, reasonable wear & tear excepted. If he painted & papered within seven years, & there is no damage in the way of breaking down or tearing off, then the reasonable construction of the covenant is, that he should "cleanse" the old paint, etc., or renew it only where destroyed, & give up the house in a clean & fair condition, & for fair wear & tear he would not be liable. You may show their general condition to show the sort of repair sufficient to satisfy the covenant, but their being ruinous would be no answer to a covenant to keep them up in repair, which, even if they fell down, would compel you to rebuild them as nearly as might be in the same state, so as it was a tenantable state, in which they were when demised. The plea of payment into ct. admits the pulling down & the actual conversion of the materials, & the only question is as to the value of the cottages as they stood, & put in as good a state of repair as the covenant required (WILLES, J.).—*WOOLCOCK v. piers, pillars, supports, & roof forming part of the same. The substructure had been excavated & the supports for the roof constructed upon a standard of efficiency to the satisfaction of referees appointed on behalf of the lessors & lessees, in pursuance of an agreement of 1862. There was evidence that some of the iron girders supporting the roof & superstructure had become corroded & weakened, & in 1907 notice to repair according to the covenant was given to the lessees:—Held: upon the true construction of the lease, the lessors were entitled to require the lessees to maintain the demised premises at a standard of strength & stability corresponding with that originally fixed, & not merely in such a condition as would secure the absolute safety of the superstructure.—*Re LONDON CORPN., LONDON CORPN. v. 4700. ——[Pltfs. granted to defts. a lease of a house in Lambeth, containing a covenant by the lessees that they would "when & where & as often as occasion shall require, well, sufficiently, & substantially, repair, uphold, sustain, maintain, amend & keep" the demised premises, & the same "so well & substantially repaired, upheld, sustained, maintained, amended & kept," at the end of the term yield up to the lessors. Before the end of the term one of the walls of the house was bulging out, & after the end of the term the house was condemned by the district surveyor as a dangerous structure & was pulled down. Pltfs. sought to recover from defts. the cost of rebuilding the house. The evidence showed that the foundation of the house was a timber platform, which rested on a boggy or muddy soil. The bulging of the wall was caused by the rotting of the timber. The house was at least 100 years old, & possibly much older. The solid gravel was seventeen feet below the surface of the mud. There was evidence that the wall might have been repaired during the term by means of underpinning:—Held: the defect having been caused by the natural operation of time & the elements upon a house the original construction of which was faulty, the defts. were not under their covenant liable to make it good.—*LISTER v. 4707. ——(1) Under an agreement to keep a house in "good tenantable repair," & so leave the same at the expiration of the term, the tenant's obligation is to put & keep the premises in such repair as, having regard to the age, character, & locality of the house, would make it reasonably fit for the occupation of a tenant of the class who would be likely to take it.

(2) A tenant who agrees to "keep" premises in good tenantable repair is not excused from doing so by reason that the premises were not in good tenantable repair at the time of the demise. He must in that case put the premises in good tenantable repair.

(3) If the paint is in such a state that the woodwork will decay unless it is repainted, it is obvious that the tenant must repaint. But I think that his obligation goes further than that. A house in Spitalfields is now painted in the same way as one in Grosvenor Square. If the tenant leaves a house in Grosvenor Square with painting only good enough for a house in Spitalfields, he has not discharged his obligation. He must paint it in such a way as would satisfy a reasonable tenant taking a house in Grosvenor Square (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(4) As to the floor, it may have been rotten when the tenancy began. If it was in such a state when the tenancy began that no reasonable man would take the house with a floor in that state, then the tenant's obligation is to put the floor into tenantable repair. The question is, what is the state of the floor when the tenant is called upon to fulfil his covenant? If it has become perfectly rotten he must put down a new floor, but if he can make it good in the sense in which I have spoken of all other things—the paper, the paint, & the white-washing—he is not bound to put down a new floor. He may satisfy his obligation under the covenant by repairing it (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—PROUDFOOT v. HART (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 42; 59 L. J. Q. B. 389; 63 L. T. 171; 55 J. P. 20; 38 W. R. 730; 6 T. L. 4710. ———.]—A lease of three newly erected houses made in 1825 for a term of ninety-five years contained a covenant by the lessee in very wide terms, the effect of which was, put shortly, that he would during the term well & sufficiently repair the premises with all manner of necessary reparations & would yield up at the end of the term the said premises so being in all things well & sufficient repaired. At the end of the term the assignee of the reversion brought an action against the assignees of the lease for breach of the above covenant. By an order of the ct. the assessment of the damages was referred to an arbitrator. At the beginning of the term the houses were country houses; at the end of the term the only tenants likely to occupy the houses or parts of them would be tenants on short terms. The arbitrator assessed the damages at two alternative sums. He computed the smaller sum on the basis that defts. were liable to execute such repairs only as in view of the age, character, & locality of the premises would make them reasonably fit to satisfy the requirements of reasonably minded tenants of the class that would then be likely to occupy them. He found that tenants of this class would require only such repairs as would keep out wind & water:—Held: this was not the proper measure of liability; but defts. were liable for the cost of doing all necessary acts well & sufficiently to repair the premises in the words of the covenant, that is to say, for the cost of putting them into that state of repair in which they would be found if they had been managed by a reasonably minded owner, having regard to their age, & to their character & ordinary uses, or the requirements of tenants of the class likely to take them, at the time of the demise or at the commencement of the term.

I do not think there is any substantial difference in construction between "repair," which must mean "repair reasonably or properly" & "keep in good repair" or "sufficient repair" or "tenantable repair." . . . An improvement of its tenants or its neighbourhood will not increase the standard of repair, nor will their deterioration lower that standard (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—*ANSTRUTHER-GOUGH-CALTHORPE v. 4735. —.]—A covenant to contribute a proportionate part of the expenses of repairing & maintaining a road until undertaken by the local authority, does not extend to contributing a proportion of the expense of an entire reconstruction of the road. In construing such a covenant regard must be had to the standard of the condition of the road at the time when the covenant was entered into, & the obligation is to contribute a proportionate part of the expense of putting it into a state of repair corresponding to the standard contemplated or existing at that time. Where the road is reconstructed for the purpose of its being taken over by the local authority, the covenantor is liable to contribute a proportionate part of such expenses as would have been incurred in putting it into that state of repair, but is not liable to contribute to the expenses of such work as amounts to reconstruction.—SCOTT v. 4737. Extent of exception—Lease of printing works with plant—Application to plant only.]—

(1) By an indenture of lease made in 1851, H. demised to one C. certain print-works & premises, with the steam-engines, boilers, etc., belonging thereto, the lessee covenanting to keep the premises in good & tenantable repair, "the main walls, roofs, slates, principal timbers, & the outside parts of the buildings, etc., & accidents by fire, lightning, etc., & the steam-engines, boilers, water-wheels & first motion therefrom respectively, by the fair & reasonable wear & usage thereof, only excepted," he, H. having first put the premises into good & tenantable repair, pursuant to the covenant thereinafter entered into by him; & the lessor covenanted with the lessee that he, his heirs, etc., would forthwith put the premises into good & tenantable repair, & would during the term keep & maintain "the whole of the main walls, roofs, slates, & principal timbers of the premises, & the steam-engines, water-wheels, & first motion therefrom, by the fair & reasonable wear & usage thereof, in good & tenantable repair," etc. In an action by the assignees of the lessee, who had become bkpt., against deft., as exor. of J., who was assignee of the reversion of H., the lessor, the first count of the declaration assigned two breaches, first, the lessor having omitted to do so, that J. after he became assignee did not put the demised premises, or any part thereof, into good & tenantable repair, secondly, that J., whilst such assignee, did not keep & maintain the main walls, roofs, slates, & principal timbers of the premises, & the steam-engines, etc., by the fair & reasonable wear & usage thereof, in good repair, etc. Deft. pleaded to the first breach, fifthly, that J. became assignee of the reversion by reason of the death of H.; that, in the lifetime of H., & before J. became such assignee, a reasonable time had elapsed, & all things had happened to entitle the lessee to have the covenant to put the premises into repair performed by the lessor; & that the covenant was wholly broken before J. became such assignee, sixthly, repeating the last plea; & further, that, after the death of H., the lessee sued J. & one R., as exors. of H., for the breach of covenant by H., & recovered by an award £1,080 2s. as damages in respect of that & the second breach of covenant, & that the award was a valid & binding award, & that the sum awarded, with costs, had been paid to G. before his bkpcy. —Held: the fifth & sixth pleas were a good answer to the first breach,

r. Extent of exception—Not to inasmuch as there could only be one breach of the covenant to put the premises into repair, & that had occurred in the lifetime of H.

(2) To the second breach, eighthly, that G. sued J. & recovered damages against him for a breach of the same covenant, & that the want of repair complained of in the same breach was only a continuance of the want of repair in respect of which such damages were awarded, ninthly, for defence on equitable grounds, a repetition of the allegations in the sixth & eighth pleas: & further, that G. did not expend the sum so recovered in putting the premises into repair, & that if he had done so, the want of repair complained of in the second breach would not have occurred:—Held: the eighth & ninth pleas were no answer, as this was a continuing breach, & the former recovery was no bar, even upon equitable grounds, but only matter in mitigation of damages.

(3) Deft. further pleaded to the second breach, tenthly, that such breach was caused by the default of G. in not keeping the demised premises, the main walls, etc., & the steam-engines, etc., excepted, in repair according to his covenant. Replication, that the demised premises never were put into repair pursuant to the lessor's covenant:—Held: the covenant by the lessor to put the premises into repair was a condition precedent, & therefore the replication was an answer to the plea.

(4) Eleventh plea, to the second breach, that the want of repair complained of was not occasioned by fair & reasonable wear & usage:—Held: the plea was bad, as the words in the covenant, "by the fair & reasonable wear & usages thereof," applied only to the "steam-engines, boilers, water-wheels, & first motion therefrom."

(5) Twelfth plea, to both breaches, that J. had no notice of the want of repair:—Held: want of notice was no answer, at all events, to the first breach.—COWARD v. GREGORY (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 153; 36 L. J. C. P. 1; 15 L. T. 279; 12 Jur. N. S. 1000; 15 W. R. 170.

There was no covenant to repair during the term. At the expiration of the term the lessor claimed for dilapidations, including sums for painting the outside woodwork of the house, for repointing brickwork, & for repairing parts of the kitchen floor which had become affected by dry rot:—Held: the lessee was not liable for these three items; the words "reasonable wear & tear" excluded dilapidations for wear & tear.—In an action by landlord against tenant for breach of a covenant contained in an informal lease of a house & land, whereby the tenant, who was to receive the premises "in the best condition," undertook "to give up the house in the same condition & repairs":—Held: in computing the damages for the breach, an allowance should be made for ordinary wear & tear; there was no warrant for reading an exception into the undertaking.

(2) A covenant by a lessee, that he will, during the term, repair, uphold, support, sustain, & maintain the brick walls to the demised premises belonging, is broken, if the lessee, during the term, pull down a brick wall which divides the court yard at the front of the house from another yard at the side of the house.—*DOE d. 4774. ——— Conversion of premises—House converted to shop.—A private dwelling-house was demised for forty years, by lease, containing a covenant to repair & keep in repair the premises, & all such buildings, improvements, & additions as should be made thereupon by the lessee during the term, with a proviso for re-entry in case of breach of covenant. The lessee changed the lower windows into shop windows, & stopped up a doorway, making a new one in a different place, in the internal partition of the house:—Held: no forfeiture was incurred, the lessee's covenant being only against non-repair, & it being implied, by the terms of the lease, that additions & improvements were to be made.—DOE d. DALTON v. JONES (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 126; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 6; 2 L. J. K. B. 11; 110 E. R. 403.

4775. ——— Chapel converted to theatre—Sum deposited to secure reconversion at end of term.—A piece of ground & the chapel then erected thereon were demised for a term of ninety-nine years less ten days from Christmas, 1842, & the lease contained covenants by the lessees to complete the chapel by a given date & to repair, maintain, & keep the chapel & the walls, fences,

& other appurtenances thereto belonging in good & substantial repair. The chapel was completed & was separated from the adjoining street by some iron railings, but it did not appear when these railings were erected. It was used as a place of religious worship for sixty years. The lease was then sold with the consent of the Charity Comrs. & the premises were adapted for a cinematograph theatre. For this purpose the purchasers removed the iron railings, opened a new door in the west wall of the building, & made various alterations in the interior. The vendor had neglected to comply with a notice to repair & the reversioner was entitled to possession under a proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant, subject to a claim by the purchasers for relief against forfeiture. The purchasers offered, as the conditions of obtaining relief, to deposit a sum of money to secure the restoration of the premises to their original condition at the end of the lease, & also to erect & maintain a movable fence of posts & chains in the line of the old fence in order to exclude the public from the premises:—Held: in view of the fact that the lease did not prohibit the contemplated user of the premises, none of the alterations, in the circumstances, constituted either a breach of covenant or waste, & relief ought to be granted on the terms proposed.—HYMAN v. ROSE, [1912] A. C. 623; 81 L. J. K. B. 1062; 106 L. T. 907; 28 T. L. R. 432; 56 Sol. Jo. 535, H. L.; reversg. S. C. sub nom. ROSE v. SPICER, ROSE v. HYMAN, [1911] 2 K. B. 234, C. A.

4788. ———.]—B., being owner of land for a term of sixty-one years, granted to S. an annuity for lives, & for securing it, assigned it, wanting one day, to R. By indenture, reciting the above facts, R., at the request of S. & B., did demise & lease, & B. did grant, demise, lease, ratify & confirm, to O., the land of thirty-one years, ending some years before the term first mentioned, at a rent payable to S. while the land should remain subject to the annuity, & afterwards to B.; & O., for herself, her heirs, exors. & administrators, covenanted to & with S. & R. & their respective exors., administrators & assigns, & also to & with B., his exors., administrators & assigns, that she, O., her exors., administrators & assigns, would pay the rent to R., while the premises should remain subject to the annuity, & afterwards to B.: & that she, her exors., administrators or assigns, would perform certain repairs, & would surrender at the end of the thirty-one years to B. in good repair; & B., alone, covenanted for quiet enjoyment. There was also a covenant by O., with R., & B., to repair after certain notice:—Held: after the death of S., B. & R. might join in an action against the assignees of O. for breach of the first mentioned covenant to repair, the covenant being with S., B. & R. jointly, & running with the land.

A covenant to repair clearly runs with the land, & there is privity of estate between deft. & one of pltf. (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—WAKEFIELD v. BROWN (1846), 9 Q. B. 209; 15 L. J. Q. B. 373; 7 L. T. O. S. 450; 10 Jur. 853; 115 E. R. 1254.

Lease by owner of equitable estate—Assignment since lease granted.]—Declaration in covenant by A., the surviving lessor in a lease for years granted by A., B., & C., to deft., on a covenant to repair & leave in repair, assigning breaches in not repairing, & in not leaving in repair at the end of the term. Plea, that A., B., & C., from the time of making the demise until the death of B., & A. & C. afterwards, had a reversion for a longer term of years, expectant on the lease, & that after B.'s death, & before any breach of covenant, A. & C. assigned such reversion to D., & thenceforward ceased to have any reversion or interest in the demised premises. Replication, that A., B., & C. were not until the death of B., nor were A. & C. afterwards, possessed of the said reversion in the demised premises, in manner & form as alleged in the plea:—Held: bad, as being a departure from the declaration.—*GREEN v. The lease was executed by pltf., but not by Y., & deft. entered into & held possession of the demised premises thereunder:—Held: pltf. was entitled to maintain an action against deft. for breach of his covenant to repair, & the reversioner not having executed the lease formed no answer or defence to such action.—*How v. The tenant for life granted a lease of the premises by which the lessee covenanted to keep the premises in repair. The lessee having committed a breach of the covenant to repair:—Held: the tenant for life, in granting the lease, was by reason of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 53, in the position of a trustee for all parties entitled under the settlement; therefore the damages were recoverable by the tenant for life as trustee for the trust estate, & the trustees under the will were entitled to be joined as pltf. in the action; & deft. could not set up a set-off against the tenant for life alone.—MITCHELL v. ARMSTRONG (1901), 17 T. L. R. 495.

B. & C., & for another period, of one-third, as tenant in common with B. & C., & that no more or greater interest in the premises ever came to him by assignment:—Held: (1) the plea was bad in substance, as it could not be a bar to the whole action; (2) it was bad in form also, as it merely confessed that deft. had possession of part of the premises, & not that he was assignee. Seemle: deft. should have pleaded in abatement, & should have shown how the other persons became tenants in common with him.—*MERCERON v. There were other covenants similarly framed to this last, for matters to be performed by L., & a proviso for re-entry if the rent should be in arrear, or if L., his exors., etc., should not perform the covenants in the indenture contained, on his & their part to be performed: & there was a covenant by C. to L. for quiet enjoyment, L., his exors., etc., paying the rent & performing the covenants in the indenture before contained:—Held: R. was jointly bound with L. by the covenant framed to repair, as well as the covenant to pay rent.—*COPLAND v. (4) not to carry on upon any part of the premises any other business than that of a tailor; & (5) not to assign or part with the possession of the premises or any part thereof. Pltfs. held the house under a lease for ninety-nine years from the vicar of the parish, which contained similar covenants. The house adjoined the churchyard, & deft. let the wall of the house which faced the principal entrance to the church to a bill-posting co., who covered the wall with advertisements. The effect of this was to injure the wall, & there was evidence that it was an annoyance to the vicar of the church & members of the congregation. Pltfs. claimed an injunction to restrain deft. from allowing the wall to be used as a bill-posting station:—Held: there had been a breach of covenants (1), (2), & (3), & perhaps of covenants (4) & (5), & pltf. was entitled to an injunction.—*HEARD v. Covenant to repair & leave in repair—Damages recovered during term—Action for not leaving in repair.—Certain premises were demised to the predecessors in title of plffs. for sixty-one years from Michaelmas 1837, subject to covenants to repair & deliver up in repair. The premises were sub-demised to the predecessors in title of defts. subject to the same covenants. On Apr. 4, 1894, an action was commenced by plffs. against defts. for damages for the breaches of the covenants, & £1,305 was recovered, none of which was expended in repairing the premises. On Sept. 19, 1898, the term of the underlease expired, & plffs. claimed the sum that it would cost to put the premises into such state of repair as defts. would be bound to leave them at the end of the term, making due allowance for the sum of £1,305 they had received:—Held: the previous action was no estoppel, & the true measure of damages of the breaches of covenant was the cost of putting the premises into the state of repair in which the tenant was bound to leave them at the expiration of the said term, less the sum of £1,305 & interest.—EBBETTS v. 4815. Compulsory purchase of tenant's interest—Liability of tenant to date of acquisition.—In 1859 pltf. leased premises to the E. L. Poor Law Union for twenty-one years, & in 1869 the E. L. Union was dissolved under "Dissolved Boards of Management & Guardians Act, 1870," but the guardians were to continue in office for the purpose of the Act. In 1866 notice to treat in respect of the premises was served by a railway co. under their Act upon the guardians of the E. L. Union, & in 1867 an award of compensation to them was made, & in 1870 the guardians assigned the premises to the co. & gave up possession to them. The covenant to repair in the lease was broken before the notice to treat, & there were continuing breaches thereof down to date of action, June, 1871. In June, 1866, the co. served pltf. with notice to treat in respect of his interest in the premises, & he sent in his claim, but nothing further had been done upon it:—Held: the guardians of the E. L. Union were liable for the breach of the covenant to repair up to the date of the execution of the assignment to the co., & the damages were to be measured by the extent to which the reversion had been damaged.—MILLS v. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant. The plot was one of a number of building plots subject to a building scheme. The scheme was subsequently modified, & no coach-house or stable was ever built, the lessor approving & consenting to the alteration. 4819. Service out of the jurisdiction—R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 1 (b).—An action against the assignee of a lease for breach of a covenant to repair contained in the lease is an action in which a contract or liability affecting land or hereditaments is sought to be enforced within above rule. Service of the writ of summons out of the jurisdiction may, therefore, be allowed in such an action where the land is situate within the jurisdiction.—TASSELL v. HALLÉN, [1892] 1 Q. B. 321; 61 L. 4820. Whether injury to reversion—Or cost of repair.—VIVIAN v. CHAMPION, No. 4790, ante.

4821. ————J.—In an action of covenant for non-repair of premises, held by deft. under a lease which has several years to run, the proper measure of damages is not the amount that would be required to put the premises into repair; but the amount to which the reversion is injured by the premises being out of repair.

In estimating the damages in cases where the lease has a long time to run, it is not fair to take the amount that would be necessary to put the premises into repair as the measure of the damages; for in such cases, when the damages are awarded to the landlord, he is not bound to expend them in repairs, neither can he do so without the tenant's permission to enter on the premises. The true question therefore is—to what extent is the reversion injured by the non-repair of the premises? If the lease had ninety-nine years to run, it could not make much difference in the value of the reversion whether the premises were now in repair or not. This lease, however, will expire in about six years. It appears also that this property originally consisted of a warehouse, a stable, & gardens; & pltf. say that the erection of the present tenements was wrongful; but they (waiving that for the present) have sent surveyors who make an estimate amounting to between £150 & £160. Deft. says, "I may have done wrong by putting up these tenements, but on the covenants contained in this lease I am only bound well & sufficiently to repair & uphold, & if need be, to rebuild the warehouse & stable, & to keep the hedges, pales, & other fences in tenantable repair"; & I think that under this covenant deft. is only bound to keep in repair the buildings which were on the premises at the time of the granting of the lease, & to rebuild them if necessary, & to keep up the fences; & that in estimating the damage you ought not to take into consideration the new cottages that have been built since the granting of the lease. . . . For as the tenant is not only to repair but to rebuild if necessary, pltf. are entitled to have such parts of the premises, as this covenant relates to, kept always in good repair (COLERIDGE, J.).—*DOE d. At the trial it appeared that II. was tenant to pltf., but had given up possession to deft., shortly before the act complained of, without, however, assigning his interest:—Held: (1) the issue was properly found for pltf., the meaning of the allegation being that the tenant had a right to possession in point of interest, so that pltf. could sue as reversioner; (2) the proper measure of damage was the amount by which the land was lessened in value by deft.'s wrongful act.—*HOSKING v. 4842. — Less damages recovered during term.]

—Two years before the expiration of a lease the lessor brought an action against the lessee for breach of covenant to repair; the lessee paid into ct. the sum of £235, which was accepted in satisfaction. No repairs were in fact done. At the expiration of the term another action was brought by the same lessor for breach of covenants to repair & leave in repair. The particulars in this action included the items of non-repair in respect of which the claim was made in the first action; it also included other items. The official referee assessed the damages by ascertaining the amount required to put the premises into repair, together with a sum for any depreciation that would have accrued had the repairs been done on the first occasion between that date & the end of the term, & deducting from such amount the sum received by the lessor in the first action:—Held: the official referee had adopted the right method of assessing the damages in the second action, & the sum paid into ct. in respect of the first action must not be treated as the equivalent of putting the premises into repair, but as representing the loss to the lessor measured by the depreciation in the saleable value of the reversion.—*HENDERSON v. 4853. ———.]—Execution by lessee after date—No execution by lessor.—Declaration in covenant on an indenture of Mar. 25, 1838, made between pltf. & deft., whereby pltf. then demised to deft. a certain messuage, with the appurtenances, for the term of seven years, & deft. did thereby covenant with pltf. that he would yearly, & every year during the term, keep the premises in good repair, & give them up in good repair, at the end of the term; by virtue of which demise deft. entered upon & enjoyed the said demised premises. The breach laid was for not keeping the premises in repair during the term. Deft., after setting out the deed on oyer, pleaded that his part of the indenture was executed by him after the alleged day of the execution thereof; & that pltf.'s part was never executed by him, or by any agent of his thereunto lawfully authorised; nor was there ever any demise of the said premises to deft., from the said day for the said term; nor was there ever any lease of any part of the said premises put in writing & signed, or made, signed, sealed, or delivered by pltf., or by any agent of his thereunto lawfully authorised by writing or otherwise; & that, although before the making of the indenture, to wit, on Mar. 25, 1838, pltf. demised the said premises for the term of one year, & so on from year to year, by virtue of which demise deft. entered & occupied the premises for a term, to wit, for nine years, which term had ended before the commencement of the suit, deft. never did occupy the said premises under any demise from pltf. other than that last mentioned, or for any term granted by the indenture, & that there never was any consideration for the execution by deft., on his part, of the indenture, & that his covenant therein was void. Verification:—Held: in substance a good answer to the action. Qu.: whether the plea did not amount to an argumentative denial of the execution of the deed by deft.—PITMAN v. CHADWICK (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 208.

——.]—See Part XXV., Sect. 1, post.

4857. Eviction by title paramount—Occupation by military authorities.—A lessee, under a lease expiring on Mar. 25, 1919, covenanted to keep the demised premises, consisting of a mansion house & some fourteen acres of land, in repair & to deliver them up in a state of repair at the end of the term; to insure against fire &, in case of fire, forthwith to lay out all moneys to be received in respect of the insurance in rebuilding & reinstating the premises; &, if such moneys were insufficient, to provide the deficiency. The term was afterwards assigned to an assignee who entered into possession, & who died leaving his exors. in possession. The War Office then requisitioned the premises for the internment of prisoners of war & took possession. In Feb. 1919, while the War Office was still in possession, the house was destroyed by fire. Nothing was done towards reinstating the house & the War Office did not give up their possession until June 4, 1919, after the expiration of the term. The lessee had paid the rent up to Christmas, 1918. In an action brought on June 6, 1919, by the lessor against the lessee for the rent due on Mar. 25, 1919, & for damages for breaches of the aforesaid covenants, deft. contended that he was not liable on the grounds, (a) that he was evicted by title paramount & that the lease was thereby determined; (b) frustration of the purpose for which the lease was granted; & (c) prevention by the lawful acts of the military authorities:—Held: there had been no eviction by "title paramount" in the proper sense, the lessee remained liable on the repairing covenant in the lease notwithstanding his having been deprived of possession by the exercise of lawful powers, & the terminable occupation by the military authorities, for which compensation might prove to be recoverable, was no answer to the obligations of the repairing covenant, & therefore the lessee was liable both for the quarter's rent & on the repairing covenant.—MATTHEY v. CURLING, [1922] 2 A. C. 180; 91 L. J. K. B. 593; 127 L. T. 247; 38 T. L. R. 475; 66 Sol. Jo. 386, H. L.

4858. Neglect by landlord of precedent obligation.—Defts. were the owners of two houses in a street numbered 38 & 40 & of a gateway under 40 & adjoining 38. In 1857 they demised the house No. 38 for a term of twenty-one years the lease containing a covenant by the lessee to repair all walls & party walls belonging to the premises. In 1865 they granted a lease to pltf. of the house No. 40 for a term of eleven years subject to a similar covenant to repair walls & party walls. The wall on the side of the gateway separating it from No. 38 was a party wall between the gateway & the house No. 38 to the height of the first floor. The house of pltf., No. 40, was built so as to extend in part over the top of the gateway & to rest upon this party wall between the gateway & the house No. 38 & to be supported by it. Pltf.'s covenant to repair did not extend to this wall & there was no covenant by defts. to keep it in repair. In 1874 it was discovered that the walls of that part of No. 40 which was above the gateway were giving way. The damage was owing to the failure of support from the party wall which had bulged in consequence of the pressure upon it from pltf.'s premises.—Held: there was no implied covenant on the part of defts. to support pltf.'s premises, although it might be an answer to an action upon pltf.'s covenant to repair, that the repair had been rendered impossible by the neglect of some precedent obligation on the part of defts.—COLBECK v. GIRDLEERS CO. (1876), 1 Q. B. 1. 234; 45 L. J. Q. B. 226; 34 L. T. 350; 40 J. P. 596; 24 W. R. 577.

4863. Whether licence implied—No right reserved.—A landlord has no right to enter his tenant's premises to repair them, without some stipulation to that effect.—BARKER v. BARKER (1829), 3 C. & P. 557, N. P.

4864.—Landlord entering at instance of tenant.—FEARNLEY v. REINDALL (1859), 1 F. & F. 719.

4865.—Landlord under covenant to repair—Entry for reasonable time.—Semble: an injury to or the destruction of demised premises, resulting from the use of them by the tenant in a reasonable & proper manner, having regard to the class of tenement to which they belong, is not waste. In a lease of a newly-constructed grain warehouse there was a covenant by the lessor that he would during the term "keep the main walls & main timbers of the warehouse in good repair & condition." The lessee entered under the lease & stored grain in it, in as the ct. held upon the evidence a reasonable & proper way. After a short time a beam which supported one of the floors broke, & ultimately the external walls sank & bulged outwards, & the lessor spent a large sum in repairing the premises. In an action by the lessor to recover from the lessee what he had thus expended:—Held: (1) the lessee had not been guilty of waste; (2) the lessor was bound under his covenant to put the walls & main timbers in good repair, having regard to the class of buildings to which the warehouse belonged, & not merely to the condition of the particular building; (3) the covenant implied a licence by the tenant to the landlord to enter upon the premises for a reasonable time for the purpose of executing the necessary repairs.

(4) The lease contained a proviso, that in case the warehouse, or any part thereof, should at any time during the term "be destroyed or damaged by fire, flood, storm, tempest, or other inevitable accident," the rent, or a just proportion thereof, should cease or abate so long as the premises should continue wholly or partly untenable or unfit for use or occupation in consequence of such destruction or damage. During the period in which the lessor was executing the repairs the lessee was excluded from the use & occupation of the whole or a part of the premises, & he claimed an abatement of rent under the proviso:—Held: the words "inevitable accident" imported something ejusdem generis with what had been previously mentioned, & did not apply to that which, though not avoidable so far as the lessee was concerned, was not in its nature inevitable, but resulted from the default of the lessor, & the lessee was not entitled to an abatement of rent.—SANER v. BILTON (1878), 7 Ch. D. 815; 47 L. J. Ch. 267; 38 L. T. 281; 26 W. R. 394.

4866.—Landlord under covenant to repair in superior lease—Entry by leave of sub-lessee's weekly tenant.—A lessor who, in the absence of express power in the lease, enters upon the demised premises to repair them on breach of the lessee's covenant to repair, even though under a superior lease the lessor is liable to forfeiture for non-repair & though he enters by leave of weekly sub-tenants, commits a trespass which will be restrained by injunction.—*STOCKER v. SUB-SECT. 1.—WANT OF REPAIR AMOUNTING TO PUBLIC NUISANCE.

A. Liability of Tenant.

See, generally, NUISANCE.

4867. Prima facie liable.]—If the owner of a house is bound to repair it, he & not the occupier, is liable to an action on the case for an injury sustained by a stranger from the want of repair.

I agree that the tenant as occupier is prima facie liable to the public, whatever private agreement there may be between him & the landlord. But if he can show that the landlord is to repair, the landlord is liable for neglect to repair (BULLER, J.).

If we were to hold that the tenant was liable in this case, we should encourage circuity of action, as the tenant would have his remedy over against the landlord (HEATH, J.).—PAYNE v. ROGERS (1794), 2 Hy. Bl. 350; 126 E. R. 590.

4868. — Injury to adjoining premises.]—The repairing & amending of a ruinous house is prima facie the duty of him who occupies the premises, & does not devolve upon the owner merely as such. Therefore, a declaration in case for omitting to amend & keep in repair in a substantial & lasting manner a messuage & premises whereby pltf.'s adjacent premises suffered damage, is bad on general demurrer if it charge deft. as the "owner & proprietor" of such messuage & premises, unless it also allege some ground of liability. The words "owner & proprietor" do not necessarily import that the party is occupier.

There is no obligation towards a neighbour to repair cast by law on the owner of a house, merely as owner, or to keep it in repair in a lasting & substantial manner; the only duty is to keep it in such a manner & in such a state that the neighbours may not be injured by its fall. A house may therefore be in a ruinous state provided it be shored up sufficiently; or a house, if it be ruinous, may be pulled down altogether. The owner is not bound to keep it in a state of substantial repair. All he is bound to do is to prevent it from being a nuisance (POLLOCK, C.B.).—CHAUNTIER v. ROBINSON (1849), 4 Exch. 163; 19 L. J. Ex. 170; 14 L. T. O. S. 107.

4869. —]—A landlord is liable for an injury to a stranger by the defective repair of demised premises only when he has contracted with the tenant to repair, or when he has been guilty of misfeasance, as, for instance, in letting the premises in a ruinous condition; in all other cases he is exempt from responsibility for accidents happening to strangers during the tenancy. Defts. let to F. a house by an agreement in writing, by which F. agreed "to do all necessary repairs to the said premises except main walls, roof, & main timbers. There was no agreement by defts. to repair, & the house was in good condition at the time of letting it. Owing to defts.' negligence in not repairing a part of the main walls, a chimney pot during the tenancy of F. fell upon pltf., who was a servant of F., & injured him:—Held: (1) pltf. was not entitled to recover compensation from defts. for the injury sustained him; (2) this would not be altered by a custom amongst landlords to do external repairs in the absence of any express provision in the agreement for letting, since such custom would not create an obligation to repair, for the neglect of which they could have been sued by their tenant.—NELSON v. LIVERPOOL BREWERY Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 311; 46 L. J. Q. B. 675; 25 W. R. 877.

4870. Bankruptcy of tenant—Liable until lease taken over by assignee or surrendered to landlord.]

—A lease made to a person who seeks the benefit of Judgements Act, 1838 (c. 110), remains vested in him until it be taken to by the assignees, or given up to the landlord. Defts., being the owners of a house & premises, demised the same on Apr. 1, 1853, to M. for thirty years, at a rent payable quarterly, with a right of re-entry if the rent should at any time be in arrear more than fifteen days. M. occupied the fifth floor himself for some time, & let out the rest of the house to separate weekly lodgers, each of whom had a right to draw water from a tank in the area, & to use the area for the purpose of doing so. In Mar. M. let the fifth floor to T., a weekly lodger, & then ceased to reside in the house, never paying the quarter's rent due at Lady Day 1858, or at the Midsummer following, & both were still in arrear at the time the action was brought. T. had the same privilege of using the area & tank as the other lodgers. In July M. became insolvent, & about July 25 he gave up the lease to the official assignee, & was discharged upon July 30. In the same month defts. gave notice to the lodgers that the rent must be paid to them, & two of the lodgers did so pay the rent. On or about Aug. 7, T., who was the tenant of the first floor, received a notice from the inspector of nuisances to repair a grating in front of the house; this notice was immediately handed by him to defts. & they repaired the grating. In Nov. defts. called upon the assignees to elect whether they would take the lease or not; & upon their refusal to take it, defts. took possession of it, & of the house & premises. Upon Aug. 4, pltf. suffered an injury by falling through a grating in an area belonging to the house, & being part of the premises so let with the house. It was admitted that the injury was occasioned by the negligence of some person or persons in not keeping the grating in repair:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury that defts. before the time of the accident had avoided the lease & entered into possession of the premises, & had thus become answerable for the negligence by which pltf. was injured.—BISHOP v. BEDFORD CHARITY TRUSTEES (1859), 1 E. & E. 714; 29 L. J. Q. B. 53; 1 L. T. 214; 6 Jur. N. S. 220; 8 W. R. 115; 120 E. R. 1078, Ex. Ch.

The Graving Dock Co. constructed their dock & the channel in accordance with the covenants in the lease. The undertaking of the Thames Graving Dock Co. was afterwards acquired by the Victoria Graving Dock Co. The Victoria Docks Co. was afterwards amalgamated with the London & St. Katharine's Dock Co. On Jan. 18, 1881 there was an unusually high tide & a strong gale, which was at its height at the highest point of the tide. The high tide & gale combined forced the water in the graving dock, which had entered it through the channel demised by the said lease, over the banks & flooded ptf.'s land. Ptf. sued both cos. for damages. The ct. came to the conclusion, upon the evidence, that the banks of the graving dock had not been properly maintained, at the height required by the comrs. of sewers for the district:—Held: neither the height of the tide nor the force of the wind, nor the coincidence of their happening together, could be considered as the act of God in the sense which would discharge the Graving Dock Co. from liability. The St. Katharine's Dock Co., being under a liability to maintain their own wall, & having leased it with a covenant which bound the lessees to make an opening in it, were in the same position as if it had been cut by a contractor employed by them, & were liable for any damage resulting from their lessees' neglect in taking proper precautions against the natural results of such opening.—*BURT v. If there is a contract as between the landlord & tenant that the landlord will repair the premises, that is, during the currency of the term, the landlord is not under any obligation unless there be an express contract to that effect, to perform repairs unless & until notice of the necessity for these repairs has been given to him (COLLINS, M.R.).—*TREDWAY v. 4891. Sufficiency of notice.]—In the lease of a dwelling-house the lessor covenanted to keep the exterior of the premises in good & substantial repair. During the currency of the term the lessee wrote to the lessor on Apr. 2, 1924, that "steps to the front door want attention." Thereupon the lessor communicated with his builders, who on Apr. 8, inspected the premises & reported that "the front steps are in a dangerous condition, & being so defective we have put the matter in hand." The builders obtained an estimate for the work, & on Apr. 16 the steps were repaired. In the meantime, however—namely, on Apr. 14, while the lessee, who was unaware that the steps were dangerous, was leaving the house the steps collapsed & he fell into the cellar below sustaining serious injuries. In an action by the lessee to recover damages for breach of the lessor's covenant to repair:—Held: (1) the letter of Apr. 2 was a sufficient notice of want of repair, although it did not specify the precise degree of non-repair; (2) even if that letter could not be relied upon as express notice of non-repair it gave the lessor a right of entry, & the actual knowledge of the condition of the steps acquired by him on Apr. 8 through his agents the builders prevented him setting up the absence of express notice; (3) having actual knowledge on Apr. 8 of the dangerous condition of the premises the lessor was bound to take immediate steps to render the premises temporarily safe if the permanent repairs could not be executed at once; (4) the lessor had committed a breach of covenant; & (5) the lessee having been injured owing to that breach was entitled to recover damages.—GRIFFIN v. PILET, [1926] 1 K. B. 17; 95 L. J. K. B. 67; 134 L. T. 58; 70 Sol. Jo. 110.

4892. No liability.—To tenant.]—LANE v. COX, No. 4896, post.

4894. —.]—Defts., who were the owners of considerable house property, let a house to a tenant who subsequently sub-let it to a co. whose manager resided on the premises with his wife (pltf.) & his family: defts. were not liable to do any repairs in the house. In the lavatory of the house was a water tank, which became insecure, owing, as was alleged, to the vibration caused by an engine & machinery upon adjoining premises of defts., which were used by them for the purpose of generating electricity for the lighting of their property. Complaints of the insecurity of the water tank were made by pltf. & her husband to the tenant, who forwarded them to defts. Ultimately defts. sent two workmen, who were their own servants, to do the necessary repairs, & an iron bracket was fixed underneath the tank to support it. Three months afterwards the bracket fell upon pltf. & seriously injured her. The jury found that the bracket fell by reason of the working of defts.' engine, that the working of the engine amounted to a nuisance, & that the work of repair in putting up the bracket was done in an improper & negligent manner & the apparatus left in a condition dangerous to persons properly using the lavatory:—Held: (1) pltf. had no cause of action against defts. on the ground of nuisance, because she had no interest in the premises or right of occupation in the proper sense of the term; (2) she could not recover on the ground of negligence, for there was no contractual relation between pltf. & defts., & the doing of the repairs was a voluntary act on the part of defts. not done in the discharge of a duty to pltf.; & as defts. had no control of the premises, there was no invitation on their part to pltf., but at the utmost an innocent representation as to the state of the premises, which, as they had employed apparently competent men to do the repairs, gave pltf. no cause of action.—MALONE v. LASKEY, [1907] 2 K. 4908. Wall built under Fire Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78)—Tenant under covenant to repair—Whether moiety of cost recoverable from landlord.]—The tenant of a house covenanted in his lease to pay a reasonable share & proportion of supporting, repairing, & amending all party walls, etc., & to pay all taxes, duties, assessments, & impositions, parliamentary & parochial, "it being the intention of the parties that the landlord should receive the clear yearly rent of £60 in net money without any deduction whatever." During the lease, the proprietor of the adjoining house built a party wall between that house & the house demised, under the above Act:—Held: the tenant, not the landlord, was bound to pay the moiety of the expense of the party wall.—BARRETT v. ROGERS (1826), Ry. & M. 357, N. P.

4910. — Tenant's covenant to repair not expressly extended to party walls.]—A lessee for twenty-one years at a peppercorn rent for the first half year. & a rack rent for the rest of the term, who by agreement was to put the premises in repair, & covenanted to pay the land tax & all other taxes, rates, assessments, & impositions, having assigned his term for a small sum in gross, was held not to be liable to pay the expense of a party wall, either by the provisions of the statute or the covenant: but that charge must in such case be borne by the original landlord. Sect. 41 of the above Act intended to throw that burden on persons to whom long leases had been granted with a view to an improvement of the estate, & who afterwards underlet at a considerable increase of rent. Semble: a lessee of such a term, who afterwards sold a lease for a sum in gross, would also be liable within this Act.—SOUTHALL v. Part XIX.—Waste.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

4922. Whether covenant not to commit waste implied.]—When real property is let for a rent, the terms on which both parties contract regulate the way in which the real property is to be dealt with. In the absence of any express terms, the law implies, from the mere relation of landlord & tenant, that it is the duty of the tenant to do or to leave undone some things, & a promise is implied from the mere relation of landlord & tenant on which an action lies for a breach of that duty. The most important of these, in the case of an agricultural holding, are not to commit waste & to manage the property in a husbandlike manner (LORD BLACKBURN).—WESTROPP v. 4931. — Damage must be substantial.]—DOHERTY v. ALLMAN, No. 4943, post.

4932. — & of permanent nature.]—

By a lease dated Sept. 29, 1830, plffs.' predecessors in title granted to deft. co. twelve acres of meadow land forming part of marshy land at West Ham, for ninety-nine years, at a certain rent, for the purpose of constructing a reservoir. The co. did not construct a reservoir but used the land for grazing purposes down to 1890, when they sub-demised it to B. for the rest of the term less the last three days thereof at an increased rent, for the purpose of its being used by him as a rubbish shoot. B. took possession & shot quantities of hard & soft rubbish of all kinds on the land, thereby raising its surface about ten feet. Pltfs. brought an action against the co. & B., alleging that the acts of B. constituted waste & had been done with the authority of the co., & claiming an injunction restraining the bringing or permitting to be brought upon the demised land any rubbish, earth, or material, or otherwise committing waste thereon, & damages. The only value of the lands at the end of the term would be for building factories, to obtain a proper foundation for which it would be necessary to dig down to the original level of the land:—Held: there had been such an alteration between the lessor & lessee, ancient meadow, the breaking up of which during the term amounts to a breach of the lessee's covenant not to commit waste for which an action lies.—MURPHY v. DALY (1860), 13 I. C. L. R. 239.—IR.

tion of the thing demised, irrespective of the question whether the added material was offensive or inoffensive, as to constitute waste; it was no answer that the expense of digging down to obtain a proper foundation would be more than compensated for by the increased rent which the reversioners would be able to obtain for the land in its heightened condition; both debts were liable in damages for the past acts of waste; & they must be restrained from committing waste in the future.

The test seems to be whether the act which the lessor says is an act of waste by the lessee is an act which alters the nature of the thing demised. . . . If the permanent character of the property demised is not substantially altered, I conceive that the law is that it is not now waste for the tenant to do things which within the covenants & conditions of his lease he is not precluded from doing (BUCKLEY, J.).—WEST HAM CENTRAL CHARITY BOARD v. EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO., [1900] 1 Ch. 624; 69 L. J. Ch. 257; 82 L. T. 85; 48 W. R. 284; 44 Sol. Jo. 243.

4935. —.]—Under an agricultural lease, in 1889, of a farm near London, consisting of arable & pasture land, the lessee covenanted to yield up the premises at the end of the term, together with all fixtures & "improvements" which might during the term be fixed to or erected on the demised premises, except such fixtures as should be erected by the lessee, & which he should be at liberty to remove in case the lessor should object to purchase the same by valuation; & also that he would "in all respects cultivate & manage the farm, & every part thereof, in a good, proper, & husbandlike manner, according to the best rules of husbandry practised in the neighbourhood." The lessee converted part of the demised premises into a market garden, erecting glasshouses thereon for the cultivation of hothouse produce for the London market. The lessor brought an action for an injunction to restrain the lessee from converting the farm into a market garden, alleging that his doing so was a breach of covenant & was waste, causing injury to the inheritance. At the trial it was proved that other farms in the neighbourhood had been converted into market gardens, that being found to be the most profitable mode of cultivation:—Held: the conversion into a market garden did not constitute a breach of the covenant, & inasmuch as injury had not been thereby caused to the inheritance, was not actionable "waste."

To obtain an injunction against a debt, on the ground of "waste," pltf. must prove that what the debt. is doing is prejudicial to the inheritance; if it improves the value of the land it is not "waste." Semble: Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883 (c. 61), has abolished part of the old common law doctrine of "waste"; & buildings, such as hothouses, erected by a lessee on his farm, & having the effect of rendering it more profitable, are "improvements" within the meaning of the Act.

A man cannot commit waste, even technically, if he is doing that which he is entitled to do by contract; that is to say, he cannot commit waste as against his landlord if his landlord has entered into a special contract enabling him to do it (KEKEWICH, J.).—*MEUX v. 4936. — Question for jury.]—Proviso in a lease, "that if lessee committed waste, to the amount of 10s., lessor might re-enter." Lessee pulled down buildings worth £10, & substituted others of a different nature. In ejectment for a forfeiture:—Held: "waste" in the proviso meant such waste as must produce an injury to the reversion; & it should have been left to the jury, in express terms, whether such waste, to the amount of 10s., had been committed.—DOE d. DARLINGTON (EARL.) v. BOND (1826), 5 B. & C. 855; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 738; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 68; 108 E. R. 318.

4937. — Value of estate diminished.—Or burdens increased.]—If a copyholder pull down a barn, without any intention of rebuilding, the lord cannot recover the place from him, on the ground of a forfeiture, if the jury find that the premises are not damaged.

The question whether the act be injurious is not of necessity decided by the question as to the value of the estate after the act has been done; it may be an act which would increase the value of the estate, yet be injurious to the inheritance, as it may impair the evidence of title. In such a case the act would be waste.

Upon the whole there is no authority for saying that any act can be waste which is not injurious to the inheritance, either, first, by diminishing the value of the estate, or, secondly, by increasing the burden on it, or thirdly, by impairing the evidence of title (DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE d. GRUBB v. BURLINGTON (EARL.) (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 507; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 534; 3 L. J. K. B. 26; 110 E. R. 878.

The jury found that the lessee did open the door without leave, but that the house was not in any respect weakened or injured by it. The judge thereupon directed a verdict to be entered for pltf. with nominal damages, subject to a case. 4942. —[Act otherwise ameliorative.]—DOE d. GRUBB v. BURLINGTON (EARL), No. 4937, ante.

4943. —[Not material under modern conditions.]—The grant of an injunction to restrain a person from doing a particular thing is an act dependent on the discretion of the ct., & in exercising that discretion a ct. of equity will consider, among other things, whether the doing of the thing sought to be restrained must produce an injury to the party seeking the injunction; whether that injury can be remedied or atoned for, & if capable of being atoned for by damages, whether those damages must be sought in successive suits, or could be obtained once for all.

Two leases were granted of pieces of land with some buildings on them, one granted in 1798 for 999 years, the other granted in 1842 for 988 years. There was no reservation of a power of re-entry for breach of covenant, nor was there any negative covenant obliging the lessee not to change the use of the premises. There was a power of re-entry, for rent in arrear & no sufficient distress on the premises. In each lease there was a covenant by the lessee that he, his exors., etc., will "during the term hereby granted, preserve, uphold, support, maintain, & keep the demised premises, & all improvements made, & to be made thereon, in good & sufficient order, repair & condition; & at the end, or sooner determination of this demise, shall & will so leave & deliver up the same unto" the lessor, his heirs, etc. The premises had been used for corn stores for some years, & afterwards as artillery barracks & dwellings for married soldiers. They had fallen into disrepair & it became necessary to repair them; the lessee thought it would be beneficial to convert the store buildings into dwelling-houses, which would much increase their value, & was proceeding to convert them accordingly, when the lessor filed a bill to restrain him, alleging waste:—Held: (1) this was not a case of enforcing a negative covenant where the words of contract were clear & indisputable; (2) the waste alleged was meliorating waste, & under the circumstances, the ct. below had, in the due exercise of its discretion in such matters, properly refused to interfere by injunction.

It seems to me to be that ameliorating waste which so far from doing injury to the inheritance, improves the inheritance. Now, there again the course which the ct. of Chancery ought undoubtedly to adopt would be to leave those who think they can obtain damages at common law to try what damages they can so obtain (LORD CAIRNS, L.C.).

The old writ of waste is gone, & we have nothing to do with it now, but an action in the nature of waste still exists in the cts. of common law. It is perfectly clear that in an action of waste you cannot recover nominal damages only, you must get real damages. The jurors must not find for you unless they think there is substantial & real damage. . . . The mischief that would accrue to the tenant from forbidding him to make this alteration would be so very great, & the mischief which could possibly . . . accrue to pltf., the lessor, would be so very small & remote, that I think that upon that ground the ct. was quite right in saying that their discretionary power to restrain should not be exercised. I will only say one word about the alteration of evidence of title. I can perfectly understand that five or six hundred years ago that was an extremely serious matter, that where the evidence of title depended entirely upon the memory of witnesses, to change a meadow into a wood or a wood into a meadow would have been a serious matter as far as regards the evidence of title. . . . But nowadays . . . any damage in regard to evidence of title is quite wild & chimerical, or is at least merely nominal (LORD BLACKBURN).—DOHERTY v. ALLMAN (1878), 3 App. Cas. 709; 39 L. He who takes such a ruinous house ought to mind well what weight he put into it at his peril, so that it be not so much that another shall take any damage by it; but if it had fallen of itself without any weight put upon it, or that it had fallen by the default only of the posts in the cellar which support the floor, with which deft. had nothing to do, there deft. shall be excused; but here it is expressly alleged, that it fell by the weight put upon it, which ought to be answered; as if a man take an estate for life or years in a ruinous house, if he pull it down he shall be charged in waste, but if it fall of itself, he shall be excused in waste; so there is a diversity where default is in the party, & where not, so here, deft. ought to have taken good care, that he did not put upon such a ruinous floor more than it might well bear, & if it would not bear anything, he ought not to put anything into it, to the prejudice of a third person, & if he does, he shall answer to the party his damages.—EDWARDS & HALINDER'S CASE (1594), 2 Leon. 93; Poph. 46; 74 E. R. 385.

Deft. was entitled to excavate but not to take away sand & gravel otherwise than was necessary for building purposes. In fact, he was taking away & removing sand & gravel for the purpose of selling it. It was also stated that deft. was making large holes in the land, thereby causing lasting damage to the property:—Held: as a licensee he had no right to take away the soil.—PEDLEY v. SUB-SECT. 2.—PERMISSIVE WASTE.

4979. Allowing house to fall—Ruinous condition at time of lease.]—In many cases a man may do a thing to which he is not compellable by law, & yet he shall not be punished for it. As if land is leased for life, upon which there is a house which is ruinous & in decay at the time of the lease, now the lessee is not punishable in waste if it falls, but yet if he cuts down trees growing upon the land, & repairs it with them, it is justifiable. So he may also do, if the lessor covenants to repair it, etc., as it there appears. So if a man leases a house with land upon which there is a wood, etc., without impeachment of waste for the house, yet if the house becomes ruinous, it seems that the lessee may cut timber for the repairing & re-building of it, & he shall not be punished in an action of waste.—ANON. entered into any other express agreement with his landlord, than as to the amount of the rent, is under an obligation implied by law to use & cultivate the land in a husband-like manner, according to the custom of the country, subject to the provisions of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908 (c. 64), & to keep the buildings wind & water tight; & the assignee of the reversion can at common law enforce this implied obligation against the tenant.

Where, therefore, a tenant of a farm & buildings under a lease containing express covenants by him continued in occupation after the expiration of the term, the landlord & tenant agreeing that the terms of the old lease should not apply, but not agreeing upon the terms of the new tenancy except that there should be a yearly tenancy at a fixed rent, & the landlord assigned the reversion during the continuance of the tenancy, the assignee of the reversion was held entitled to sue the tenant for breaches of the above-mentioned implied obligations which occurred after the assignment of the reversion.

(2) It is said that there is no lease by deed containing express covenant, & therefore 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, does not assist pltf. . . . The law however has always drawn a distinction between express & implied covenants. . . . The reason why the statute extended only to express covenants was that no such provision was necessary with regard to covenants in law or implied covenants (SWINFEN EADY, L.J.).—WEDD v. 5050. Action not assignable.]—A right of action for damages in the nature of waste being in respect of a tort is, on grounds of public policy not capable of assignment.

By a lease dated in 1906 certain business premises were demised to pltf. for a term of forty-one & a half years. The lease contained the usual covenants by the lessee to repair. Pltf. took the lease as trustee for a co., & the co. entered into occupation of the premises. On Mar. 19, 1909 a receiver & manager of the co.'s property was appointed in a debenture holder's action, & on Mar. 25, 1909, the co. went into voluntary liquidation. On May 2, 1911, the co. by its liquidator & the receiver entered into an agreement with deft. for the sale to him of the fixed plant & machinery of the business. By clause 14 of the agreement it was provided that deft. was to be entitled to occupy the premises for the purpose of removing the plant & machinery until Sept. 29, 1911, upon certain conditions, one of which was that he was not to do anything which, if done by the lessee, would be a breach of the covenants & conditions contained in the lease. It was also provided that deft. was to make good to the satisfaction of the lessor all damages done in removing the tenant's fixtures agreed to be sold. The agreement was approved by the cts. in the debenture holders action & deft. was let into possession of the premises. Whilst in possession deft. committed certain acts which were alleged to constitute waste. Upon his going out of possession on Sept. 29, 1911, pltf. was let into possession, & by a deed dated Nov. 6, 1911, the co.'s interest in the premises was released to pltf., together with the benefit of clause 14 of the agreement of May 2, 1911, & the full power to enforce the obligations under that clause:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the assignment of Nov. 6, 1911, it did not purport to assign to pltf. any right of action for tort in respect of waste, but only in respect of breaches of covenant.

I think it is clear that the action for waste, & the action on the case in the nature of waste, are both actions for tort, & there is no question of contract at all in waste in respect of either cause of action (FARWELL, L.J.).

(2) If the assignment had purported to assign any such right, the assignment would have been invalid, inasmuch as such a right is not assignable, according to the established rule which has not been changed.—DEFRIES v. MILNE, [1913] 1 Ch. 98; 82 L. J. Ch. 1; 107 L. T. 593; 57 Sol. Jo. 27, C. A.

5069. "In some sufficient insurance office"—Must insure in regular office—Whether void for uncertainty.—A covenant in the lease of a house, "to insure & keep insured a given sum of money upon the premises during the term in some sufficient insurance office" is not void for uncertainty; but means, that the premises shall be insured against fire in some office where insurances against fire are usually effected. Where there was such covenant in a lease on the part of the tenant, he effected an annual policy on the premises with an insurance co. in the usual printed form, by which it was declared that the policy should be for such longer period as the tenant should regularly pay, & the co. receive the premium, & a space of fifteen days beyond the quarter days was given for payment of the premium, during which time the co. was liable. The year expired on Mar. 25, 1811; but the tenant did not pay the premium for a renewal till Apr. 25, following. The co. then gave a receipt for the premium, stating the insurance to be from Lady Day, 1811, to Lady Day, 1812:—Held: the covenant was broken by reason of the non-payment of the premium on or before Apr. 9, & the lease was forfeited upon a clause of re-entry.—DOE d. Two leases granted by one instrument—Termination of one lease—Effect on covenant.—A. granted to B., by one instrument, a lease of O. for five years & a half, & of P. for sixteen years, the rent for both to be £120 during the first five years & a half, & £100 during the residue. B. covenanted "during the said terms" to insure the said premises in the sum of £2,000. There was no provision for any reduction in the amount of the insurance after the expiration of the five & a half years' term in O.:—Held: B. was bound to insure for £2,000 during the continuance of the longer term in P., & the covenant did not cease with the expiration of B.'s interest in O.—HECKMAN v. ISAAC (1862), 6 L. T. 383.

5073. Covenant by underlessee to insure—Excessive insurance by lessee by mistake—Right to recover excess from underlessee.—P., in 1859, covenanted with his lessors to keep the premises demised insured in the Alliance Insurance Office, or such other office as the lessors should appoint; & in Sept., 1855, granted an underlease, in which the underlessees & their assigns covenanted to pay to deft. B., the trustee of P., all sums which B. should pay for insurance of the premises. They also covenanted that they would not do anything to the damage of B. & P.; & the deed contained a proviso for re-entry by B. in default; & there was also a covenant by P. to keep the premises insured in the manner prescribed by the original lease of 1850. The underlease was subsequently assigned to plffs. The premises were insured by P. in the Alliance Insurance Office down to Michaelmas, 1855, when the co. declined to renew, a fire having occurred on the premises. P. subsequently effected an insurance in another office, but before the policy had expired, the office, on the ground that alterations of a hazardous kind had been made by plffs., gave notice that the policy had been invalidated. P. then insured the premises, from Feb., 1859, to Lady Day, 1860, in the State Insurance Office. The original lessors had commenced an action of ejectment against P. for non-observance of his covenant, when another fire occurred, & the action was compromised. The State Insurance Office refused to renew, except, as alleged by P., on the terms of twenty-five guineas per cent., & he paid the office the sum of £528 for a renewal of the policy. The solr. of plffs. protested against the payment of such a sum & the completion of the policy, & the premises being at the time unoccupied, it appeared that they might have been insured for the sum of £5 5s. & they were subsequently insured by P. himself in the Alliance Office for £5 12s. 9d. An action was then brought by B. against plffs. for the recovery from them of the sum of £528. An injunction was granted to restrain the action, & on the hearing of the cause the injunction was made perpetual.—LEATHER CLOTH CO. v. BRESSEY (1862), 3 Giff. 474; 6 L. T. 63; 8 Jur. N. S. 425; 10 W. R. 370; 66 E. R. 496.

5074. "Loss or damage by fire"—Construed in strict primary sense.—ENLAYDE, LTD. v. ROBERTS, No. 5076, post.

5075. Usual policy.—In a lease granted in 1905, the lessee covenanted that he would insure & keep insured the demised premises against loss & damage by fire in the names of the lessor & lessee in the Imperial Insurance co. or in some other responsible office in London or Westminster to be previously approved of in writing by the lessor. Through the agency of the lessor the premises were insured with the Alliance Assurance co., with which the Imperial Insurance co. had become incorporated, under a policy which excepted loss or damage occasioned by or happening through "invasion, foreign enemy . . . military or uninsured power." This policy was accepted by the lessor as sufficient until July, 1915, when, in consequence of enemy air raids, he required the lessee to insure the premises also against loss or damage by fire occasioned by enemy aircraft in pursuance of his covenant. The lessee refused to remedy this alleged breach, & the lessor commenced this action to recover possession:—Held: evidence was admissible to prove that the named co. & other tariff offices in London & Westminster had never insured against aircraft risks, & their policies had always excepted the risks above mentioned; the covenant was to effect such a policy as was the usual policy of the cos. in question at the date of the lease, or such a policy as might from time to time be usual during the currency of the lease; & there had been no breach of that covenant by the lessee.—UPJOHN v. HITCHENS, UPJOHN v. FORD, [1918] 2 K. B. 48; 87 L. J. K. B. 1205; 119 L. T. 180; 34 T. L. R. 412; 62 Sol. Jo. 567, C. A.

5076. Excepted risks—Whether outside covenant.—In a lease granted by R., in 1913, the lessee covenanted to repay R., the sums expended by R., in insuring the demised property against "loss or damage by fire"; to keep the property in repair "except in case of destruction or damage by fire"; & at the expiration of the lease to give up to the lessor, "damage by fire excepted," the demised property in good repair. R., covenanted at all times during the term to insure & keep insured the demised property "against loss or damage by fire in some insurance office of repute"

in a named sum, & further that, in the case of destruction of or damage to the demised premises by fire, she would "lay out all moneys received in respect of such insurance in rebuilding or reinstating . . . the premises so destroyed or damaged, & in case such moneys" should "be insufficient for such purpose, she" would "make good such insufficiency out of her own moneys." A policy of insurance against fire was effected in the names of the freeholders, R., & the lessee of R., in an office of repute whose policies, including the one in the present case, exempted the office from liability for "loss or damage by or happening through" certain events, including "invasion, foreign enemy," & "military or usurped power." In 1915 the demised property was destroyed by fire caused by incendiary bombs dropped by enemy aircraft. The ct. was satisfied that, although policies of insurance against fire issued by offices of repute always exempted the offices from liability for fires caused by military operations, their exemption clauses differed considerably in other respects:—Held: the words "loss or damage by fire" must be construed in their strict & primary & not in any secondary sense, & the lessor was liable under her covenant for the loss which had occurred.—ENLAYDE, LTD. v. ROBERTS, [1917] 1 Ch. 109; 86 L. J. Ch. 149; 115 L. T. 901; 33 T. L. R. 52; 61 Sol. Jo. 86.

(a) Stipulations as to Office.

5078. Office to be appointed by lessor—No office appointed.]—The right of entry for a breach of covenant does not pass to the assignee of the lessor when such breach is committed during the continuance of the lessor's estate. Where B. the lessee covenanted to insure in such office as H. the lessor should appoint in the joint names of H. & his assigns, & B. & his assigns, & before assignment H. indicated the office to B. but B. did not insure, & H. afterwards assigned to C. without notice to B.:—Held: C., who after the assignment, the premises still remaining uninsured, did not before action brought appoint any insurance office in which B. should insure in their joint names, could not maintain an action against B. for forfeiture for a breach of covenant accruing since the assignment to C.—CRANE v. BATTEN (1854), 2 C. L. R. 1696; 23 L. T. O. S. 220; 2 W. R. 550.

(b) Stipulations as to Names.

5080. Covenant to insure in joint names—Insurance in name of tenant.]—Ejectment on a forfeiture for breach of covenant in a lease, wherein the lessee covenanted to insure in the joint names of himself & the lessor, & in two-thirds of the value of the premises demised. The lessee had insured in his own name only, & as contended, to a less amount than two-thirds of the value of the premises; both parts of the lease remained in the possession of the lessor, & an abstract only had been delivered by him to the lessee, which contained no mention that the insurance was to be in the joint names, though it stated that the insurance was to be in two-thirds of the value of the premises. The lessor of pltf. had previously insured the premises at the same sum as deft.:—Held: the conduct of the lessor being such as to induce a reasonable & cautious man to conclude he was doing all that was necessary or required of him, by insuring in his own name & to the amount insured, he could not recover for a forfeiture, though there was no dispensation, or release from the covenant.—*DOE d. 5081. ———.]—However harsh an ejectment may be, no ct. will refuse to give effect to a proviso for re-entry in case of a breach of covenant. A parol licence from the landlord will not justify a breach of covenant; therefore, an ejectment is maintainable by the assignee of the reversion against the lessee for not insuring in the names of the landlord & the tenant, as covenanted in the lease, notwithstanding that he has insured in his own name, & the original landlord had expressed himself quite satisfied with the insurance.

The waiver by acceptance of rent, could not operate beyond Christmas, up to which period that rent was accepted; & this being a continuing covenant, a subsequent breach entitled the lessor of pltf. to re-enter (PATTESON, J.).—*DOE d. 5083. ——— Insurance in name of lessor only.]—A covenant by the lessee to insure the demised premises in the names of himself & the lessor, although not performed literally, by an insurance in the name of the lessor only, is yet so far substantially performed for the benefit of the lessor, that he could not recover for a breach of the covenant, the stipulation for the insurance in the name of the lessee being for the exclusive benefit of the latter & which he is at liberty to dispense with:—Held: the circumstance that the original lessee could not be found, & that no insurance could be effected in his name, was not an objection to the title of an underlessee.—HAVENS v. MIDDLETON (1853), 10 Hare, 641; 22 L. J. Ch. 746; 22 L. T. O. S. 62; 17 Jur. 271; 1 W. R. 256; 68 E. R. 1085.

5088. —.]—By the terms of a lease, the lessee was to insure & keep insured the premises demised, & deposit the policy with the lessor. There was the usual clause of re-entry or non-performance of the covenants. The lessee never insured, but assigned the premises; & the assignee never insured. The lessor distrained for rent due from the assignee; & afterwards brought ejectment for the forfeiture by the not insuring; laying the day of the demise in his declaration of ejectment a few days after he had so distrained:—Held: (1) the lease was conditional, & therefore, whether the covenant to insure ran with the land or not, so as to subject the assignee to an action, the lessor was entitled to re-enter on the forfeiture for condition broken; (2) the covenant to insure & keep insured was a continuing covenant; & although the distress for rent was a waiver of the forfeiture up to the time, the lessor might recover for the forfeiture incurred each day afterwards; & therefore the above ejectment was well brought.—*DOE d. 5089. —.]—Delay in effecting insurance.]—Under a lease with a proviso of forfeiture if the covenants be broken, forfeiture is incurred: (a) if the lessee covenants to insure the buildings from time to time & at all times, & leaves a part uninsured for two months after execution of the lease. Nor is it any answer that the greater part of the premises were already insured at the requisite amount by a policy expiring at the end of the two months, & that on its expiration a new policy was effected covering all the premises, which were then insured at the stipulated amount; (b) if the covenant be to insure against fire in the names of the lessors, A., B. & C., & the lessee adds his own. Nor is it any answer that, by Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), s. 83, any person interested in the buildings may require that the insurance co. shall cause the insurance money to be laid out in rebuilding. Especially where the covenant contains an express provision that the insurance money shall be so laid out, & that the lessee shall supply what is deficient. If a lessee, having incurred these forfeitures, though the lessor has taken no step to enforce them, contracts to sell his term, the purchaser, on becoming acquainted with them, may refuse to complete his contract, & may reclaim his deposit.—*PENNIAL v. PART XX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.—

*t. Premises underinsured.]—*Where there is a covenant to insure for a specified amount, & the lessee insures for a smaller amount, the lessor is entitled to be exonerated by the lessee from all risk to the extent of the amount specified in the covenant, no matter what the cost or trouble to the lessee may be.—LAWSON v. DOUGLAS (1888), 7 N. Z. L. R. 55.—N.Z.

5090. —.]—A lease for years, to commence at Michaelmas, 1845, was, by a decree for a specific performance at the instance of the lessee, executed on Jan. 12, 1847, bearing date Sept. 29, 1845. The lease contained a covenant to insure the demised premises & keep them insured during the term, & a power of re-entry on breach. The landlord brought ejectment, & proved that the premises were not insured until Feb. 18, 1847. Deft. gave no evidence to account for the delay:—Held: assuming that the covenant might be construed as the covenant to insure within a reasonable time only after the execution of the deed, the onus of showing the delay from Jan. 12 to Feb. 18 was reasonable lay on deft.; & no evidence being given to explain the delay, it was right that the judge should direct a verdict for plff.—DOE d. DARLINGTON v. ULPH (1849), 13 Q. B. 204; 18 L. J. Q. B. 106; 12 L. T. O. S. 424; 13 Jur. 276; 116 E. R. 1241.

5091. —.]—A purchaser of a leasehold may object to the vendor's title on the ground that he has incurred a forfeiture by omitting for the space of a month to pay the annual premium of insurance pursuant to his covenant; although it does not appear that the lessor has taken advantage of the forfeiture. Upon a sale of a leasehold, the purchaser agreed to pay a deposit of £50 & the residue on completion. Instead of actually paying the £50 he gave the vendor £5 & an I.O.U. for £45:—Held: the vendor, failing to make a good title, was not entitled to recover the £45 upon an account stated; & the defence was admissible under never indebted.—WILSON v. WILSON (1854), 14 C. B. 616; 2 C. L. R. 818; 23 L. J. C. P. 137; 23 L. T. O. S. 158; 18 Jur. 581; 2 W. R. 421; 139 E. R. 253.

5092. —.]—Plff. was lessee of copyhold houses for a term of twenty-one years, with a covenant for perpetual renewal from time to time upon payment of the rent reserved & performance of the covenants contained in the original lease, namely, to keep the houses in repair & insured, with a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants. The lessee expended £6,000 upon the premises, & upon the expiration of the lease the landlord refused to renew, upon the ground that the covenants had been broken. It was admitted that plff. had neglected to keep the houses insured for a few days, & that one of them was & had been for some time in a ruinous state. The landlord brought an action of ejectment, & plff. filed his bill to restrain such action:—Seemle: the failure to keep the premises insured was such a breach of covenant as to entitle the landlord to re-enter.—JOB v. BANISTER (1856), 26 L. J. Ch. 125; 28 L. T. O. S. 242; 21 J. P. 86; 3 Jur. N. S. 23; 5 W. R. 177, L. O.

The contract was not completed by the specified time. There was no defence on the part of the purchaser, but the vendors did not keep up the insurance after the time at which the contract should have been completed:—Held: the purchaser ought to be discharged from his contract.—PALMER v. GOREN (1856), 25 L. J. Ch. 841; 4 W. R. 688.

5094. —[Leasehold property was sold by auction on June 8, 1858, with a condition for completion on July 20 following. The title was accepted by the purchaser on July 16, but owing to disputes as to the value of the fixtures the meeting for completion did not take place till Aug. 26. The purchaser then discovered that the vendors had renewed the insurance, which expired on June 24, for one month only, so that the property became uninsured on July 24, & thereupon became forfeited to the lessors. On Sept. 7 the purchaser absolutely repudiated the contract. The vendors subsequently renewed the insurance, & obtained a waiver of the forfeiture from the lessors, & the purchaser refusing to complete, they filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: although the vendors were not bound to renew the insurance, yet having done so in so unusual a manner, the ct. would not decree specific performance, & the bill was dismissed, but without costs.—DOWSON v. SOLOMON (1859), 1 Drew. & Sm. 1; 29 L. J. Ch. 129; 1 L. T. 246; 6 Jur. N. S. 33; 8 W. R. 123.

The lessee effected such an insurance, the policy containing a memorandum that in case of the death of the assured, the policy might be continued to his personal representative provided an indorsement to that effect was made upon it within three months after his death. The lessee died, & an indorsement continuing the policy to his personal representative was made after the expiration of three months from the time of his decease:—Held: under these circumstances there was no breach of the covenant to keep the premises insured.

B. Evidence of Breach.

5096. Onus of proof.—In ejectment by landlord against tenant, on an alleged forfeiture by breach of a covenant to insure in some office in or near London, the omission to insure must be proved by pltf. It is not sufficient proof of such omission that deft., being asked to show a policy, or receipt for premium, refused (after which pltf. accepted rent, & made no further inquiry till the action was commenced), & that pltf. gave notice to produce such policy or receipt at the trial, which was not done on demand.—DOE d. BRIDGER v. WHITEHEAD (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 571; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 557; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 521; 7 L. J. Q. B. 250; 2 Jur. 493; 112 E. R. 955.

5097. Refusal to produce policy.—DOE d. BRIDGER v. WHITEHEAD, No. 5096, ante.

5098. — Whether production compelled.—In ejectment for not insuring, it is sufficient, in order to show that the lessee's premises are not insured, to call a clerk of the insurance office who enters the policies & premiums, & has searched the books; but, it being necessary to show that neither the lessee nor his assignee had insured:—Held: not sufficient that the clerk had searched under the name of the lessee alone; & although deft.'s attorney could be asked if there was a policy & if it were in ct., he could not be called upon to produce it, nor on his refusal be asked to prove a copy.—CHAPLIN v. REID (1858), 1 F. & F. 315, N. P.

5099. — After admission of breach—Evidence of continuing breach.—In ejectment, against a tenant for forfeiture by non-insurance, brought on Dec. 24, 1858, it was proved that on two occasions, the first a year & a half before action brought, & the second in Aug. 1858, deft. had admitted that he was uninsured. On the latter occasion he stated that he wanted the money for other purposes. Notice was given to deft. to produce the policy at the trial, which he failed to do. On Dec. 23, 1858, pltf. received some rent from the undertenants of the premises, "on account of rent due at Michaelmas":—Held: (1) there was evidence from which a jury might presume a continuing breach of the covenant to insure on Dec. 24, at the time of action brought; (2) that the landlord afterwards received rent from an undertenant was no waiver of the breach of covenant to insure.—PRICE v. WORWOOD (1859), 4 H. & N. 512; 28 L. J. Ex. 329; 33 L. T. O. S. 149; 5 Jur. N. S. 472; 7 W. R. 506; 157 E. R. 941.

5100. Proof of lapse of former policy.—In ejectment to recover premises for a breach of covenant in not insuring it is prima facie evidence to support pltf.'s case to show that the assignee of the term had ceased to insure the premises at an office where he had formerly insured them.—DOE d. IVE v. SCOTT (1840), Arn. & H. 76.

5103. Evidence in rebuttal—Undisturbed possession.—Where the original lessee covenants to keep the premises insured, & afterwards a sub-lease is granted by his exor., without any covenant to insure; undisturbed possession under this sub-lease for twenty years, will entitle a ct. to presume, that no breach of covenant took place during the life of the original lessee.—*MONTRESOR v. 5120. — Breach repaired before action.]—

On consideration of pltf. erecting certain houses upon a piece of land, deft. agreed to grant him a lease of the land & houses to be erected thereon, & pltf. covenanted to insure the houses in the joint names of pltf. & deft. in the Law Fire Office. Pltf. built the houses, & on Sept. 23 insured them in the Phoenix Fire Office, & in his own name only. Deft. discovered this fact a few days afterwards, but made no objection to pltf. In Jan. following the solr. of deft. wrote to pltf. claiming a forfeiture; & on Feb. 2 pltf. insured the houses in the Law Fire Office in the joint names of himself & deft. On Mar. 10, deft. brought ejectment for breach of covenant. Upon bill by pltf. for injunction & specific performance of the agreement, a decree was made in the terms of the prayer of the bill, & deft. was ordered to pay the costs of the suit.—ROGERS v. TUDOR (1860), 2 L. T. 303; 24 J. P. 708; 6 Jur. N. S. 692.

5121. — Breach not wilful.]—A landlord brought an action of ejectment against a tenant, assigning breaches of covenant to pay rent & taxes, & to keep insured & in good repair. Judgment was recovered by default, & the landlord entered into possession.

Upon the evidence the ct. was satisfied that there had been no wilful breach, if any, of the covenants. At the hearing deft. said, that, if his costs at law & equity, rent, & expenses for repairs, were paid, he did not oppose the relief.

Under the special circumstances of the case, the ct. granted relief, upon terms.—BAMFORD v. CRESSY (1862), 3 Giff. 675; 7 L. T. 187; 27 J. P. 55; 8 Jur. N. S. 1147; 10 W. R. 856; 66 E. R. 579.

(b) Damages.

5122. Measure of damages—Assignor insuring after breach by assignee—Whether amounts expended in insuring.]—Pltf., a lessee under covenant to insure against fire in his own name & that of the lessor jointly, assigned to deft., who covenanted to keep the covenants in the lease. Deft. having neglected to keep up a fire policy, which had been effected, pltf. effected a fresh one, but in his own name only. No fire happened. Pltf. brought covenant against deft. for neglecting to insure.

PART XX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.—C. (b).

a. Measure of damages—Value of premises lost by neglect to insure.]—In an action on a covenant by lessee to insure the premises in the name of the lessor:—Held: the measure of damages was the value of the premises lost to pltf. by deft.'s neglect to insure, such value not exceeding the sum in which deft. was to have insured by his covenant.—DOUGLASS v.

Deft. pleaded payment of a farthing into ct.:—Held: though pltf. had no claim to be indemnified specifically for the sum expended by him in effecting the fresh policy, the jury were at liberty to award more than nominal damages for the risk to which he had been exposed by deft.'s default.—HEY v. WYCHE (1842), 2 Gal. & Dav. 569; 12 L. J. Q. B. 83; 6 Jur. 559.

5124. Liability of lessee—Where lessee & sub-lessee guilty of breaches.]—A. being lessee of a messuage under the corp. of London, demised it, in 1829, to B., C., & D., for twenty-one years, the lessees covenanting to repair, & to insure "in the sum of £2,500 at the least, in The Protector Fire Insurance Office, or in such other respectable insurance office in London or Westminster, as B., C., & D., the lessees, their exors., etc., should think fit"; with a proviso for re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. In 1835, C., by indenture, granted an underlease to E. & F., for the residue of the term, wanting one day; the underlease containing the like covenants to repair, & to insure "in the sum of £2,500 at the least, in The Protector Fire Insurance Office, or in such other respectable fire insurance office in London or Westminster as E. & F., their exors., etc., should think fit"; & also a proviso for re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. The messuage being out of repair, & uninsured, the exors. of A., in 1843, brought ejectment, & recovered possession:—Held: C. was not entitled to recover against E. & F. the value of his reversionary interest, the loss thereof not being the result of their breaches of covenant, but of the breaches of covenants by C., to which covenants they were no parties.

Suppose the premises insured, & burnt down under circumstances that would give the insurance office a defence as against the sub-lessees; if the insurance were effected by pltf., the office would be liable; otherwise, if effected by defts. The performance of defts.' covenants would, under such circumstances, afford no indemnity to pltf. (MAULE, J.).—LOGAN v. lessee.]—A lessee with an option to purchase, in pursuance of a covenant in his lease, insured the demised premises in their full value. The premises were also insured in another office by the lessor without the lessee's knowledge. The premises were burnt down, & the sum payable in respect of the damage done was apportioned between the two offices. Shortly after the fire the lessee notified to the lessor his intention to exercise his option to purchase, & suggested that the moneys payable on both policies should be received by the lessor as part of the purchase money. The lessor, without noticing the lessee's proposal, appropriated the money received on his own policy for his own benefit, & threatened the lessee with ejectment if he did not employ the money payable on the other policy in reinstating the premises:—Held: the lessee, having elected to purchase, the lessor must be ordered specifically to perform his covenant to convey, & he must take the moneys received in respect of both policies as part payment of the purchase money.—REYNARD v. 5139. Termination of liability—Whether by expiry of term.]—During the currency of a lease of a house & land, the military authorities, acting under the powers conferred by Defence of the Realm Regulations, took possession of the demised premises & continued in occupation thereof until after the expiration of the term. The lease contained covenants, in the usual form, by the lessee, to repair, to deliver up in repair, to insure, & in the event of the demised buildings being destroyed or damaged by fire at any time during the term forthwith to expend the insurance money in rebuilding. On Feb. 12, 1919, the house was destroyed by fire. On Mar. 25, 1919, the term expired by effluxion of time. In an action commenced after that date the lessor claimed from the lessee payment of the last quarter's rent & damages for breach of the above-mentioned covenants:—Held: the lessee had not been evicted by title paramount & was liable for the rent; & the temporary occupation by the military authorities did not excuse him from performance of the repairing covenants.

Where leasehold premises are damaged or destroyed by fire near the end of the term the obligation of the covenantor under the ordinary lessee's covenant to reinstate, in the absence of any special provision fixing the time of performance, does not come to an end at the end of the term, but he is allowed a reasonable time for reinstatement.—MATTHEY v. 5154. —.]—Under an agreement for a lease the lessor is not, without express stipulation, entitled to a covenant, restraining alienation without licence, as a proper & usual covenant.

If the landlord has a covenant against both assigning & under-letting, the tenant might by an agreement, neither assigning, nor under-letting, put another person in possession of the premises; & parting with the possession in that manner would not be a breach of those covenants. Is a further covenant, therefore, not to part with the possession of the premises, to be given, as a usual covenant? That would not have restrained the tenant from parting with a part of the premises: these covenants having been always construed by cts. of law with the utmost jealousy to prevent the restraint from going beyond the express stipulation. The ct. will have to consider, whether all these covenants are also included under the terms "usual & proper covenants," in the construction of an equitable agreement; where the law would regard the instrument with that jealousy (LORD ELDON, C.).—*CHURCH v. 5169. Whether a covenant running with the land.]—(1) A covenant, in an indenture of lease, by which the lessees, for themselves, their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, covenanted that they, their exors., administrators, & assigns, would not assign, underlet, or otherwise part with the possession of the demised premises without first obtaining the consent in writing of the lessor, is a covenant which touches & concerns the land, & therefore runs with the land, & the lessor can sue an assignee of the lessee for the breach of it.

(2) The measure of damages in an action for a breach of the covenant is such a sum as will, as far as money can, put plff. in the same position as if he had still deft.'s liability, instead of the liability of another of inferior pecuniary ability, for breaches both past & future.—*WILLIAMS v. An interpretation clause provided that "the expression 'the lessors,' used herein, shall, where the context so admits, include, besides the said H. & P., their respective exors., administrators, & assigns, & the expression, 'lessees,' used in these presents, shall, where the context so admits, include, besides the said X. & Y., their respective exors. & administrators." In 1899 X. & Y., with the licence of their lessors, assigned the demised property to the S. co., which in 1915 wished to assign it to another co.:—Held: (1) although "assigns" were not mentioned in the covenant, it was binding on the S. co., & that co. could not assign the demised property without the consent of the lessors; (2) the fact that in the definition in the lease the word "lessees," as contrasted with the word "lessors" was not stated to include assigns did not show a sufficient indication of intention that the covenant should be personal only & not run with the land.—*Re STEPHENSON (ROBERT) & CO., LTD., POOLE v. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Void as act of bankruptcy.]—A lease contained a proviso for re-entry of the lessor, & that the lease should be void on the lessee's assigning without the licence of the lessor. The lessee in Jan. 1825, executed a deed which purported to convey all his real & personal property to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors. In Apr. 1825, a commission of bkpt. issued against the lessee, & he was duly declared bkpt.:—Held: the deed of Jan. 1825, was an act of bkptcy. & void, it did not operate as a valid assignment of the tenant's interest in the lease, & therefore, there was no forfeiture.—*DOE d. W. accepted the terms & entered into possession; but no formal assignment was executed to him by T. & P. W. paid rent to pltf. till Jan. 1867, when pltf., in answer to an application on behalf of W., wrote: "I have no objection to consent to the trustees, C. & H., acting for W. in respect of the premises to vest the same in their hands, similar to the transfer I allowed W. from T. & P.;" & accordingly W. executed, on Feb. 27, 1867, a formal assignment, inter alia, of all his interest in the premises to C. & H. They entered on the same day; & in Nov. 1867, they parted with the possession to deft., without the assent of pltf. 5188. — By liquidator of company.—Not to responsible person.]—A co. were assignees of a lease containing a covenant by the lessee not to assign the demised premises without the lessor's previous licence & consent in writing not to be unreasonably withheld in case of a respectable & responsible person being offered as tenant. The co. went into voluntary liquidation, in which the liquidator without the licence or consent of the lessor assigned the lease without offering a responsible person as tenant:—Held: (1) this constituted a breach of the covenant not to assign; (2) the lessor electing to avoid the lease could assess once for all the amount which he had lost by having an insolvent tenant instead of the co., & could prove for that amount in the liquidation, & was not bound to wait & prove for each quarter's rent as it fell due.—COHEN v. POPULAR RESTAURANTS, LTD., [1917] 1 K. B. 480; 86 L. J. K. B. 617; 116 L. T. 477; 33 T. L. R. 107.

5189. Assignment of lessee's fixture.]—The lessee of certain premises erected a greenhouse thereon, which, though a fixture, by agreement with the lessor (def't.), he was to be entitled to remove. He subsequently mortgaged, among other things, the greenhouse in question, & the mtgee. immediately entered in accordance with the powers given him by the bill of sale. The greenhouse was put up to auction a month after the entry, but not sold. Ten days after the auction the keys of the premises were given up to def't. by the auctioneer, who had been in possession for the mtgee., & def't. took possession; on the same day the mtgee. had notice of the surrender. The lessee made no attempt or claim to recover the premises after the entry under the bill of sale. Between three & four weeks after possession had been given up to def't. the mtgee. sold the greenhouse to pltf., who claimed to be entitled to enter & remove it:—Held: the mtge. of the greenhouse did not create a forfeiture under a covenant in the lease against any alienation of the premises without leave of the lessor, but the facts showed a surrender by operation of law; & the greenhouse, not having been removed by the mtgee. within a reasonable time after notice of the surrender, had become the property of def't., & could not be removed.—MOSS v. JAMES (1878), 38 L. T. 595, C. A.

5191. Agreement for sale.—Prospective purchasers let into possession.]—(1) A lease contained a covenant by the lessees for themselves & their assigns not to assign or underlet the premises without the consent of the lessors, which was not to be unreasonably withheld. Assignees of the lease entered into an agreement for the sale thereof by which it was provided that at a certain period, though the purchase might not then be completed, the purchasers should be let into possession of the premises, & should from that date pay the rents & outgoings in respect of the same. The purchasers even let into possession under that agreement, the purchase remaining uncompleted:—Held: so letting them into possession was not a breach of the covenant against assignment or underletting without the consent of the lessors.

The lessees, at a time when two quarters' rent were overdue & in arrear, made such an assignment to C., who thereupon took possession of the premises & shortly afterwards paid D. the two quarters' arrears of rent:—Held: the act of the lessees in making the assignment was an act whereby their tenancy was determined.—*DOBSON v. interpretation sect. 2 of the [Conveyancing] Act of 1881 referring to bkpcy., that liquidation is within the meaning of bkpcy. as interpreted by sub-sect. 6 of sect. 14 of the Act of 1881. It follows that, if the [Conveyancing] Act of 1892 has not effected a difference, pltf. co. was not bound, as to this ground of forfeiture, to give notice at all. Has, then, the Act of 1892 made any difference? I think it has. I think the effect of sect. 2, sub-sect. 2, of that Act, which is very difficult of construction, is to take the case of forfeiture for bkpcy. or liquidation out of the cases in which notice is not necessary for one year from the bkpcy. or liquidation (LORD RUSSELL, C.J.).—*HORSEY ESTATE, LTD. v. The grant contained a power to determine the terms of non-payment of rent, & a covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held: the effect of the document was to grant a licence under which the refreshment contractor took no estate or interest in the property, & therefore it did not amount to a breach of a covenant in the lease not to assign without the consent of the lessor.—*EDWARDES v. 5194. — — — — —]—By a lease the lessee covenanted not to assign or underlet the demised premises without the consent of the lessor, & there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants, or if the lessee should (inter alia) execute an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The lessee executed an assignment of all his real & personal property, except that of a leasehold tenure, to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, & he declared that he would stand possessed of all his leasehold property upon trust for the trustee & to assign & dispose of the same in such manner as the trustee should direct for the purposes of the deed. The trustee entered into possession of the demised premises, but no legal assignment of them was executed. The lessor served upon the trustee a notice alleging as ground of forfeiture the execution by the lessee of the assignment. In an action against the lessee to recover possession of the premises:—Held: (1) as there had been no legal assignment of the premises, there had been no breach of the covenant against assignment; (2) the condition against assignment for the benefit of creditors was not a condition against disposing of the land leased within Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6) (i), & therefore service of notice on the lessee under s. 14 (1), was necessary before the lessor could enforce his right of re-entry; & service of the notice on the trustee under the deed was not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of s. 14 (1), & s. 67 (2), of the Act.

A condition against the disposing of the land leased within the meaning of s. 14 (6) (i) of the Act, means a condition which on its face is against the disposing of the land leased.—GENTLE v. FAULKNER, [1900] 2 Q. B. 267; 69 L. J. Q. B. 777; 82 L. T. 708; 16 T. L. R. 397; 44 Sol. Jo. 483, C. A.

Application of rule—Deposit of lease as security.—The lessee, during the existence of the lease, made an equitable deposit of the lease with a sales-master, accompanied by a memorandum to the effect that the deposit should hold the lease “by way of equitable mtge.” as security for a sum of money due to him by the lessee:—Held: this equitable deposit was not a breach of the covenant by the lessee not to “mtge., sell, assign, or otherwise part with” the lease or premises.—*MCKAY v. Sect. 1.—Right to assign or underlet: Sub-sect. 2, B.
(a) ii., iii., iv. & v.]

5197. ———.]—Semble: a proviso to make void a lease, on assignment by the lessee, does not apply to a mere deposit of it, by way of equitable mtge.

The assignees cannot complain of being taken by surprise; for the petition already states that there was a deposit of the lease itself, which would create an equitable lien on the colliery, as well as on the fixtures; & this would be the case, if there was no written memorandum accompanying the deposit; & no objection in this case arises, as to the fixtures being in the order & disposition of bkpt. at the time of the bkpcy.; for petitioner took possession of them under the contract. It had been contended that the lease cannot be sold, as there is a proviso in it to prevent any assignment by the lessee. But it has been decided that such a proviso does not apply to the assignees of a bkpt., who are in by operation of law, & not by the act of the party (ERSKINE, C.J.).

A proviso to make void a lease, on assignment by the lessee, does not apply to a case of mere deposit, any more than to an assignment by operation of law (SIR G. ROSE).—Re HAND, Ex p. COCKS (1836), 2 Deac. 14, Ct. of R.

neighbourhood; (d) not to carry on upon any part of the premises any other business than that of a tailor; & (e) not to assign or part with the possession of the premises or any part thereof. Pltfs. held the house under a lease for ninety years from the vicar of the parish, which contained similar covenants. The house adjoined the churchyard, & deft. let the wall of the house which faced the principal entrance to the church to a bill-posting co., who covered the wall with advertisements. The effect of this was to injure the wall, & there was evidence that it was an annoyance to the vicar of the church & members of the congregation. Pltfs. claimed an injunction to restrain deft. from allowing the wall to be used as a bill-posting station:—Held: there had been a breach of covenants (a), (b), & (c), & perhaps of covenants (d) & (e), & pltf. was entitled to an injunction.—*HEARD v. The lease also contained a proviso for re-entry by the trustees for breach of his covenants by the lessee. An assignee of the lease with the consent of the lessor made by sub-demise a mtge. by which the mtgor. was debarred from exercising the powers of leasing conferred on mtgors. by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 18 (1), & the mtgor. attorned & became tenant at will to the mtgee. The mtgor. then, without the consent of the lessor of the thirty years' lease or of his trustees, in Nov. 1921, by an agreement in writing sub-let part of the demised premises for three years from Michaelmas, 1921. The trustees of the lessor of the thirty years' lease, without serving any notice under sect. 14 of the Act, brought an action against the mtgor. to recover the demised premises on the ground that giving the tenant possession under the agreement of Nov. 1921, was a breach of the covenant in the lease not to assign or part with the lease or the premises thereby demised or any part thereof:—Held: the action was not maintainable; (BANKES & ATKIN, L.JJ.) on the ground that on the true construction of the covenant "assign" & "part with" mean part with the whole interest in the premises or in any part thereof & do not include a sub-letting of part of the premises; or that at the most the expression "part with" is ambiguous & may exclude parting with part of the lessee's interest in part of the premises, & that a lessor insisting on a forfeiture for breach of covenant must express the covenant in unambiguous terms; (SCRUTTON, L.J.) on the ground that a covenant against parting with possession of part of the premises is a different covenant from a covenant against parting with possession of the premises; & that the former covenant was not within the exception in sub-sect. 8 of sect. 14 of the Act, & therefore a notice under sub-sect. 1 was necessary before pltfs. could enforce a right of entry for a breach of it.—*RUSSELL v. 5215. —[.]—L. leased certain premises to D. for twenty-one years. The lease contained a covenant by D. for himself, his heirs, administrators, & assigns, that he would not, neither should his exors., administrators, or assigns assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor. D. assigned the premises with the consent of L. to V. Subsequently V. assigned them, with the consent of L., to W. II. & J. H., who were partners. W. H. & J. H. dissolved partnership, & J. H. assigned to W. H. all his undivided share & interest of & in the premises contained in the lease. L. had no notice of this assignment, nor was his consent given:—Held: the assignment was a breach of the covenant.—LANGTON v. HENSON (1905), 92 L. T. 805.

5216. Surviving partner in possession—No assignment.—A lease was granted to two partners, B. & H., as joint tenants. The lessees covenanted that they, their exors., administrators, or assigns, or any or either of them, would not, during the term, assign, underlet, or part with the possession of the demised property to any person or persons without the written consent of the lessor; & there was a proviso for re-entry on the breach of any of the covenants. The partners dissolved partnership, & agreed that the partnership property should be made over to B., & that the leasehold property should be assigned to him with the consent of the lessor, if such consent could be obtained, & recited, as the fact was, that A. had given up sole possession of the leaseholds to B. Consent was not obtained, & no assignment of the leasehold was executed, but B., from the time of the dissolution, remained in sole possession:—Held: there had the lease to his co-partner without such consent is a breach of such covenant.—LOWLESS v. FITZGERALD (1909), 42 S. C. R. 264.—CAN.

The lessees agreed with a co. of wine merchants to grant them an underlease of one of the messuages & shops subject to the consent of the lessor, a draft underlease being prepared, & allowed them to occupy the premises, & there to execute repairs & to instal & carry on their business. The lessor refused consent to the underlease:—Held: the lessees had committed a breach of the covenant not to part with possession of any part of the premises.—ABRAHAM v. 5227. Consent to underlease by occupier.]—Where a lessee, who has covenanted for himself & his assigns that he will not sub-let or part with possession of the premises without the consent of the lessor, sub-lets them, the lessor cannot, if the sub-lessee further sub-lets without his consent, complain of such further sub-letting as a breach of covenant by the lessee. A sub-lessee is not for that purpose an assign.

C. let premises to W., who covenanted for himself & his assigns that he would not sub-let or part with possession without the consent of C. W. sub-let the premises to B., who similarly covenanted not to sub-let or part with possession without the consent of W. B. sub-let to F. with the consent of W. but without the consent of C.:

—Held: the fact of W. consenting to the sub-lease to F., & thereby allowing F. to take possession of the premises, did not amount to a parting with the possession by W. or his assign so as to constitute a breach of his covenant not to part with the possession without C.'s consent.—MACKUSICK v. CARMICHAEL, [1917] 2 K. B. 581; 87 L. J. K. B. 65; 117 L. T. 372; 33 T. L. R. 497.

5228. Licence to use premises—Legal possession retained by lessee.]—A lessee who has covenanted not to part with possession of the demised premises does not commit a breach of the covenant by merely permitting another person to have the use of the premises, so long as the lessee retains the legal possession himself.

A lessee had covenanted with his lessor that he would not assign or underlet or part with possession of the demised premises or any part thereof. He assigned his business, that of a motor garage proprietor, to a co., of which he was the managing director & in which he held a controlling interest. He carried on the business of the co. on the premises which were stated to be its registered address & on which the name of the co. was exposed. He kept the key of the premises in his possession. The co. agreed to indemnify him in respect of rates & taxes. The co. appeared in the valuation list for the parish as the occupier of the premises for the purpose of the poor rate. Subsequently a second co. was formed, of which the lessee was the managing director, & which took over the business, assets, & liabilities of the first co. In negotiating for this transfer the lessee stipulated that he should remain in possession as actual tenant of the demised premises:—Held: no interest in the demised premises had passed to the cos. or either of them, & there had been no breach of the lessee's covenant not to part with possession of the premises or any part thereof.—CHAPLIN v. SMITH, [1926] 1 K. B. 198; 95 L. J. K. B. 449; 134 L. T. 393, C. A.

5233. Mortgage by sub-demise.]—The lessee of premises created a yearly tenancy under which pltf. became tenant & occupier of the premises. On the same day the lessee mortgaged the premises by way of subdemise without obtaining the permission of the lessor. The lease contained a covenant not to assign, underlet, or part with the possession of the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, & a clause providing for re-entry upon breach of any of the covenants. The lessee, who had been adjudicated bkpt., failing to pay the interest, the mtgees. appointed a receiver, to whom pltf. paid a quarter's rent due at the following Midsummer. Before the next quarterly rent became due the lessor issued a writ to recover possession of the premises; but the writ, which was served on pltf., as occupier, & others, did not contain a statement of the ground of forfeiture. Pltf. after appearance in that action, but before delivery of statement of claim specifying the cause of forfeiture, paid the rent falling due at Michaelmas to the receiver. He refused to pay the rent falling due at Christmas, & the receiver, under the powers given by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), distrained. In an action by pltf. against the receiver for a wrongful distress:—Held: the sub-demise to the mtgees., without the consent of the lessor, constituted a breach of the covenant as to assignment.—SERJEANT v. NASH, FIELD & Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 304; 72 L. J. K. B. 630; 89 L. T. 112; 19 T. L. R. 510, C. A.

5234. Sale or letting of grass-keep on farm.]—Where the tenant of a farm covenants not to underlet or permit any other person to use or occupy any part of the demised premises without the written consent of the landlord, the sale or letting by the tenant, without such consent, in the last year of his tenancy of the grass-keep—i.e. growing herbage—of his pasture lands for a definite period, is a breach of the covenant, although such sale or letting is in accordance with the usual practice of an outgoing tenant in that part of the country. Semble: agistment—i.e. the taking in by the tenant of the sheep or cattle of another to be depastured on the farm at so much per head per week—would not be a breach of the covenant.—RICHARDS v. DAVIES, [1921] 1 Ch. 90; 89 L. J. Ch. 601; 124 L. T. 238; 65 Sol. Jo. 44.

5237. —.]—The only point I have to decide is the true construction of the covenant "not to underlet the said premises without the like consent." In my opinion such a covenant does not prohibit the letting of part of the premises, nor indeed the parting with possession of the whole or part of the premises. But it is sufficient for my judgment to say it does not prohibit letting part of the premises. On the evidence I am not satisfied that the whole of the premises ever were let out in parts at any one time. Under the circumstances it is unnecessary for me to decide whether the landlord knew that the premises were so let out & so waived the breach, although I have a shrewd suspicion that he knew the position at all times. It is sufficient to rest my judgment on the above-stated grounds (SUTTON, J.).—WILSON v. ROSENTHAL (1906), 22 T. L. R. 233.

5239. — Separate transactions—Resulting in sub-lease of whole.]—By an agreement dated Mar. 11, 1919, pltf. let a house to deft. for five years at a rent of £135, deft. covenanting not to assign, underlet or part with the possession of the demised premises without the consent of pltf., such consent not to be unreasonably withheld. On Feb. 14, 1920, deft., with the consent of pltf., underlet the top floor of the house for three years at a rent of £90. On Feb. 28, 1920, deft., without the knowledge or consent of pltf., underlet the remainder of the premises on a yearly tenancy, with the option to the under-lessee to continue the tenancy for the residue of the original term, at a rent of £180. In an action for a declaration that the covenant had been broken pltf. claimed possession & mesne profits:—Held: although the underletting had been effected by two separate transactions, deft. had in fact underlet the whole of the premises without the consent of the landlord to the underletting of the whole; therefore the covenant had been broken so as to involve a forfeiture of the lease.—*CHATTERTON v. The lessee, without the lessor's consent, underlet a portion of the premises to T. on a weekly tenancy, & subsequently underlet the residue of the premises to W. for a term of twenty-one years without the lessor's consent:—Held: the two underlettings did not amount to a breach of the covenant, for the underletting to W. was not a breach, not being an underletting of the whole of the premises, nor was the underletting to T. a breach, being for a term of less than three years & therefore excepted from the covenant by the proviso; & the fact that the two underlettings together constituted an underletting of the whole premises made no difference in this respect.—*ROBERTS v. 5241. Licence—To use part of premises.]—A licence to use part of demised premises does not constitute an underletting, in that it does not confer any estate or interest in land. Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6), does not include a lessee's covenant against sharing the possession of the demised premises, & a lessor cannot, therefore, enforce his right of re-entry in respect of the breach of such a covenant without serving on the lessee the notice prescribed by the sub-sect.—JACKSON v. SIMONS, [1923] 1 Ch. 373; 92 L. J. Ch. 161; 128 L. T. 572; 39 T. L. R. 147; 67 Sol. Jo. 262.

Effect of covenant—Where premises acquired under statutory powers—Metropolitan Water Board.]—By virtue of the provisions of the Metropolitan Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), the undertaking & property of the Grand Junction Waterworks co., comprising (inter alia) leasehold premises demised to the co. by a lease of Mar. 14, 1881, were transferred to & became vested in pltf. board. The lease contained a covenant on the part of the co., its successors & assigns, not to sell, assign, or underlet the demised premises without the previous written consent of the lessors, & also a power for the lessors to re-enter on breach of any of the covenants in the lease. Pltf. board did not require the premises in question, & proposed to underlet them to an intended tenant for the residue of their term less three days. Defts., in whom the leasehold reversion was vested, refused their consent. In an action by pltf. board for a declaration that, notwithstanding the covenant, they were entitled, in exercise of their powers under Metropolitan Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), & the provisions of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), incorporated therein, & the Metropolitan Water Board (Various Powers) Act, 1907 (c. clxxiv), to sell, assign, or underlet the premises without the previous consent in writing of defts.:—Held: what pltf. board possessed was not an absolute term of years, but only a lease liable to be determined in the event (inter alia) of an assignment or underletting without the previous written consent of defts.; the pltf. board's statutory powers only enabled it to dispose of such estate & interest as it might have, & did not deprive defts. of their right to re-enter for breach of the covenant against assigning or underletting without the necessary consent; &, consequently, the action failed.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. SOLOMON, [1908] 2 Ch. 214; 77 L. J. Ch. 517; 98 L. T. 712; 72 J. P. 259; 24 T. L. R. 490; 52 Sol. Jo. 443; 6 L. G. R. 594.

5243. Evidence of breach—What amounts to—Stranger in possession.]—Where there is a right of entry given for an assigning or underletting, if a person is found in the premises, appearing as the tenant, it is prima facie evidence of an underletting sufficient to call upon deft. to show in what character such person was in possession, as tenant or as servant to the lessee.—*DOE d. 5251. — Onus of proof—On lessee.]—A right to re-enter under a lease is not waived by the lessor unless, knowing the facts on which the right arises, he does something unequivocal which recognises the continuance of the lease. The question whether there has been a waiver in such a case is one of law & the onus is on the lessee to adduce some evidence of the lessor's knowledge, & proof of an act showing recognition of the tenancy does not throw the onus of proving want of knowledge on the lessor.

Property held under a lease which contained a covenant against underletting without the consent of the lessor, & a clause of forfeiture in case of any breach of covenant, was mortgaged by sub-demise to the trustees of a co.'s debenture stock deed. The deed comprised a number of other properties. The trustees made no inquiry as to whether the lessor's consent was necessary to the sub-demise:—Held: the trustees had been guilty of negligence & the ct. was precluded from giving them, under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 4, relief against the forfeiture.—MATTHEWS v. (b) Damages.

5255. Whether too remote—Loss by fire—Assignment to turpentine distiller.]—A lease contained a covenant that the lessee should not assign or sub-let the premises, or any part of them, without the consent in writing of the lessor, his exors., administrators, or assigns; but that such consent should not be unreasonably or capriciously withheld to a responsible assignee or sub-tenant. The lessee, without applying for the consent of the lessor, sub-let the premises to a person who intended, as he knew, to use them, & who did, in fact, use them as a turpentine distillery. The premises having been burnt down by a fire arising from the use of the premises for the business for which they were taken, an action was brought by the lessor for breach of covenant:—Held: the loss caused by the fire was the natural result of the breach of covenant, & was, therefore, recoverable as damages in the action.—LEPLA v. (a) Construction of Restriction.

i. In General.

5259. Consent not to be unreasonably withheld—Whether covenant by lessor to give consent.]—A lessee covenanted with the lessor not to assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, "such consent not being arbitrarily withheld;" & it was provided by the lease that if the lessee should assign the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, "but such consent is not to be arbitrarily withheld," the lessor might re-enter:—Held: there was no covenant by the lessor, either express or implied, not to refuse his consent arbitrarily, but that an

Instead of an inferior liability, but in estimating the value of debt's liability, allowance must be made for the vicissitudes of business & the uncertainty of life & health.—MUNRO v. c. — Rent payable in advance.]—Where, a few days prior to the accruing due of a quarter's rent payable in advance, the lessee assigned without the lessor's leave, in breach of a covenant contained in the lease, the lessor was entitled to recover, as damages for such breach, the rent so payable in advance without any deduction for rents realised during the said quarter under new leases created by the lessor, who finding the property vacant, had taken possession.—PATCHING v. SMITH (1896), 28 O. L. 201.—CAN.

arbitrary refusal would leave the lessee at liberty to assign without the lessor's consent. Semble: an "arbitrary" refusal is equivalent to an "unfair & unreasonable" refusal; & a refusal "upon advice," though the grounds of refusal be not specified, is not "arbitrary."

Two questions arise in this case, the first being whether certain words introduced in the clause prohibiting assignment & whereby pltf. covenants not to assign without licence in writing amount to an absolute covenant on the part of the lessor not to withhold his consent arbitrarily, I am of opinion that they do not constitute a covenant on which the lessee can sue, but are words the only effect of which is to qualify the generality of the phrase into which they are introduced (KELLY, C.B.).—*TRELOAR v. previous consent of the lessor, unless such consent should be unreasonably withheld; (b) at all times during the term to reside upon the hotel & personally carry on the business of a licensee victualler thereon. The lessee asked permission to assign to a limited co. which carried on a brewery business. The lessor, being of opinion that an assignment to brewers would depreciate the goodwill, gave an unconditional consent to the assignment to a private person, but required as a condition of giving his consent to an assignment to a brewery firm that the rent should be increased & the term of the lease extended. In an action by the lessee for a declaration that the lessor was not entitled to impose such terms as a condition of giving his consent, the judge, whose attention was not called to the covenant as to personal residence, held that the objection of the lessor was not in itself unreasonable, but that the lessor was acting contrary to Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 3, in attempting to insist upon an increased rent as a condition of giving his consent, & he declared that the lessee was entitled to assign to the co. without any further consent. The lessor appealed.—Held: without expressing any opinion upon either of the points decided by the ct. below, having regard to the covenant as to personal residence, the lease could not be assigned to a limited co.—JENKINS v. PRICE, [1908] 1 Ch. 10; 77 L. J. Ch. 41; 97 L. T. 734; 24 T. L. R. 70; 52 Sol. Jo. 43; 14 Mans. 343, C. A.

5275.—Possibility of depreciating trade of house.—In 1895 defts. by an underlease demised a public-house known as "The Porcupine" for a term of forty-five years from Mar. 25, 1895, at a certain rent. The underlessee covenanted (inter alia) not to assign or underlet the premises without the written licence of defts. & S., the head lessor, first had & obtained, but the licence of defts. should not be arbitrarily withheld provided the licence from S. was obtained, & that the underlessee or the tenant or occupier of the premises for the time being should purchase all malt liquors to be sold or consumed on the premises or to carry on the business of a licensed victualler. There was the usual power of re-entry on breach of any of the covenants. In 1910 the underlease was vested in pltf.s, who did not reside on the premises, & they contracted to sell the underlease to A., & applied to S. & defts. for their written licence to the transaction. A. was of German origin, but in 1912 had become a naturalised British subject & was in other respects a responsible & respectable person. S. gave his written licence, but defts. refused for these reasons: (a) that the purchaser's name & nationality of origin would tend to depreciate the trade of the house; (b) that in accordance with the regulations or requirements of licensing justices defts. now required that their licensees should be resident on their licensed premises, & that the purchaser had stated that it was not his intention to reside on the premises; & (c) that the purchaser was interested in other licensed & business premises & consequently could not give the attention & supervision to "The Porcupine" that should be bestowed upon it:—Held: pltf.s. were entitled to assign the underlease to A. without the written licence of defts., for that in the circumstances their refusal was wholly unreasonable.—MILLS v. CANNON BREWERY CO., [1920] 2 Ch. 38; 89 L. J. Ch. 354; 123 L. T. 324; 84 J. P. 148; 36 T. L. R. 513; 64 Sol. Jo. 447.

5276.—References not satisfactory.—Pltf., who was the assignee of a lease which contained a covenant not to assign without the consent of the lessors, unless such consent should be unreasonably withheld, applied to the lessors for leave to assign to certain persons. The lessors stated that they would not grant any licence to assign, whereupon pltf.'s solrs. wrote that in view of this attitude they would advise the issue of a writ forthwith. Before the writ was served the lessors wrote again that they were taking up the proposed assignee's references. Subsequently, the lessors wrote stating that having taken up the references they could not accept the proposed assignees. Thereupon pltf. executed an assignment of the premises, & in this action claimed a declaration that the lessors had unreasonably withheld their consent:—Held: the lessor's consent had not been unreasonably withheld & the action failed.—*SHANLY v. Square, for twenty-one years, it was provided that the lease should contain covenants by the lessees not to carry on any business on the premises, or any part thereof, nor to assign or demise without the consent of the lessor,

"such consent not to be unreasonably or vexatiously withheld," & a power of re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. The lessees assigned the premises comprised in this agreement to H., the predecessor of deft. H. never took up a lease. In 1913 pltf. became entitled to the residue of the term of ninety-nine years granted by the head lease of these premises in 1856, & in Feb. 1914, she discovered that a part of the garden of No. 45 had been walled off & built upon for the purpose of being used in connection with the adjoining premises, No. 44, where an hotel was carried on by deft. S. Her solrs. complained of this & various other irregularities. H. having asked pltf.'s leave to assign the residue of his lease to S., consent was refused on Feb. 6, 1914, without any reason being given. On Mar. 19, 1914, H., without having obtained the consent of pltf., assigned No. 45 to S. for the residue of the term of twenty-one years. It was admitted that S. was a respectable & responsible person. In an action by pltf. claiming to recover possession from S.:—Held: (1) pltf. succeeded in the action, as her consent to the assignment had not been unreasonably or vexatiously withheld; (2) H. was bound by the covenant not to assign without consent, inasmuch as such a covenant ran with the land, & bound the assigns, although not mentioned.—*GOLDSTEIN v. 5283. Refusal for collateral reasons—To obtain surrender of lease—No personal objection to proposed assignee.—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign without licence; & the lessor covenanted not to refuse his licence unreasonably or vexatiously. The lessee contracted to assign his lease to pltf. "subject to the landlord's approval." The lessor on being applied to for his licence refused to give it, not from any personal objection to the proposed assignee, but because he wished himself to buy up the lease in order to rebuild the premises. The lessee having failed to obtain the lessor's licence, surrendered the lease to the lessor for the same price for which he had agreed with pltf. In a bill by pltf. against the lessor & lessee for specific performance of the contract to assign the lease to him:—Held: (1) the reference to the landlord's approval in the contract did not throw upon the lessee the duty of taking legal proceedings to oblige the lessor to give his licence; (2) having used all reasonable efforts to induce the lessor to consent, he was at liberty to consider the contract at an end & make his own terms with the lessor. Qu.: whether the refusal on the part of the lessor in the circumstances was unreasonable & vexatious.—*LEHMANN v. 5284. — Proposed assignee a responsible person.—A lessee covenanted with her lessor not to assign the demised premises, or any part thereof, for the whole or any part of the term, without having first obtained a written licence signed by the lessor, such licence not to be unreasonably withheld in the case of any respectable & responsible person who might be the proposed assignee.

The lease also contained a proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant. Pltf., the assignee of the lessor, being desirous of obtaining possession of the premises, commenced negotiations with the lessee for the surrender of the lease. The lessee made an offer to pltf.'s agent to sell her interest to pltf. for £400, but five days later, without further communication with pltf., contracted to assign her interest for the same sum to deft., a respectable & responsible person. The lessee had no reason or preferring deft. to pltf. Pltf. refused to give his licence for the assignment, & brought an action against the deft., to whom the lessee had assigned the lease, for recovery of possession of the premises on the ground of forfeiture by breach of covenant:—Held: pltf. had unreasonably withheld his licence within the meaning of the covenant.—BATES v. DONALDSON, [1896] 2 Q. B. 241; 65 L. J. Q. B. 578; 74 L. T. 751; 60 J. P. 596; 44 W. R. 659; 12 T. L. R. 485, C. A.

5286. — Proposed assignee tenant of adjoining premises held from same landlord.—In a lease for years the lessees covenanted not to assign the premises, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessor, such consent not to be withheld unreasonably in the case of a respectable & responsible person or corpn. The lessees agreed to assign, subject to the consent of the lessor, to R., Ltd., who were in possession of adjoining premises on a yearly tenancy from the same lessor. The lessor refused to give his consent to the assignment on the ground that he would lose good tenants of the adjoining premises, & would have great difficulty in reletting them. The judge held that the licence had been unreasonably withheld, & that the lessees were free to assign:—Held: the refusal of the licence was unreasonable, as the reason given for it was one which had no reference either to the personality of the proposed assignee or to the subject matter of the lease.—Re GIBBS & HOULDER BROTHERS & CO., LTD.'S LEASE, HOULDER BROTHERS & CO., LTD. v. GIBBS, [1925] Ch. 575; 94 L. J. Ch. 312; 133 L. T. 322; 41 T. L. R. 487; 69 Sol. Jo. 541, C. A.

5287. — That house might remain a free house—Proposed assignment to brewers.—The vendor was the lessee of a public-house. The lease under which the property was held contained a covenant against assigning without the consent of the lessor, with the usual qualification as to refusal in the case of a respectable & responsible tenant. The vendor agreed to sell the property to the purchasers, who were brewers, under an open contract. The lessor refused to give his consent to the assignment, stating that the main ground of his objection was that he desired the house to remain a free house. Upon summons taken out by the purchasers asking for a declaration that a good title had not been shown:—Held: the title was not one which could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.—Re MARSHALL & SALT'S CONTRACT, [1900] 2 Ch. 202; 69 L. See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), ss. 144, 205 (xxiii).

5292. What amounts to a fine—Deposit of money—As security for performance of contract.]—A building lease, which had been granted under a building contract relating also to other property, contained an absolute covenant not to assign without licence. The lessors on being applied to for a licence to assign refused to grant it unless the lessee would deposit with them £2,000 as a further security for the performance by him of the unperformed part of the building contract:—Held: the deposit with the lessors of a sum of money which, if the lessee performed the building contract, would revert to him, was not payment of a "fine or sum of money in the nature of a fine" within the meaning of the Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 3, & the lessors might lawfully require such a deposit as a condition for granting the licence.—Re COSH'S CONTRACT, [1897] 1 Ch. 9; 66 L. J. Ch. 28; 75 L. T. 365; 45 W. R. 117; 41 Sol. Jo. 64, C. A.

5293. — Covenant by assignee—To pay rent & perform covenants of lease.]—(1) A lease contained a condition against assigning without licence, which was not to be refused unreasonably, but there was no provision as to payment of a fine in respect of such a licence. Upon an application by the holder of the lease for a licence to assign to deft. in this action pltf., as lessor, required as a condition of granting the licence that deft. should covenant to pay the rent & perform the covenants of the lease during the residue of the term. The licence to assign was by deed, to which deft. was a party, & in which he entered into the stipulated covenant. Deft. subsequently assigned the lease with licence. In an action on deft.'s covenant to recover from him one quarter's rent due from but unpaid by the tenant:—Held: whether such a covenant as deft. entered into was or was not in the nature of a fine within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 3, the statute, not having made the payment of a fine illegal, afforded no defence to an action on deft.'s covenant. Semble: a covenant which secures to a lessor no sum of money beyond the rent to which he is entitled under the lease is not in the nature of a fine within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 3.

(2) It may well be that, as between the parties to the lease, the lessee would have been entitled to disregard the absence of a licence, if the lessor refused to grant one unless & except upon the condition of a covenant for payment of rent during the term (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—WAITE v. JENNINGS, [1906] 2 K. B. 11; 75 L. J. K. B. 542; 95 L. T. 1; 54 W. R. 511; 22 T. L. R. 510, C. A. Annotations:—As to (2) Appl. Andrew v. Bridgman, [1908] 1 K. B. 596. *Consd. West v. 5295. — Demand for increased rent.]—The lessee of a hotel, who had covenanted not to assign without the lessor's consent unless "unreasonably withheld," asked permission to assign to a certain brewery. The lease had twelve years to run. The lessor, who entertained a strong opinion that a brewery tie would depreciate the value of the hotel, gave an unconditional consent to the assignment to a private person who would carry on the business as a free house, & added, "but if you desire to assign the tenancy to a brewery firm, then the rent must be increased by £25 per annum & the term extended from twelve to twenty-one years." His whole object in imposing these conditions was to recoup himself for the depreciation that would be caused by the tie:—Held: (1) the demand of an increased rent as a condition for consenting to an assignment to a brewery was a demand of a "fine or sum of money in the nature of a fine," & being as such directly contrary to the proviso precluding any such demand imported into the lease by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 3, was unreasonable. The consent had therefore been "unreasonably withheld," & the lessee was entitled to assign to the brewery without further consent; (2) the lessee, having no cause of action against the lessor for unreasonably withholding his consent, was not entitled to the costs of an action to obtain the above declaratory judgment.—JENKINS v. PRICE, [1907] 2 Ch. 229; 76 L. J. Ch. 507; 23 T. L. R. 608; on appeal, [1908] 1 Ch. 10, C. A.

A vendor agreed with a purchaser for the sale of a leasehold hotel, subject to the consent of the lessor being obtained to the assignment of the lease, & the purchaser paid a deposit on his purchase-money. The vendor died without having completed his contract, & the purchaser then brought an action against his legal personal representative for specific performance. Deft., being desirous of freeing the vendor's estate from the action, induced the lessor to refuse his consent to the assignment, which the lessor accordingly did, & the purchaser thus lost his bargain. Thereupon the purchaser amended his action by claiming damages & return of the deposit:—Held: pltf. was entitled, not only to the return of his deposit, with interest & costs of investigating title, but also to the damages he had sustained by the loss of his bargain through the omission of deft. to obtain the lessor's consent.—*DAY v. B. agreed to assign the lease to D.'s nominee; D. to pay the expense of the assignment, & £180 on a day certain for the improvements & manure; to take the crops at a valuation; & to have immediate possession:—Held: to support an action on this agreement, B. must show that he had obtained C.'s consent in writing to the assignment; though D. had taken possession of the premises, had cut down the crops, & had paid part of the £180 to B.—*MASON v. 5315. ——— Walver.]—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor. At an interview between the lessor, the lessee, & deft., the lessor, by words & conduct, led both the lessee & deft. to believe that he accepted deft. as assignee of the lease. Deft. thereupon entered into obligations with the lessee to the knowledge of the lessor. At the interview there was also handed to deft. by the lessee, in the presence of the lessor, a letter from the lessor to the lessee giving the lessee an option of renewing the lease or of assigning it. The lease having been assigned to deft., the lessor brought an action for the recovery of the premises, on the ground that his written consent to the assignment had not been obtained:—Held: (1) there was a waiver of the provision in the lease that there should be a written consent to the assignment of the lease; (2) the option was equivalent to a consent in writing to any approved tenant, that is, to a respectable & responsible tenant within the meaning of the lease.—*MILLARD v. There was a proviso in the lease for re-entry upon breach of a covenant. After the passing of Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (c. 35), the lessor gave Bradburn a licence in writing to assign, transfer, & set over the premises to deft. Jones, his exors., administrators, & assigns, upon condition that Jones would not at any time assign or transfer the premises without the consent of the lessor, his heirs or assigns. Jones assigned the three excepted acres to another deft., Edge, for the remainder of the term, & let the rest of the premises by the year to another deft., Jones; this Jones let the thirty acres to Edge by the year. There was no other licence by the lessor but that mentioned. In an action of ejectment to which deft. Edge alone appeared & defended only as to the excepted three acres:—Held: the words of the licence did not justify the letting of the thirty acres without a further licence; & this breach of covenant created a forfeiture of the whole of the premises let under the original lease.—*EYTON v. Deft. was a respectable & responsible tenant, but the lessor declined to consent to the underlease, unless a certain undertaking was given by deft. This refusal to consent was also pleaded as a defence to an action by pltf. for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: deft. would get a good title & run no substantial risk of having it impeached on the ground of any breach of covenant by the granting of an underlease. He was therefore ordered to specifically perform the contract.—WHITE v. HAY (1895), 72 L. T. 281.

Sect. 1.—Right to assign or underlet: Sub-sect. 2, D. (f) ii., iii. & iv., (g), & E. (a).]

5331. ———.]—By a lease made in 1901 a house in Oxford Street was demised by defts. to the predecessors of pltf. for thirty-one years, less fifteen days, at a rent of £450 a year. The lease contained some onerous covenants, including a covenant by the lessees that they would not, without the licence in writing of the lessors, such licence not to be unreasonably or arbitrarily withheld, assign, transfer, or underlet the demised premises. In 1905 pltf. purchased the residue of the term in the lease & desired to assign it to his wife. The lessors objected to an assignment to a married woman, & would only grant their licence to assign on condition that pltf. executed a covenant for himself, his exors. & administrators, at all times during the continuance of the lease of 1901 to pay the rent & perform all the covenants, agreements, & provisions contained in the lease, as if he had been a party thereto. Upon a summons in an action by the lessee against the lessors, the lessee claimed a declaration that he was entitled to assign the lease without the licence of the lessors, & free from conditions:—Held: the condition sought to be imposed by the lessors was altogether unreasonable, & the declaration asked would be made; but as no relief was sought against the lessors the declaratory order would be made without costs, according to the principle laid down in Jenkins v. Price, No. 5295, ante.—EVANS v. LEVY, [1910] 1 Ch. 452; 79 L. J. Ch. 383; 102 L. T. 128.

iii. Whether Grant of Licence Enforceable.

5333. Alleged acquiescence in assignment.]—The ct. will not compel a deft. specifically to perform an agreement when the result would be to compel him to commit a breach of a prior agreement with another person.

The lessee of three acres of land agreed in Jan. 1874, to let one acre to pltf. for the whole of the residue of his term, & he agreed also to sell to pltf. his interest in the whole three acres at any time within five years from the date of the agreement. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign the property, or to part with the possession of it, or any part of it, without the written consent of the lessor. Pltf. was not, in fact, aware of this covenant. He was let into possession of the one acre, & he laid out money upon it, & also upon adjoining property of his own, with the view of occupying the two together. The lessor was aware of this expenditure. In Oct. 1877, the lessee, without pltf.'s knowledge surrendered the lease to the lessor, in exchange for a new lease for a longer term of the three acres, together with other property. The new lease contained a similar covenant by the lessee not to assign, etc., without licence. In Nov. 1877, pltf. gave the lessee notice of his desire to exercise his option to purchase his interest under the original lease in the three acres. The lessee declined to perform his agreement, on the ground that the lessor refused to give his licence to an assignment. Pltf. brought the action against the lessee & the lessor, claiming specific performance of the agreement by the lessee, & to compel the lessor to give his licence, on the ground (inter alia) that he had acquiesced in pltf.'s expenditure, knowing that he was acting in the mistaken belief that the lessee was able to assign the property to him. It appeared that the lessor was not, when pltf.'s expenditure was incurred, aware of the existence of the lessee's covenant not to assign without licence:—Held: (1) the lessee could not be compelled to perform his agreement, inasmuch as his doing so would involve a breach of his prior covenant not to assign without licence, for that, as pltf. was seeking to treat the original lease as still subsisting for one purpose, he must treat the covenant not to assign contained in it as still subsisting; (2) inasmuch as the lessor was ignorant of his own rights, & there was nothing to show that he knew that pltf. had been acting in ignorance of his legal rights, the lessor could not be compelled to give his licence to assign to pltf. Mistake of fact is not the less a ground for relief because the person who has made the mistake had the means of knowledge.—WILLMOTT v. BARBER (1880), 15 Ch. D. 96; 49 L. J. Ch. 792; 43 L. The £50 was paid, & the landlord gave the required consent verbally. Mrs. W. came with her furniture to the house, & carried on the business for some time, deft., however, still residing there. Before the remaining £70 was paid, & before exclusive possession was given to deft., the landlord withdrew his consent:—Held: the contract being conditional on the obtaining his consent, & no change of tenancy having taken place before he withdrew it, it must be considered as never having been given; so that the condition not having been performed, the £50 had been paid to deft. on a consideration which had failed, & might be recovered from him as for so much money had & received.—*WRIGHT v. Pleas, fifth, that before deft. could procure his bankers to remit, etc., deft. was disapproved of by the landlord, etc.; sixth, on equitable grounds, that before demand by pltf. of payment of the I.O.U. deft. was disapproved of, etc., & that pltf. was thereby disabled to sell the lease, etc., to deft. Replication thereto, that before any such disapproval, etc., deft. applied to the landlord to accept him as tenant, & afterwards, & before any such disapproval, deft. withdrew such application, & declined to the landlord to be accepted as tenant; & that deft., by deft.'s own act, & without any default in pltf., procured the landlord to disapprove, etc.:—Held: (1) the fifth plea furnished a good answer to pltf.'s claim; (2) the sixth plea was probably bad, as confessing a breach of contract, entitling pltf. to the use of the £500, until the time arrived for the completion of the purchase, & showing no grounds on which a ct. of equity would restrain a party from recovering damages in respect of such breach; (3) the replication stated a good answer to the plea.—*DAVIS v. Shortly afterwards pltf. requested deft. to execute the lease, but he declined on the ground that the lease contained a covenant not to assign or underlet without the consent of his lessor, & that the lessor had refused such consent, except on payment of £50, & an increased rent of £6 per annum. Pltf. then filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement, praying that if deft. should be unable in consequence of the refusal of his lessor to consent to the underlease, or otherwise to perform the agreement, he might be ordered to pay to pltf. damages for the injury he had sustained through the breach thereof:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a decree in the terms of his prayer.—*HILTON v. They were ready to consent to the assignment to F. provided he would execute a duplicate of the agreement containing this stipulation. Though repeatedly communicated with on the subject he delayed doing so. He entered into a contract with B. to sell his interest in the royalty, it was afterwards found that the lessors absolutely refused their assent to the transfer, & F. was unable to perform his contract with B. In an action by B. against F. for its non-performance:—Held: B. could only recover the expenses he had incurred, but not damages beyond them.—BAIN v. FOTHERGILL (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 158; 43 L. (d) Winding Up of Tenant Company.

5380. Position of liquidator & trustee in bankruptcy distinguished.]—(1) A covenant in a lease to a co. against assignment without the consent of the lessor is binding on the liquidator in a compulsory winding up of the co. There is no distinction for this purpose between a voluntary & a compulsory winding up.

(2) The cases in bkpcy. in which it has been held that a trustee in bkpcy. can assign free from bkpt.'s covenant against assignment without licence depend on the circumstance that bkpt.'s leasehold interest vests in his trustee by operation of law, so that he is not an assign of the bkpt. & consequently not bound by the covenant. These cases therefore have no application to a liquidator of a co., because the co.'s leasehold interest remains vested in the co. after a winding up order, & the liquidator acts on behalf of the co. in assigning it.—Re FARROW'S BANK, LTD., [1921] 2 Ch. 164; 90 L. The devising a term was a doing or putting it away, the lessee becoming a bkpt. was a putting or doing it away, a dying intestate was a putting it away; so, being in debt by confessing a judgment & having the term taken in execution, was the like; but none of these amounted to an assignment, or to a breach of the covenant or condition (per CUR.).—*CRUSOE d. 5387. Covenant including assigns—Whether binding on underlessee.]—A lease of mines was granted by S. to W., his exors., administrators, & assigns (described as the "lessee or lessees"), W. covenanting that the lessee or lessees would not assign or underlet without the consent of S., his heirs or assigns. There was a proviso of re-entry in case they did so. W. died, & his exor. agreed, with the consent of S., to underlet a part of the property comprised in the lease to B., the underlease to contain "the like provisions & conditions" as were contained in the original lease. W.'s interest in the original lease was then assigned to C., subject to the agreement with B. A question was raised by C., as underlessor, whether the lease to B. ought to be so framed as to require the consent of the original lessor or of the underlessor to any assignment or underlease by B.:—Held: (1) the lease must be so framed as to require only the consent of the underlessor, & also upon the true construction of the original lease, the consent of S. was not required to any assignment or underlease made by an underlessee of whom S. had approved; (2) the original lessor could not, by the terms of a licence to underlet, enlarge the proviso for re-entry reserved by the original lease.—*WILLIAMSON v. 5406. Lessee to relinquish possession—Agreement relating to sale of an interest in land.]—Where A., being possessed of a messuage & premises for the residue of a certain term of years, agreed with B. to relinquish possession to him, & to suffer him to become tenant of the premises for the residue of the term, in consideration of B.'s paying a sum of money towards completing certain repairs of the premises:—Held: (1) this was an agreement relating to the sale of an interest in land, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4; (2) in an action brought by A. on this contract, B. was entitled to avail himself, under non assumpsit, of the objection that there was no memorandum or note in writing, etc., of such contract.—*BUTTEMERE v. 5407. ———.]—(1) A party possessed of a term of years in certain premises, agreed by parol with another that the lessee should quit possession on a certain day & pay all outgoings up to that time, in consideration of which, the other agreed to pay him the sum of £150 & take a fair valuation of all the things which the lessee had to part with, except furniture, the purchaser having previously made an agreement with the lessor for a new lease to him on the determination of the existing term:—Held: the above contract was within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, as being an interest in land, & consequently void for want of a written agreement.

(2) Another contract similar to the former, save that instead of saying that pltf. was to quit possession of the land, it stated that he was "to part with it, & that deft. was to take same":—Held: within the meaning of the statute.—SMITH v. TOMBS (1839), 3 Jur. 72.

5408. ———.]—An agreement respecting the transfer of an interest in land, required by Stat. Frauds to be in writing & signed, cannot be enforced by an action upon the agreement against the transferee for the stipulated consideration, notwithstanding that the transfer has been effected & nothing remains to be done but to pay the consideration; but when, after the transfer, the transferee admits to the transferor that he owes him the stipulated price, the amount may be recovered in a count upon an account stated.

A count in assumpsit stated that A. was the occupier of a farm, as tenant to one V.; that B., deft., was desirous of renting the farm from V., & had applied to & requested A. to surrender, & relinquish possession thereof, to V., & to endeavour to prevail upon V. to accept such surrender, & to accept B. as tenant in lieu of A.; & that, in consideration that A. would surrender, & relinquish possession of, the farm to V., & would also apply to V. & endeavour to prevail upon him to accept of such surrender, & to accept B. as tenant in lieu of pltf., B. promised to pay A. £100 when he should become such tenant. It then averred that A. did surrender, & relinquish, etc., & did apply to & endeavour to prevail upon V. to accept of such surrender, & to accept B. as tenant in lieu of A.; & that V. accepted the surrender, & accepted B. as tenant; but that B. refused to pay the £100:—Held: this was a contract for an interest in or concerning lands; & therefore the special count could only be proved by a note or memorandum in writing, in conformity with Stat. Frauds, s. 4; but A. was entitled to recover the £100 upon a count on an account stated, upon proof that B. had, since he obtained possession of the farm, acknowledged his liability & promised to pay that sum.—COCKING v. WARD (1845), 1 C. B. 858; 15 L. J. C. P. 245; 135 E. R. 781.

5409. ———.]—In consideration that A., who was tenant of a messuage & premises under a parol agreement for a seven years' lease, would give up the immediate possession thereof to B., in order that B. might enter thereon as tenant, & also as a compensation for certain improvements made by A. on the premises, & for the value of certain articles left thereon by A., B. agreed to pay A. £100. A. accordingly relinquished & gave up possession of the premises to B., who was thereupon accepted as tenant from year to year, at a different rent from that formerly paid by A.; & B. afterwards, in part performance of the agreement on his part, paid A. £51. In an action brought by A., in the county ct., to recover the balance of the £100, the judge ruled that the contract in respect of which pltf. sued was not a contract for the sale of an interest in or concerning lands, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4. The ct., on appeal, reversed his decision.—KELLY v. WEBSTER (1852), 12 C. B. 283; 21 L. J. C. P. 163; 19 L. T. O. S. 298; 16 J. P. 458; 16 Jur. 838; 138 E. R. 912.

5410. ———.]—In consideration that A., who was in the possession & occupation of premises wherein he carried on the business of a milkman, would yield up possession & occupation of the premises to B., & permit him thenceforth to occupy same, & would assign over to B. all his property in the stock & plant, & deliver same to B., the latter promised to pay A. a certain sum:—Held: this was a contract for an interest in or concerning lands, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—SMART v. HARDING (1855), 15 C. B. 652; 3 C. L. R. 351; 24 L. J. C. P. 76; 1 Jur. N. S. 311; 3 W. R. 245; 139 E. R. 581.

Annotation:—Distd. Lavery v. Turley (1860), 6 H. & N. 239.

5411. ———.]—By agreement, not in writing, between pltf. & deft., it was agreed that pltf. should take possession of a brickyard, which deft. was occupying as tenant, & take the plant & bricks there at a valuation; & that deft. should pay up all rent then due, & endeavour to induce the landlord to accept pltf. as tenant. Pltf. took possession of the brickyard, & gave deft. a warrant of attorney as security for payment of the sum at which the bricks & plant were valued. A distress was afterwards put in upon the premises, & the plant & bricks sold, for rent due from deft. before the agreement; & pltf. was turned out of possession by the landlord. In an action by pltf. against deft., for the breach of the agreement to pay up the rent:—Held: the contract & consideration were each single & entire; the contract, taken in its entirety, was a contract for the sale of an interest in lands, & not being in writing, was voidable under Stat. Frauds, s. 4; & pltf., therefore, could not sever & sue upon that part which related to the payment of the rent.—HODGSON v. JOHNSON (1858), E. B. & E. 685; 28 L. J. Q. B. 88; 5 Jur. N. S. 290; 120 E. R. 666.

5412. ——— Agreement executed.—Pltf. & deft. agreed, by word of mouth, that pltf. should pay £37 for the interest of deft. in premises occupied by him as a slaughter-house, & for the fixtures; deft. to return £10 if pltf. were refused a licence to use the premises as a slaughter-house. The premises & fixtures were transferred to pltf.; & deft. received the £37. Subsequently, this action was brought to recover £10, on an allegation that the licence to use the premises had been refused to pltf. A nonsuit was directed, on the ground that the contract was for an interest in land, & was void under Stat. Frauds, sect. 4. On a rule to set aside the nonsuit:—Held: the contract being executed as far as regarded the land, & the promise sued on relating wholly to money, pltf. might recover, though the contract was not in writing.—GREEN v. SADDINGTON (1857), 7 E. & B. 503; 29 L. T. O. S. 144; 3 Jur. N. S. 717; 5 W. R. 593; 119 E. R. 1333.

5413. ——— ]—To an action for goods sold deft. pleaded, that he was possessed of a public-house, & it was agreed that, in consideration that deft. would give up possession of the same, pltf. would pay deft. £100 & discharge deft. from the debt; that pltf. paid the £100, & deft. quitted the house. The agreement was not in writing:—Held: having been executed, it was receivable as evidence to prove the plea. Semle: the plea, though pleaded as an equitable defence, was a good plea at common law, by way of accord & satisfaction.

The objection is that the agreement is one which, by Stat. Frauds, is required to be in writing; & that would be so if it were sought to enforce it as an agreement. But it is pleaded as a fact that deft. performed the agreement, & pltf. accepted such performance in satisfaction. The objection that the agreement was not in writing is got rid of (POLLOCK, C.B.).—LAVERY v. TURLEY (1860), 6 H. & N. 239; 30 L. J. Ex. 49; 158 E. 5414. Effect of part performance.—A father verbally promised in consideration of his daughter's marriage to give her a house as a wedding present, & immediately after the marriage he put the daughter & her husband into possession. The father was then the owner of the house, which was leasehold & was subject to a charge in favour of a building society, payable by instalments. The father paid the instalments which fell due during his lifetime, & at his death there remained a balance of £110, which fell due shortly afterwards:—Held: the verbal promise to give the house having been established, the possession took the case out of Stat. Frauds.—UNGLEY v. UNGLEY (1877), 5 Ch. D. 887; 46 L. J. Ch. 854; 37 L. T. 52; 41 J. P. 628; 25 W. R. 733, C. A.

Directly after the marriage, possession of the house was given up by pltf. & was held by the son, & he carried on the business there for his own benefit till his death, which occurred in Apr. 1891. Soon after that event a family disagreement arose, & pltf. brought an action of ejectment to recover possession of the house:—Held: the possession of the house given up to the son, equivalent to part performance, dispensed with the necessity of a writing; & as nothing was said to the contrary, the gift was free from incumbrances.—*SHARMAN v. By deed of assignment dated Mar. 30, 1895, T., in consideration of £50, "assigned to S. & C., therein called the purchasers, their & each of their exors., administrators, & assigns, all the hereditaments & premises comprised in & demised by the said deed of Dec. 30, 1886, to hold the said hereditaments & premises unto the purchasers, their & each of their exors., administrators, & assigns for the residue of seventy-nine & a half years less ten days, & the purchasers & each of them for himself & each of them for his heirs, exors., & administrators covenanted with the vendor that they the purchasers & each of them & each of their exors., & administrators would thenceforth pay the rent & perform the covenants & indemnify the vendor, etc." S. & C. thereupon entered into possession of the premises & carried on business therein in co-partnership as partners at will & occupied the premises as part of the partnership property until Oct. 18, 1900, on which date by a memorandum of agreement S. & C., after reciting that they had determined to terminate & dissolve the said partnership as from that date upon the following terms, agreed as follows—namely: "C. thereby retired from the said partnership & relinquished all his interest in the partnership assets & thereby assigned to S. all his interest in the sub-lease of the premises & other partnership assets, together with the goodwill of the business, & S. thereby undertook to pay, satisfy, & discharge the liabilities of the business & to indemnify C. therefrom as from that date. C. thereby undertook to execute a formal assignment to give effect thereto." No formal assignment was ever executed. S. died on Feb. 21, 1908, leaving debts, his exors. C. was still alive. E. Assignment of Personal Property.

5426. Grant of chattels in house—Whether leaseholds included.]—Lessee for years of the pawning of the park of H., granted all his goods & chattels movable & immovable within the park:—Held: the lease of the pawning passed by these words.

If a man has a lease for years of a house, & grants all his goods & chattels being in the same house, as well the lease of the house as the goods within it passes by such a grant (DYER, J.).—ANON. (1572), 3 Leon. 19; Dal. 82; 74 E. R. 514.

5427. For benefit of creditors—Whether leaseholds included.]—V., the lessee of a mill & premises at a rack rent, being in insolvent circumstances, executed an assignment, whereby, after reciting his insolvency, & that he had agreed to assign "all his debts, personal estate, & effects of every description, to C. & B., in trust for the benefit of his creditors," he conveyed & assigned to C. & B. all & singular the stock in trade, implements & utensils in trade, corn, grain, hay, horses, carts, & carriages, crops of every kind, as well severed as not, & personal estate whatsoever of him the said V., in, upon, or about the mill & premises now in his use or occupation, or elsewhere, etc., except the wearing apparel of himself & family; & also CANN* (1838), 3 M. & W. 343; 1 Horn & H. 67; 7 L. J. Ex. 108; 2 Jur. 256; 150 E. R. 1176.

5428. ———.]—By a deed, reciting that A. was indebted to B. in the sum of £60 for goods supplied, A. assigned to B. "all & every the household goods & furniture, stock in trade, & other household effects whatsoever, & all other goods, chattels, & effects now being, or which shall hereafter be, in, upon, or about the messuage or dwelling-house & premises occupied by A., known as the Bull's Head, situate, etc., & all other the personal estate whatsoever of or to which A. is now & from time to time & at all times hereafter (so long as any money shall remain due to B.), & all the estate of A. in, to, or upon the premises hereby assigned or intended so to be," absolutely. Then followed a power to B. to sell & dispose of "the same premises," & out of the proceeds to pay the £60 & expenses, & to render the surplus to A.:—Held: notwithstanding the general words, the deed, which was registered under Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36), did not pass to B. the term which A. had in the Bull's Head.—*HARRISON v. occupied by him, in M. aforesaid or elsewhere, where the said goods, chattels, & effects might be found, & to take away, sell, & dispose thereof":—Held: under these words, F.'s term in the dwelling-house & premises passed to the trustees.—DOE d. FARMER v. HOWE (1840), 9 L. J. Q. B. 352.

5432. Mortgage of personalty—Power reserved to mortgagee to disclaim lease—Effect of disclaimer.—A., pltf., who was the owner of a house, granted a lease of same to B., who borrowed on Mar. 11, 1869, a sum of money from debt., & as security mortgaged by deed of assignment all her personal property in the house, & "all the freehold hereditaments, goods, chattels, effects, debts, securities, deeds, documents, vouchers, books of account, fixtures, & personal property of, in or to which the mtgor. was or during this security shall become seised of," etc., "except the necessary wearing apparel of the mtgor., & any leaseholds, or any portion of the term or terms for which such leaseholds are or may be holden, which the mtgee., his solr. or agent, shall at any time, by writing, indorsed thereon, or referring thereto, declare not to be included therein, to have, hold," etc. Debt. had no knowledge of the lease until the following July 8, when he indorsed upon the mtge. deed, "I hereby declare that the lease of the premises, 8, Maida Vale, & the interest of the mtgor. in such premises, are not included herein or accepted by me." A quarter's rent for the premises having become due on Mar. 25, 1869, pltf. sued debt. for the amount as assignee of the lease:—Held: he was right in so doing, & the indorsement on the deed by debt. was no answer.—*DEBENHAM v. 5436. Request to become tenant under same terms as old lease—Acceptance by lessor—Occupation.—The Company of Proprietors of Drury Lane Theatre, made a corp'n. by 50 Geo. 3, c. ccxiv, in 1836 leased the counters of the saloon of the theatre & the privilege of selling fruit, etc., to Mrs. G. for seven years. She died in 1837, & her son, debt., soon after applied to the committee of the theatre to become tenant on the same terms as the lease, & they accepted him. He occupied down to Jan. 1843, & paid rent down to the latter part of 1841. In an action for use & occupation:—Held: (1) it was a question for the jury whether debt. had occupied as assignee of the lease to his mother, or upon a fresh taking upon the same terms as the lease, & if the latter, he was liable in the present action; (2) he would be so liable, although in Apr. 1843, he & his brother had taken out letters of administration to Mrs. G. (therein described as a feme covert at the time of her death),

In an action for non-assignment:—Held: the oral agreement was admissible, as it is in analogy with the delivery of a deed as an escrow, & neither varies nor contradicts the writing, but suspends the commencement of the obligation.—WALLIS v. LITTELL (1861), 11 C. B. N. S. 369; 31 L. J. C. P. 100; 5 L. T. 489; 8 Jur. N. S. 745; 10 W. R. 192; 142 E. R. 840.

a. Purchase-money payable by instalments.]—O. agreed to sell, to S. certain leasehold property & premises, for £250, to be paid as follows: £50 down,

& the remainder in four equal annual instalments. Then followed a covenant by O. that if S. should duly pay the said sums, & should pay & save O. harmless from the rent due by the leases under which O. held, then O.

would assign & convey the leasehold, & the appurtenances thereof, to S.:—Held: an agreement to assign only, not an assignment of O.'s interest.—TAYLOR v. SUTTON (1869), 18 U. C. R. 615.—CAN.

5444. Indorsement postponing completion of contract to assign.—By an indorsement on the agreement the day for delivering the possession was enlarged:—Held: such indorsement constituted a fresh agreement. Qu.: whether it was of the value of £20, so as to require a stamp.—BACON v. ROGERS (1837), 2 M. & W. 443; Murp. & H. 146; 6 L. J. Ex. 145; 1 Jur. 455; 150 E. R. 831.

5447. Lease & goodwill of public-house—Whether subject to ad valorem duty in respect of goodwill.—(1) A contract for the sale of leasehold premises contained a proviso that in the event of the consent of the landlord to the assignment of the lease not being obtained the vendor should, at the option of the purchaser, execute a declaration of trust of the lease in his favour. Two days afterwards a declaration of trust was executed, by which the equitable interest in the premises vested in the purchaser:—Held: the contract being one for the sale of a legal estate, & there being no obligation on the purchaser to accept a declaration of trust, it was not a contract for the sale of an equitable estate or interest in property within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59 (1).

(2) The goodwill of a public-house is not necessarily a mere enhancement of the value of the licensed premises, & so attached to the possession of the premises as to constitute "land" within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59 (1). It may, therefore, be "property except lands" within the meaning of the sect.; & upon an agreement for the sale of the lease & goodwill of a public-house the instrument may be chargeable with ad valorem duty.—WEST LONDON SYNDICATE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1898] 2 Q. B. 507; 67 L. J. Q. B. 956; 79 L. T. 289; 47 W. R. 125; 14 T. L. R. 569; 42 Sol. Jo. 714, C. A.

5448. Calculation of duty—Counterpart of under-lease operating as assignment.—In support of an issue of assignment, plffs. offered in evidence a deed, executed by deft. only, which when executed was intended by the parties to be the counterpart of a lease, & was stamped with a duty of £1 10s., but, the grantor having thereby parted with all his interest in the premises, the original deed became by operation of law an assignment:—Held: the deed so tendered in evidence was not admissible for the purpose of proving an assignment, the proper stamp being £1 15s., under the general clause in the schedule to Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), applicable to "deeds of any kind whatever, not otherwise charged, or expressly exempted from all stamp duty."—BAKER v. GOSTLING (1834), 1 Bing. N. C. 246; 1 Scott, 58; 4 L. J. C. P. 31; 131 E. R. 1111.

5449. Rent apportioned on assignment of part of leaseholds.—The lessee, for a term of ninety-nine years at a yearly rent, of a piece of land with three houses thereon, assigned & conveyed two of the houses, in consideration of £503 for the residue of the term subject to an apportioned rent representing two-thirds of the rent reserved by the lease. By the deed of assignment the assignee covenanted to pay such apportioned rent, & to keep the assignor indemnified in respect of it, & the assignor covenanted to pay the remaining one-third of the rent reserved by the lease, & to keep the assignee indemnified in respect of it. The three houses were of the same annual value:—Held: for the purpose of fixing the ad valorem duty chargeable under the heading "Conveyance or transfer on sale of any property" in Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), sched. I., the payment of rent by the assignee was not part of the consideration for the assignment, & duty was chargeable upon the £503 only.—SWAYNE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1900] 1 Q. B. 172; 69 L. J. SUB-SECT. 1.—LIABILITIES OF LESSEE TO LESSOR.

A. In General.

5450. Original lessee continues liable on covenants—Privy of contract remains.—Debt lies against the original lessee for rent accrued after assignment of his term, for the privy of contract remains notwithstanding the assignment.

There are three manner of privities, privy in respect of estate only, privy in respect of contract only, & privy in respect of estate & contract together; as if the lessor grants over his reversion . . . between the grantee & the lessee is privy of estate only, so between the lessor & the assignee of the lessee, for no contract was made between them. Privy of contract only is personal privy & extends only to the person of the lessor & to the person of the lessee; when the lessee assigned over his interest, notwithstanding his assignment the privy of contract remained between them, although the privy of estate be removed by the act of the lessee himself (per CUR.).—WALKER'S CASE (1587), 3 Co. It is extremely clear that a person who enters into an express covenant in a lease continues liable on his covenant notwithstanding the lease be assigned over (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—AURIOL v. 5452a. ———.]—Why is the assignee liable to the landlord? Because of the privity of estate. The original lessee is liable in respect of the privity of contract. The liability of an assignee of a lease, begins & ends with his character of assignee. In him there is no personal confidence by the lessor. Ever since the case of Pitcher v. Tovey, No. 5563, post, it has been held that, by an assignment, an assignee exonerates himself from all claims in respect of rent, even though he assigns to a beggar. An assignee may, whenever he pleases, assign again; & the moment he divests himself of the character of assignee, he also shakes off his liability for rent. It is very different as to the original lessee, for he, in all cases before the late Act, remained liable to his covenant to pay the rent, notwithstanding his assignment, & whoever might be the assignee; but an assignee is only liable by privity of estate, which ceases when he ceases to be assignee, & loses that character (PLUMER, V.-C.).—ONSLow v. CORRIE (1817), 2 Madd. 330; 56 E. R. 357.

[Pltf.] had contented himself with denying that rent was due from himself; whereas it was most correctly stated to be due (per CUR.).—STURGESS v. FARRINGTON (1812), 4 Taunt. 614; 128 E. R. 471.

5458. Covenant on behalf of "assigns"—Whether underlessee included.—The lessee of a public-house covenanted with his lessor, pltf., that he, his exors., administrators, or assigns would not wilfully do or suffer any act or thing which might be a breach of the rules & regulations established by law for the conducting of licensed public-houses, or be a reasonable ground for the withdrawing or withholding of all or any of the licenses for the sale of beer & ale, wine, & spirituous liquors therein. The lessee assigned the term to debts., who underlet the premises. The underlessee committed an offence against the licensing laws, the result of which was that the renewal of the licenses was refused. In 1813, plffs. contracted to sell the fee to A., who thereupon bought from deft. the residue of his term, & without the assent of plffs., put in a new tenant, who occupied for two years. The contract for sale of the fee was then rescinded:—Held: plffs. were entitled to recover from deft., in an action for use & occupation, the rent from 1813 to the end of the original term, as there had been no surrender in writing of his interest, & as plffs. had not assented to the change of tenancy.—MATTHEWS v. 5465. — Demise by parol—Subsequent assignment of reversion.]—S. made a parol demise of a tenement to M. from year to year at a rent. M. by deed assigned all his estate, interest, & term in the tenement to a third party, but S. refused to accept the third party as his tenant. Afterwards S. assigned his reversion to plffs., who never accepted the third party as their tenant, & brought an action against M. for rent in arrear:—Held: (1) as no estate remained in M. after his assignment of his yearly tenancy, 4 & 5 Ann. c. 3, s. 9, did not apply; & (2) there was no privity of estate or of contract between plff.'s & M., & therefore the action could not be maintained.

A tenant from year to year may make a valid assignment of his interest, if not at common law, at any rate by virtue of Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), & after such assignment no estate or interest in the premises remains in him.—ALLCOCK v. MOORHOUSE (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 366; 47 L. T. 404; 47 J. P. 85; 30 W. R. 871, C. A.

5466. Liability on assignment of agreement for lease.]—Pltf. agreed in writing to let certain premises to deft. for seven years. Deft. entered into possession, but subsequently, with the consent of pltf., assigned his interest in the agreement & premises. No lease of the premises was ever granted. Shortly before the expiration of the term pltf. commenced an action against deft. for three quarters' rent, but this action was heard after the expiration of the seven years:—Held: specific performance of the agreement would have been granted, & the action was maintainable.—GILBEY v. COSSEY (1912), 106 L. T. 607; 56 Sol. Jo. 303, D. C.

5467. —.]—Deft., by an agreement in writing but not under seal, leased certain premises from plffs., as tenant from year to year. The agreement contained an express agreement to pay rent at certain specific times. Subsequently plffs. permitted deft. to assign the lease on condition that their rights as to rent, etc., against deft. were not interfered with:—Held: in an action for rent against deft., as the original tenant, the mere fact that the original lease was not under seal did not prevent plffs. from recovering the rent from deft.—BETTS (J.) & SONS, LTD. v. PRICE (1924), 40 T. L. R. 589.

5468. Liability for whole rent—Assignment of part of premises.]—If a lessee assign part of the land demised, a grantee of the reversion shall have debt against him for the whole rent.—BROOM v. HORE (1598), Cro. Eliz. 633; cited in 3 Co. Rep. p. 24 a; 78 E. R. 873.

5469. — By joint lessee.]—If one of two lessees assign his interest, & the other die before the rent becomes due, an action of debt in the debit et detinet will lie against the assignee & extrix. of the deceased lessee, for the whole rent.

Severance of the land shall not make a severance of the action of pltf., if it should, great inconvenience would follow, by the several assignments of undertenants among themselves of which the lessor might not have notice & therefore he may at all times resort for his rent to his first lessee (CROKE, J.).—IPSWICH CORPN. v. 5471. Effect of subsequent surrender of part by assignee.]—Pltf. demised premises to deft. for a term of years by deed containing a covenant by deft. for the payment of the rent reserved. Deft. assigned the term, & his assignee surrendered a portion of the premises to pltf. In an action on the covenant pltf. claimed to recover the amount of the apportioned rent for the part of the premises not surrendered:—Held: the liability of deft. on the covenant was not extinguished by the surrender of part of the demised premises, but he still remained liable thereon at any rate to the amount claimed. Qu.: whether he remained liable to the extent of the whole of the rent originally reserved.—BAYNTON v. MORGAN (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 74; 58 L. J. Q. B. 139; 53 J. P. 166; 37 W. R. 148; 5 T. L. R. 99, C. A.

5482. Effect of grant of reversion—Before breach.]—32 Hen. 8, c. 34, applying only to a demise by deed, the lessor, where the demise is not under seal, may, notwithstanding he has assigned his reversion, sue the lessee on his contract to repair for a breach committed during the tenancy, but subsequent to such assignment.

The declaration was in assumpsit for breach of a promise by defts. to keep in repair during their tenancy certain premises demised to them by pltf. Plea, that before the breach, pltf. by due course of law conveyed, assigned, granted, & assured all his estate, right, title, & interest of & in the said demised premises, & of & in the reversion expectant upon the determination of the tenancy to B., & pltf. thenceforward ceased to have anything in the demised premises, & defts. then ceased to be, & never since have been, tenants thereof to pltf.:—Held: a bad plea; between lessor & lessee privity of contract exists for ever.

There is no reason, in point of law, why, if the right to sue for a breach did not pass with the reversion, it should not remain in pltf. The privity of estate was destroyed by the conveyance of the reversion, but the privity of contract was not. That, it is plain, would not have passed with the reversion before the statute [32 Hen. 8, c. 34]; & the statute has no operation where the conveyance is not by deed (WILDE, C.J.).—BICKFORD v. PARSON (1848), 5 C. B. 920; 17 L. J. C. P. 192; 11 L. T. O. S. 126; 12 Jur. 377; 136 E. R. 1141.

Pltf. granted a lease of certain premises, the lease containing the usual covenant by the lessee & his assigns to repair. Deft. took possession during the term without any assignment from the lessee & remained in possession for more than twenty years, paying the rent to pltf. (b) Assignee of Whole Term.

5496. Mortgagee without possession.—Lessee for years of a brewhouse, with covenants to repair, assigns it by way of mtge. to B. B. was never in possession; brewhouse much out of repair, the mtgee., though it was his folly to take an assignment & not an underlease; yet equity will not compel him to repair.

It was the mtgee.'s folly to take an assignment of the whole term, whereby to subject himself to the covenants in the original lease, & not to take a derivative lease of all the term, but a month, or week, or a day, as he might have done; yet inasmuch as he is only a mtgee., who never was in possession, we will not assist pltf. to charge him, or decree him to perform the covenants in specie, but leave pltf. to recover at law as well as he can (per CUR.).—*SPARKES v. 5497. Equitable tenant for life with remainder over.—A bill for an account of dilapidations was filed by the reversioner of a lease against the personal representatives of a person whose interest in the lease appeared to be that of equitable tenant for life with remainders over, alleging that such person in his lifetime was in possession, during which time the dilapidations accrued, that he paid rent & was liable to the covenants in the lease, & that on his death deft. entered into possession as his administrator, paid rent & became liable under the covenants:—Held: there was not a sufficient allegation of debt to support the bill.

How was he liable under the covenant? You do not allege that he was assignee of the whole lease, but only that he was equitable tenant for life, with remainders over (KNIGHT-BRUCE, V.-C.).—ARKWRIGHT v. COLT (1842), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 4; 6 Jur. 941; 63 E. R. 2.

assigned to him. But the lessor may, in the first instance, sue such an assignee in respect of the whole; & the assignee must, by his plea, show that his liability is confined to the particular part.

(2) If, as to that part, he is joint tenant with others, who are not joined in the action, he cannot avail himself of that non-joinder, except by plea in abatement.

[The plea] should have been that deft. was not liable to the whole burthen in the manner charged. He should have pointed out the other persons liable, & then pltf. might have been compelled to include them in his declaration (BAYLEY, J.).—MERCERON v. DOWSON (1826), 5 B. & C. 479; 8 Dow. & Ry. [The lessor] may undoubtedly, after an assignment of part, distrain upon that part for the rent which accrues due for the whole; because the rent for the whole becomes due out of each & every part of the land. . . . The remedy by distress does not . . . afford any authority for the remedy by a direct action of debt against the assignee (TINDAL, C.J.).—CURTIS v. SPITTY (1835), 1 Bing. N. (2) The covenant of the licencees was joint & several, & two of them assigned to a third party:—Held: the assignee was liable for the whole amount due for compensation.—NORVAL v. PASCOE (1864), 4 New Rep. 390; 34 L. J. Ch. 82; 10 L. T. 809; 28 J. P. 548; 10 Jur. N. S. 792; 12 W. R. 973.

5507. Tenants in common—Either assignee liable for whole.—A lease containing a covenant to repair became, by assignment, vested in two tenants in common:—Held: the lessor was entitled to recover from either of the two tenants in common the full amount of the damages that might be found due for a breach of the covenant.—UNITED DAIRIES, LTD. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1923] 1 K. B. 469; 92 L. J. K. B. 326; 128 L. T. 768; 39 T. L. R. 125; 67 Sol. Jo. 199.

5508. Assignee & lessor becoming tenants in common—Assignee still liable to co-tenant lessor.

—One tenant in common is not entitled to recover from his co-tenant contribution in respect of repairs done to the common property, although such repairs may have been reasonable & necessary. The proper remedy is by a partition suit, in which the ct. will take into account all proper expenditure upon the property.

Deft. was assignee of a lease granted by pltf. to one P. of an undivided three-fourths of certain premises to which pltf. was entitle as tenant in common with another. During the lease deft. purchased the one-fourth interest of pltf.'s co-tenant. On the expiration of the lease, deft. continued in occupation of the above three-fourths as tenant at sufferance to pltf.:—Held: notwithstanding the tenancy in common, pltf. was entitled to recover in respect of the use & occupation by deft. of the undivided three-fourths.—*LEIGH v. (e) Underlessee.

5509. Covenant for "assigns"—Whether sub-lessee included.—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee that he, his exors., administrators, & assigns, would not at any time during the term exercise or carry on, in, or upon the demised premises, or permit or suffer any part thereof to be occupied by any person or persons who should use, occupy, or carry on therein any noisome or offensive business or employment, without the consent in writing of the lessor. E. purchased an underlease of the premises, & had notice of this covenant. E. sub-let the house to M., the demise containing a covenant by M. in similar terms. M. afterwards commenced to carry on an offensive business in the house. The original lessor then commenced this action, claiming an injunction, to restrain E. & M. from breaking the covenant in the original lease. There was no evidence that E. had authorised or sanctioned the carrying on of the offensive business by M.:—Held: E., not being an assign, was not bound at law by the covenant, & the ct. would not compel him to take legal proceedings against M.—HALL v. EWIN (1887), 37 Ch. D. 74; 57 L. J. Ch. 95; 57 L. T. 831; 36 W. R. 84; 4 T. L. R. 40, C. A.

(f) Equitable Assignee.

5510. Whether liable—In absence of conduct raising equity.]—The question is, whether, when an equitable interest has been acquired in leasehold property by a contract in the nature of an assignment, the landlord has a right, without more, to proceed in this ct. against the assignee, as if he were his tenant. I am not aware of any principle of this ct. which enables him to do this. In the present case, there is no circumstances either of conduct or contract, as between the owner of the fee & the party having the equitable interest in the lease, which could give the former a right to hold the latter liable to him in respect of the covenants in the lease. One may certainly imagine a case, in which a party having the equitable interest in a lease may so conduct himself as to raise an equity against him, as between himself & the landlord. But that is not so here (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—ROBINSON v. ROSHER (1841), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 7; 5 Jur. 1006; 62 E. R. 767.

Annotation:—Mentd. Sutton Harbour Improvement Co. v. Hitchens (1852), 15 Reav. 161.

5511. — Although assignee in possession.]—The equitable assignee of a lease who has omitted to perfect his title by a legal assignment, although in possession of the premises & paying the rent reserved by the lease, is not entitled to the benefit of an option to purchase given to the lessee, his exors., administrators & assigns.

In a covenant giving an option to purchase, the word "assigns" means the person entitled to the term as between them & the lessor, & to the benefit of the covenants entered into by the lessor & lessee respectively which run with the land demised.

Pltfs., though in possession, could not have been sued at law by the lessor on the lessee's covenants, nor could pltfs. have sued the lessor's assigns on his covenants in the lease. Nor would the lessor or his assigns have any right in equity to sue pltfs. on the lessee's covenants by reason of pltfs. being equitable assigns of the lessee's term & in possession (ROMER, J.).—FRIARY HOLROYD & HEALEY'S BREWERIES, LTD. v. In 1814 H. died intestate. His widow administered to his effects & remained possessed of the lease till her death in 1843. After her death G., father of deft., who had married a daughter of H., without any administration took possession of the premises & received the rent, paying the ground rent; & he continued to do so until his death, in 1856. After the death of G., the deft. received the rent of the premises, & after paying the ground rent, handed over the balance to his mother, conceiving her to be entitled to it. He also from time to time let the premises. After the death of his mother deft. continued to receive the rent of the premises, paying the ground rent, & dividing the balance between his two sisters & himself, no further administration having been taken out. He continued to do this down to the expiration of the lease, when he delivered up the premises to pltf's. out of repair:—Semble: deft. was exor. de son tort of the term; but:—Held: beyond all doubt, he had estopped himself from denying that he was assignee.—*WILLIAMS v. 5524. ——— Rent appropriated to use of persons entitled.]—The assignee of a lease granted by pltf's. died intestate, leaving no estate other than the lease. Def't., her son, who had collected the rents of the demised premises on his mother's behalf during her lifetime, continued to collect them after her death, & after paying the ground rent in her name to pltf's., he handed the balance to his sister. After his sister's death def't. still continued to collect the rents & to pay the ground rent in his mother's name to pltf's., retaining the surplus for such person or persons as might in law be found entitled thereto. Shortly after def't.'s sister's death pltf's. became aware for the first time of the death of def't.'s mother, the assignee of the lease, & after some correspondence with def't. they entered into possession of the premises & sought to make him personally liable for breach of the repairing covenant contained in the lease on the ground that he had intermeddled with the lease & had become an exor. de son tort:—Held: def't. was not liable by privity of estate as the lease was never vested in him, & he had not so acted as to make himself liable by estoppel.—*STRATFORD-UPON-AVON CORPN. v. (i) Trustee.

5525. Leases assigned to trustees to secure annuity.]—A trustee, to whom two leases were assigned in trust for securing an annuity, having said to the occupier of one of the demised houses, "You must pay the rent to me, I am become landlord for my client, who has the annuity, & you must pay the ground rents for me":—Held: the trustee was liable in covenant to the lessor as assignee of both leases, for non-payment of rent & not repairing.—GRETTON v. DIGGLES (1813), 4 Taunt. 766; 128 E. R. 532.

5526. Trustee becoming bankrupt.—Trust property reassigned to him after discharge.—Whether bankruptcy a defence.]—Where a trustee who holds property to secure his own right of indemnity in priority to all claims of his cestui que trust becomes bkpt., & the retention of such property, e.g., leaseholds with onerous covenants, is necessary to give full effect to such right, the legal estate in the property & right to possession vest in the trustee in bkpcy. to the extent to which they were vested in bkpt.

In 1894 R. was the assignee of leaseholds with onerous covenants as trustee for his wife; in 1895 R. was adjudicated bkpt.; in 1896 the trustee in bkpcy. assigned the leaseholds back again to R. as trustee for his wife, & R. obtained his discharge. In 1908 the lessors, who had had no notice of the fact that R. was a trustee, or of his bkpcy., brought an action against R. for arrears of rent & for damages for breach of covenant to repair. R. pleaded the bkpcy. proceedings as a defence:—Held: the leaseholds vested in the trustee in bkpcy., who held them, subject to satisfying his own lien & right of indemnity, for R.'s wife; the leaseholds passed back again to R. by the assignment of 1896; & the bkpcy. was no 5538. ———. Though mortgage money not due.]—The assignee, by way of mtge. of a lease, who retains the lease & assignment, is liable to the rents & covenants in the lease.

Where L., tenant in fee, leases for years to B., who underleases for a portion of his term to M., & then assigns to L., his lessor, for such portion of the term as is leased to M., & L. mortgages in fee by lease & release in the usual form, containing the words " & reversion & all the estate, etc.," to pltf.; & M. mortgages by assignment his underlease to defts., who keep the underlease & mtge. deed, pltf. can, as assignee of a portion of the reversion, maintain covenant on such underlease, & defts. are liable as assignees of the lease, although their mtge. money has not become due, & they have never actually entered.—BURTON v. BARCLAY (1831), 7 Bing. 745; Moo. & P. 785; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 231; 131 E. R. 288.

5539. ———. Assignment never executed.]—Where there is neither privity of contract nor privity of estate between a lessor & an assignee of the lessee, the assignee is not liable to the lessor for rent of the demised premises.

A lessor, by an agreement in writing not under seal, agreed to let certain premises to tenant for a term of fifteen years. The tenant assigned the term by deed to mtgees. who accepted the assignment, but never executed the deed nor took possession of the premises:—Held: they were not liable.—PURCHASE v. 5542. Mortgage by sub-demise—No privity of estate with head lessor—Liability of mortgagee.]—Since a mtgee. of leaseholds by sub-demise in the usual form is, through absence of privity of estate, not himself liable to the head lessor for rent or other outgoings, whether he is in possession or not, it follows that a receiver appointed by the ct. in an action by the mtgee. against the mtgor. to enforce the security is also under no such liability, his appointment being in right of the mtgee. Hence the head lessor cannot require the receiver to pay, out of moneys coming to his hands while in the use or occupation of the mtgd. premises as receiver, any rent or other outgoings in respect of such use or occupation. There is no equity entitling the head lessor to claim payment from the receiver by reason of the latter having been put into use or occupation as an officer of the ct., even though he has, by the direction of the ct. sold off the mtgor.'s goods on the premises, & so deprived the head lessor of his landlord's remedy by distress.

In a debenture holder's action against the trustees of the trust deed who were mtgees. from the co. by sub-demise of premises, of which the co. were lessees, a claim by the head lessor against the receiver appointed by the ct. to payment, out of the proceeds of the co.'s goods sold by the receiver while in occupation of the premises, of rent in respect of the occupation & of damages for the breach of the co.'s covenant in the head lease to repair, disallowed.—HAND v. By indenture, A. covenanted with B., that in consideration of the expense which B. would be at in erecting on the ground therein described & agreed to be demised, & also in consideration of the yearly rents, covenants, & agreements therein reserved, etc., on the part of B., A. would from time to time, when & so soon as B., his exors., etc., or assigns, should have erected one or more of the messuages therein covenanted to be built, demise & lease unto B., his exors., administrators, nominees, or assigns, the whole, or such part whereon the said messuages should be built, of all the ground, etc., therein described & agreed to be demised, for ninety-eight years, yielding & paying the rent or sum of £35 for & during the first year, & so on till the fifth year, when £285 was to be paid, & the same for each remaining year of the term. Proviso, that if the yearly rent or rents, to be reserved by the lease or leases to be granted of any part of the ground agreed to be demised, should amount to the full yearly rent to be reserved, then from time to time the remainder of such ground should be leased, together with the buildings on it, at a yearly peppercorn rent. Covenant by B., for himself, his exors., & administrators, to pay the several yearly rents thereby agreed to be reserved, & all rates, etc., & to complete the buildings therein described, & to accept leases; & that in the meantime, until the granting of such lease or leases, he would perform all the covenants, etc., as if such lease or leases had been granted; with a proviso for re-entry in case of non-payment of the said rents, etc., to be reserved, etc., or on breach of covenant. By indenture, of later date, between B. & C., reciting the above agreement, B. assigned to C. the said recited articles of agreement, & all the right, title, etc., which B. had, etc., by virtue of the said indenture, subject to the performance by C., etc., of the covenants therein; & B. appointed C. to be his attorney to demand the said leases, etc.; & C. covenanted to perform the covenants of the said articles of agreement, & to indemnify B., as assignee of the said articles. C. erected buildings on a part of the ground, & obtained leases of them from A., & paid A. the stipulated sums, in respect of the portion of the ground of which leases had not been granted, up to the quarter-day previous to May 23, 1857, when he assigned to another person:—Held: the first-mentioned articles of agreement did not amount to a demise to B. of the land; B. was not a tenant from year to year to A.; C. paid the stipulated sums as assignee of B., & as bound by his covenant with him, & was not liable for it to A., & was not a tenant from year to year to A., nor liable to pay rent at all to him; & B. was tenant at will to A., but was so on the terms, not of paying the sums due from him as & for a rent, but as a stipulated or collateral payment, handed over by him, in respect of his liability to his assignor.—*CAMDEN (MARQUIS) v. The last assignment in this case was only as a mtge. security. Therefore if pltf., instead of replying that R. did not take possession, had traversed, by this replication the allegation of the plea, that deftd. had assigned all his estate, title & interest, etc., & upon issue being joined, it had appeared on the trial that the assignment contained a proviso of redemption he would have been entitled to a verdict (per Cur.).—WALKER v.

Pltf. seems to me to have decided against himself, for he has stated this as an assignment. If he had meant to avail himself of it as a contract between deft. & himself he should have stated it according to the legal operation & as a demise from pltf. to deft. (ASHHURST, J.).—CHANCELLOR v. On the bkpcy. of the lessee his trustee assigned the lease. Bankruptcy of lessee—Lease vesting in trustees in bankruptcy—Effect of assignment.—A., lessee of iron-works, etc., subject to payment of rent & performance of covenants, assigns to B. as a security for sums advanced & to be advanced, reserving to himself a mere equity of redemption. A. becomes bkpt., & his assignees agree to convey to B. the equity of redemption in the demised premises. The assignees have no right to enforce against B. a specific performance of this agreement by accepting an assignment with a covenant for indemnity against payment of the rent & performance of the covenants reserved by the original lease.

They [assignees in bkpcy.] take it [the property of bkpt.] by the operation of law, & enter into no covenant to indemnify bkpt. against the covenants in his leases. They may waive his leases, & so not become liable to the landlord at all; they may take to them subject only to such liabilities as attaches upon all assigns, that is, a liability to be sued on such covenants as bind assigns during the time they retain that character; but when they cease to retain it their liability ceases, the privity of estate which alone makes them liable to be sued being determined (GRANT, M.R.).—WILKINS v. SUB-SECT. 4.—ASSIGNOR'S RIGHT OF INDEMNITY AGAINST ASSIGNEE.

A. Apart from Covenant.

(a) In General.

5587. General rule—Ultimate assignee must indemnify previous holders—For breaches during his possession.]—An assignee of a lease by mesne assignments is under an obligation to indemnify the original lessee against breaches of covenant in the lease, committed during the continuance of his own tenancy; & that obligation is not affected by the covenants which the assignee may have made with his immediate assignor.

Pltf. was lessee of certain premises under a lease containing a covenant to keep in repair. He assigned the lease to B., who assigned it to defts. The assignment from pltf. to B. & from B. to defts., contained express covenants with the immediate assignors respectively, to indemnify them against all subsequent breaches. Whilst defts. were in

(2) This duty [indemnity], we think, would arise from the mere relation between the parties, without any such words as those now under consideration; for the effect of the assignment is that the lessee becomes a surety to the lessor for the assignee, who, as between himself & the lessor is the principal, bound, whilst he is assignee to pay the rent & to perform the covenants running with the estate; & the surety after paying the debt or discharging the obligation to which he is liable, has his remedy against the principal (DENMAN, C.J.).—*WOLVERIDGE v. A. took possession, & occupied the premises under this assignment, & before the expiration of the term assigned to a third person. The lessor sued the lessee for breaches of covenant committed during the time that A. continued assignee of the premises, & recovered damages against the lessee:—Held: (1) the lessee might maintain an action upon the case founded in tort against A. for having neglected to perform the covenants during the time he continued assignee, whereby the lessee sustained damage.

It appeared that in 1840 pltf. assigned the lease to deft., that in Oct. 1851, deft. assigned to one T.; that in June, 1852, T. assigned the lease to H., who, in Aug. 1852, surrendered it to the ground landlord. Evidence was given for pltf., that when H. held the lease the premises were out of repair, & T. stated that he put the premises in no better state than when he received them from deft. No further evidence was given, & deft. was not called as a witness:—Held: the judge was right in directing the jury to give substantial damages; & the jury were warranted in presuming that the dilapidations took place during the time deft. held the lease.—*SMITH v. 5605. Execution creditor of lessee—Effect of appointment of receiver by lessee's mortgagee.]

C., who was lessee of land for a term of years, mortgaged the same to pltf. by way of sub-demise, less the last three days of the term, & covenanted to pay the rent & perform the covenants in the lease. Deft., who was the owner of the demised property subject to C.'s term, recovered judgment against her for two quarters' rent, & sued out a writ of elegit under which the sheriff, after inquisition, delivered the property to him. After the inquisition pltf. appointed a receiver under their mtge. Deft. recovered nothing under his judgment & took no further steps under the elegit, but afterwards distrained on the property for a further half-year's rent. In an action to restrain the distress:—Held: (1) assuming deft. was by virtue of the elegit an assignee of C.'s term, he only took it for a limited purpose, & could not be treated as surety for her & bound to indemnify her against the payment of the rent; & (2) the property was delivered to deft., not in respect of the mere reversion expectant on the determination of the subdemise, but to the extent of C.'s interest as mtgor. in possession; that interest was determined by the appointment of the receiver, & consequently the title of deft. as tenant by elegit had either been extinguished or suspended; therefore, deft. was entitled to distrain.—*JOHNS v. In Mar. 1869, he purported, by an agreement not under seal, to assign the residue of his interest to deft., who entered & occupied the farm; but L. withholding his licence, which was necessary under pltf.'s lease, no actual legal assignment was ever executed. At Michaelmas, 1870, deft. quitted the farm, having given L. a notice of his intention to do so. He might have continued to occupy if he had thought proper, but in fact the property stood empty after Michaelmas. Deft., whilst in occupation, paid rent to L. for pltf. He never was accepted as tenant by L. In Mar. 1871, pltf. paid L., in respect of rent due from Sept. previous, the sum of £40, which he now sought to recover from deft., either upon an implied indemnity, or by way of rent, or for use & occupation:—Held: he was not entitled to recover, there not having been under the circumstances any promise to indemnify pltf. against rent accruing after deft.'s actual occupation had ceased, nor any such relation of landlord & tenant existing between the parties as would entitle pltf. to the repayment by deft., either as rent or compensation for use & occupation, of the sum paid to L. by plff.—CROUCH v. TREGONNING (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 88; 41 L. J. Ex. 97; 26 L. T. 286; 20 W. R. 536.

5614. What amounts to covenant to indemnify.—Assignment subject to payment of rent & performance of covenants.—Specific performance decreed, after a trial at law of a parol undertaking by the assignee of a lease, to indemnify the original lessee, the vendor, against the rent & covenants; a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction; the assignment being “subject to the rents & covenants on the part of the lessee,” although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement.—*PEMBER v. 5618. Forfeiture of bond to indemnify.—Bankruptcy of assignee.—Right to sue on bond.—Lessee having made no payment before bankruptcy.—A., the original lessee of a term of years, assigned the residue to B. & C. B., on the assignment gave a bond to A. conditioned for the payment of the rent to the lessor, & the performance of the other covenants in the lease, & for indemnifying A. against the non-performance of the covenants. B. & C. having become bkpt., & the bond being forfeited before their bkpcy., A. brought an action against B. on the bond, & assigned for breaches, non-payment of rent by B. & C.; & that an action was commenced against him by the lessor for its recovery in which costs had been incurred to the amount of £50. Deft. pleaded bkpcy. generally, & two pleas founded on 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19:—Held: A. was entitled to recover, as he could not prove under the commission, for the damages which had accrued previous to the bkpcy., as it did not appear that he had paid them to the lessor, & 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, did not extend to the lessee & his assignees of a lease, but must be confined to the lessor & lessee.—*TAYLOR v. 5619. Contract of indemnity only.—Re POOLE & CLARKE'S CONTRACT, No. 5589, ante.

5620. — Whether assignor entitled to specific performance of covenants in lease.—The true object of the covenant by the assignee usually inserted in the assignment of leaseholds is merely to indemnify & protect the lessee against breach of covenants contained in the lease, & consequently a lessee is not entitled to enforce by injunction the specific performance by his assignee of the negative covenants contained in the original lease by means of the covenant “to perform & observe” the covenants & conditions contained in the lease, & to indemnify the assignor from & against all claims & demands on account of the same. Semble: a covenant to perform & observe the negative covenants in a lease is not of itself a negative covenant within the rule which binds the ct. to grant an injunction on evidence of its breach.—HARRIS v. BOOTS, CASII CHEMISTS (SOUTHERN), LTD., [1904] 2 Ch. 376; 73 L. J. Ch. 708; 52 W. R. 668; 20 T. L. R. 623; 48 Sol. Jo. 622.

5621. Covenant at all times to indemnify.—Whether liability discharged by assignment.—The declaration stated that plff. being lessee of certain coal mines, by indenture, assigned his interest in them to deft., who covenanted with plff. to pay the rents, galleages, etc., as reserved by the original indenture of lease, so long as he, deft., should be in possession or receipt of the rents, produce, & profits of the mines, etc., & at all times thereafter effectually to indemnify & keep harmless plff. from & against all the rents, covenants, etc., of the original lease, & against all litigation in respect thereof:—Held: the restrictive words in the first covenant “so long as deft. shall be in possession or receipt of the rents, produce, or profits,” etc., did not apply to the covenant to indemnify.—CROSSFIELD v. MORRISON (1849), 7 C. B. 286; 6 Dow. & L. 608; 18 L. J. C. P. 135; 13 L. T. O. S. 161; 13 Jur. 565; 137 E. R. 114.

was vested in pltf. contained a covenant by the lessee to repair & keep in repair the demised premises. By virtue of divers mesne assignments & other acts in the law the term had become vested in defts., the exors. of a deceased assignee of the lease. They, as "trustees," assigned the premises, which were then out of repair, for the residue of the term to an assignee, who covenanted with them thenceforth to pay the rent reserved by the lease, & perform the lessee's covenants therein contained, & to keep them indemnified from the payment & performance thereof respectively. The premises remaining out of repair, pltf. subsequently brought an action against defts. for breach of the covenant to repair, & they brought in their assignee as third party. Pltf. having recovered damages against defts. in the action:—Held: the third party was liable under his covenant to indemnify them against those damages recovered by pltf. against them for breaches of the covenant in the lease prior to the assignment.—*GOOCH v. 5623. i. By Whom.

5625. Mesne assignee of underlease—Having indemnified his assignor—Effect of surrender & regrant of lease.—4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, while it gives a lessee the right to surrender notwithstanding his contracts with his underlessee, leaves untouched the sub-interest, though it be merely an agreement for an underlease; & the effect of a new demise after the surrender for the residue of the original term is to make the new lessee the assignee of the reversion of the term created by the surrenderor.

S. surrendered his lease to W., his lessor, after making an agreement, containing a stipulation to pay rent & repair, for an underlease to E., who entered & afterwards assigned his interest to pltf., & who gave an indemnification to him, & assigned it over to deft.'s testator, who covenanted to indemnify pltf.; after the surrender W. granted a new lease for the remainder of S.'s term to H.:—Held: H. was in exactly the same position as S., & F. having had to pay to H. money for rent & non-repair, in consequence of the default of deft.'s testator, & pltf. having repaid F., pltf. was entitled to recover such moneys from deft.—

5626. Sub-lessee acquiring leasehold reversion after assignment—Covenants with assignor of reversion—Whether bar to indemnity for rent already paid.—On the dissolution of a partnership between H. & R., H. assigned to R. all his interest in two houses belonging to the partnership held under sub-leases from C. & D., & R. covenanted to pay the rents & observe the covenants & keep H. indemnified against them. R.'s exors. sold the houses to B., & B. to a co. which went into liquidation. The landlords C. & D. thereupon sued H. for the rent, & he paid it for the whole of the year 1882. D. also made a large demand against H. for breaches of covenants to repair, but H. made no payment. On Mar. 15, 1883, D. assigned his reversion to H., & in May, 1883, H. acquired C.'s reversion. In June, 1883, H. bought the leasehold interest in both houses from the liquidators of the co., & covenanted thenceforth to pay the rent & observe the covenants. H. sought to prove against the estate of R. for the sums paid for rent, for the rent payable at Lady Day, 1883, on D.'s house, & for the amount of the dilapidations in that house:—Held: (1) the right of H., under R.'s covenant of indemnity, to prove for the rents which he had paid, was not taken away by his covenant in the assignment by the liquidators, which could not be extended to rents already due & paid; (2) this right was not defeated on the ground that the right of R.'s representatives, if they paid rent, to recover it from the owner of the lease for the time being, was interfered with by the assignment from the liquidators to H., for that this assignment could not take away any right of action which R.'s exors. might have against the persons entitled to the houses at the end of 1882, & an assignor who pays rent has no lien on the term, & so cannot be prejudiced by its subsequent assignment; (3) the right was not defeated on the ground that H. on paying the rent became entitled to a right of distress from the reversioners, which he had destroyed by taking an assignment of the leases, & had therefore discharged the estate of R. by releasing a remedy to the benefit of which R. as a surety was entitled, for that a right of distress is not a security or remedy to the benefit of which a surety paying rent is entitled under Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 5; (4) H. was entitled to prove against R.'s estate for the rent paid in 1882 on both houses, & to prove for the Lady Day rent on D.'s house; & (5) H. was not entitled to prove for the amount of dilapidations, for that he had sustained no damage by reason of them, inasmuch as he bought the leases from the liquidators at a less price in consequence of the breaches of the covenant to repair nor for the Lady Day rent of C.'s house.—*Re RUSSELL, RUSSELL v. Company in liquidation—Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870 (c. 104)—Appropriation of sum to meet contingent liabilities.]—The lessee of certain mines assigned his leases to a co. which covenanted to indemnify him against liability thereunder. The co. went into liquidation, & a scheme of arrangement under above Act was adopted & approved by the ct. for forming a new co. which should take over the assets & liabilities of the old co., & should pay or satisfy the unsecured creditors of the old co. within three months of the approval of the scheme by the ct. After the new co. was incorporated the lessee applied in the liquidation to have a sum provided to meet his contingent liability for rents, royalties, & breaches of covenant:—Held: above Act applied to every person having a pecuniary claim against a co., whether actual or contingent, & the lessee was bound by the scheme, the application failed. Semble: the lessee could compel the new co. to indemnify him from time to time as he should be called upon to pay under the leases. Qu.: whether the lessee would have been entitled, apart from the scheme, to have assets of the old co. impounded to meet his contingent liability under the leases.—Re MIDLAND COAL, COKE & IRON CO., CRAIG'S CLAIM, [1895] 1 Ch. 267; 64 L. A. became bkpt., B. died, & the lessee, who had been called upon to pay the rent, bought from the bkpt's trustee, & took an assignment of the bkpt's right to indemnity, withdrawing a proof he, the lessee, had carried in, & releasing the estate of the bkpt.:—Held: (1) the right of the trustee in bkpcy. of A. to sue the exors. of B. upon his covenant to indemnify was "property" within Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 168, & assignable by the trustee; & damages in an action by the trustee against the exors. would not be confined to the dividend pay-

5637. General rule—All necessary & reasonable charges incurred.]—B. & P. being the owners of an unexpired term of seventy-two years in a certain house & premises, let them to one G. for twenty-one years, under the usual covenants, to pay rent & to keep the house in repair; & afterwards they assigned the reversion to D. G. had previously assigned the residue of his term of twenty-one years to pltf., with the usual covenants. Pltf. afterwards assigned the term to deft., with similar covenants, to pay the rent & to keep the premises in repair, & with a covenant that deft. would observe & fulfil all the covenants of the former lease; & that he would, from time to time & at all times, save harmless & indemnify pltf. from all costs, damages, & expenses, which might be incurred by reason of any delay, breach, or default in payment or performance thereof. On the rent becoming due & unpaid, & the premises falling out of repair, D. brought an action against G. who suffered judgment by default. G. afterwards brought an action to recover the amount so paid by him, & his costs. Pltf. defended the action unsuccessfully, & he became liable to pay to G. the amount of the judgment by default, & also of the costs of that action. Pltf. then sued deft., not having paid that amount to G., & judgment not having been signed in the action against him:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the amount of the rent & repairs, & the costs of the action in which G. had suffered judgment by default, but he was not entitled to the costs of the action brought against him by G.

There is no doubt that at one time very wild notions were entertained with respect to the contract of indemnity; but these notions are now exploded, & it is now considered, that, by a contract of indemnity, is meant that the party indemnified may recover all such charges as necessarily & reasonably arise out of the circumstances under which the party charged became responsible (POLLOCK, J.).—SMITH v. HOWELL (1851), 6 Exch. 730; 20 L. J. Ex. 377; 17 L. T. O. S. 188; 155 E. R. 739.

5641. What costs recoverable.—[In an action by a lessee against the assignee of the lease for breach of a contract by the assignee to indemnify the lessee against a failure to perform the covenants contained in the lease, pltf. sought to recover, among other heads of damage, the whole costs, as well those paid by him on taxation as extra costs paid by him to his own attorney incurred in unsuccessfully defending an action brought against him by the lessor for breach of one of the covenants in the lease committed after the assignment:—Held: the lessee was entitled to recover both the extra costs paid by him to his attorney & the taxed costs.—HOWARD v. LOVEGROVE (1870), L. R. 6 Exch. 43; 40 L. J. Ex. 13; 23 L. T. 396; 19 W. R. 188.

5642. Value of goods distrained—Assignor's chattels left on premises—Distress by landlord for non-payment of rent by assignee.—[Upon an agreement to assign the lease of certain premises, deft. agreed to pay the rent, etc., which might become due on the original lease, & to indemnify pltf. from all loss which he might incur by reason of the non-payment of such rent. Deft. entered upon the premises, & certain of pltf.'s goods left upon the premises were distrained for rent. In an action for breach of the indemnity, the declaration stated that "divers goods of pltf. were upon the premises, with the leave & licence of deft. & were lawfully seized as distresses for rent." The plea traversed this allegation in terms. The jury found that the goods were lawfully seized, but that they were not on the premises with the leave & licence of deft. Verdict for deft. It did not sufficiently appear that pltf. had parted with his legal interest in the premises:—Held: under these circumstances the question of leave & licence was immaterial, & as the goods in question were seized there ought to have been a verdict for pltf.

If therefore pltf.'s goods were rightfully there & were distrained, I cannot entertain a doubt that he has been damnified, so as to make deft. liable under his agreement of indemnity (MAULE, J.).—GROOM v. BLUCK (1841), 2 Man. & G. 567; Drinkwater, 103; 2 Scott, N. R. 665; 10 L. J. C. P. 105; 5 Jur. 532; 133 E. R. 873.

5643. Amount of dilapidations—No damage suffered by assignor—Lease reassigned to assignor for small sum on account of dilapidations.—Re RUSSELL, RUSSELL v. SHOOLBRED, No. 5626, ante.

5644. Rent paid—Premises used for immoral purposes—Knowledge that assignee would pay out of profits of immorality.—[The lessee of a house which had been notoriously used for many years as a brothel, assigned his term absolutely to a purchaser for value, knowing that the rent & premium would be paid out of the profits of the immoral trade carried on there. Among the lessee's covenants contained in the original lease was a covenant to deliver up the premises in good repair at the expiration of the term, & also not to permit the same to be used as a brothel. At the termination of the lease the lessor compelled the lessee to pay a sum of £65 for dilapidations & certain arrears of rent. The lessee submitted to the payment, & claimed over against the estate of his assignee under a covenant contained in the assignment for indemnity in respect of all lessee's covenants:—Held: the assignor was not entitled to recover, the whole transaction & every obligation arising out of it being tainted with immorality.—SMITH v. WHITE (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 626; 35 L. J. Ch. 454; 14 L. T. 350; 30 J. P. 452; 14 W. R. 510.

A. Covenantants for Title.

See, generally, SALE OF LAND.

5646. General covenants for title—Whether affected by limiting covenants—Covenants providing against assignor's own acts.—[The assignor in a deed of assignment of a lease, after reciting the original lease granted to another for the term of ten years, which by mesne assignments had vested in him, & that pltf. had contracted for the absolute purchase of the premises, bargained, sold, assigned, transferred, & set over the same to pltf., for & during all the rest, etc., of the said term of ten years, in as ample manner as the assignor might have held the same, subject to the payment of rent & performance of covenants; & then covenanted that it was a good & subsisting lease, valid in law, in & for the said premises thereby assigned, & not forfeited, etc., or otherwise determined, or become void or voidable:—Held: the generality of this covenant for title, which was supported by the recital of the bargain for an absolute term of ten years, was not restrained by other covenants which went only to provide for or against the acts of the assignor himself, or those who claimed under him; such as a covenant against incumbrances, except an underlease of part by the assignor for three years; for quiet enjoyment; for further assurance; & therefore where it appeared that the original lease was for ten years, determinable on a life in being, which dropped before the ten years expired, though not till after the covenant of the assignor, & the assignee might assign a breach upon the absolute covenant for title.—*BARTON v. PART XXI. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 4.—B. (e).

5640 I. Whether costs recoverable—When reasonably incurred.—[Deft. took an assignment of a lease from pltf., covenanting to perform all the covenants in it on pltf.'s part, & to indemnify him against them. The lessor sued pltf. for breach of the covenants to repair, etc., & recovered, deft. having notice of the action, &

according to some of the witnesses, having sanctioned the defence:—Held: under deft.'s covenant pltf. was entitled to recover the damages & costs in that suit, but not interest.—SPENCER v. HECTOR (1865), 24 U. C. R. 277.—CAN.

m. Assignment without consent of lessors—Where covenant requiring such consent.—[Where a lease, containing a covenant against assignment without the consent of the lessors, is so assigned, the assignment containing a covenant by the assignee to pay the rent & indemnify the assignor, & the assignee goes into possession of the demised premises, he is liable, although the consent of the lessors may not have been procured, to repay to the assignor rent accruing due after the assignment which the latter has been obliged to pay.—BROWN v. LENNOX (1895), 22 A. R. 442.—CAN.

5647. — — — —.]—The assignor of a term covenanted that he had not at any time done or suffered any act or thing whereby the premises intended to be assigned could be impeached or affected in title or estate; & that for & notwithstanding any such act, etc., the lease was a good, valid, & subsisting lease, & not forfeited, surrendered or become void; & that he had in himself good right, full power, & authority to grant, assign, transfer, & set over the same, to the assignee in manner aforesaid; then followed a covenant for further assurance by the assignor & all persons claiming under him:—Held: the general words that the assignor had full power to grant, assign, & set over, were restrained by the preceding part of the covenant, & therefore such covenant was confined to the act of the assignor alone.—FOORD v. WILSON (1818), 8 Taunt. 543; 2 Moore, C. P. 592; 129 E. R. 494.

5648. Covenant for quiet enjoyment by lessee—Ultimate assignee ejected for breach by lessee—Right of ultimate assignee to sue lessee—Privity of estate.—Where A. being possessed of certain premises for a term of years, assigned part of them over to B. for the residue of his term, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, & B. afterwards assigned them over to C.:—Held: C. having been evicted by S., the lessor of A., for a breach of covenant committed by A. previously to the assignment to B., might maintain an action against A. upon the covenant for quiet enjoyment, on the ground that there was a privity of estate between A. & C.—CAMPBELL v. LEWIS (1820), 3 B. & Ald. 392; 106 E. R. 706; affg. S. C. sub nom. LEWIS v. CAMPBELL (1819), 8 Taunt. 715.

5649. What amounts to breach—Assignment for absolute term of ten years—Lease determinable upon dropping of a life.—BARTON v. FITZGERALD, No. 5646, ante.

5650. Assignment as "beneficial owner"—Assignee damaged because legal estate outstanding—Agreement that lessee should not get in legal estate.—A lessee & an intending sub-assignee of the lease executed an agreement for sale by which it was recited that the legal interest in the lease was outstanding in a third party. The agreement provided that the lessee should not be required to get it in, nor to obtain the consent of the third party to the assignment. The lessee assigned "as beneficial owner" to the sub-assignee. The sub-assignee having been prevented from availing himself of one of the conditions in the lease, through not having the legal estate, & having been obliged to indemnify the lessee against the rent & covenants in the lease, claimed damages from the lessee for breach of the covenants for title implied under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 7 (1) (a):—Held: in view of the agreement between the parties, the lessee was entitled to have the assignment rectified by inserting a proviso that his covenants for title should not be deemed to imply that he had power to assign the outstanding legal estate in the term or to render him liable by reason of the fact that the said legal estate was not effectually assigned.—STAIT v. FENNER, FENNER v. McNAB, [1912] 2 Ch. 504; 81 L. J. Ch. 710; 107 L. T. 120; 56 Sol. Jo. 669.

B. Payment of Rent up to Assignment.

5651. Covenant to pay—Implied from word "grant"—No specific covenant to indemnify against rent.—Where a lessee assigns & grants over his lease by deed, not containing a covenant for quiet enjoyment, or for indemnity against demands of rent due to the superior landlord before assignment, the assignee, if distrained upon for such rent, may bring an action of covenant against the assignor, founded on the word "grant" in the deed. Consequently, if, upon such distress, he has paid the rent to release his own goods, he cannot sue the assignor in assumpsit for the amount paid. Although the assignor, after such distress & payment, has promised pltf. to repay him the amount; at least if there be not a new consideration for such promise; as forbearance.—*BABER v. 5656. Covenant as to repairs by lessee & mesne assignee—Action by subsequent assignee against mesne assignee—Whether lessee liable for whole damages—Part attributable to assignee.—Pltf. declared in covenant, reciting that P. had leased a house to deft., & deft. had by the lease covenanted to repair; that deft. had assigned to pltf., with covenant that deft. had repaired according to the terms of the lease; breach, non-repair, alleging, by way of aggravation, that pltf. had assigned to C. with a covenant that the covenants in the lease had been performed; that C. had sued pltf. for the non-performance of the covenants in the lease, whereby pltf. had to pay C. £120 to settle the action, besides the expenses of defending it. Plea, payment of £5 into ct., & no damages ultra. Replication, damages ultra. Verdict for £45 damages, beyond the £5. On motion by deft. for a new trial, on the ground that pltf. was not liable to C. except for his own acts, & therefore could not charge deft. with the £120 or £119, the ct. refused a rule, the verdict being general, & not showing that the jury had allowed damages in respect of C.'s action, & it being deft.'s duty to point out at the trial the limitation contended for. The ct. also refused to increase the damages by £119, which was proved to have been expended in defending the action against C. since the damages recovered by C. exceeded the sum given in the present action, & must therefore in part have been attributable to

The lease also provided that if L. or M. became bkpt. it should, in the option of the lessor, become void. Shortly after the commencement of the lease L. became bkpt., & M. died, but the lessor never exercised his option to determine the lease:—*Held: by the terms of the clause of obligation the lessees were conjunctly & severally liable for rent irrespective of their interest, & after M.'s death, his representatives, though they had no interest as tenants, remained liable for rent during the currency of the lease.—BURNS v. Of course, any right of action on these covenants would be against the surviving covenantor alone, & legally, the representatives of J. could not be held liable; & the equity is said to be this, that although the covenant is joint, yet a ct. of equity will, under certain circumstances, treat it as joint & several. If it had been joint & several, then the question would arise, whether the right to sue the exors. of the deceased partner, is a right which is dependent, upon the surviving partner having a right as against the exors. of the deceased partner. The demurrer might have been argued on that ground; but, as that has been waived, I must assume that there might be an equity for the lessors against the exors. of the deceased lessee (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—JACKSON v. 5674. Surrender & grant of concurrent yearly tenancy.—By parol.—To mesne tenant.]—The tenant of a farm underlet it to deft. on a yearly tenancy. He subsequently gave deft. notice to quit. During the currency of the notice he, by a parol arrangement with the owner of the farm & pltf. surrendered his reversion to the owner, who thereupon & as part of the same transaction granted to pltf. by parol a new tenancy from year to year to commence immediately & to run concurrently with, but subject to, the unexpired portion of deft.'s term. On the expiry of the notice to quit deft.'s rent was in arrear:—Held: by virtue of Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 108), s. 9, pltf. upon the grant to him of the new tenancy became entitled to the reversion expectant on deft.'s term notwithstanding the grant was by parol, & was consequently entitled to sue deft. for the rent.—PLUMMER & JOHN v. DAVID, [1920] 1 K. B. 326; 89 L. J. K. B. 1021; 122 L. T. 493.

5676. Assignment of lease subject to underlease.—Underlease for longer term than lease.]—By an indenture dated Feb. 1, 1893, B. demised to W. certain premises for a term of twenty-one years. On Feb. 15, 1893, W. demised the premises to deft. for a term of forty years, less three days. On Jan. 16, 1894, W. assigned to pltf. the premises to hold for the residue of the term of twenty-one years subject to the underlease of Feb. 15, 1893, by W. to deft. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. to recover rent due at Lady Day, 1894, pltf. was non-suited:—Held: the non-suit was right. Assuming that W. had a reversion by estoppel, subject to the lease of forty years, less three days, that reversion was not assigned to pltf. by the deed of Jan. 16, 1894, because that deed only assigned to pltf. W.'s interest in the lease of Feb. 1, 1893.—NORRIS v. CRAIG (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 432; 59 J. P. 264; 43 W. R. 480; 39 Sol. Jo. 398, D. C.

5684. Effect of vesting by private Act.]—In 1844 property was demised by the Freeman & Stallingers of Sunderland to defts.' predecessors in title for a term of ninety-nine years, & the lease contained covenants by the lessees to keep the premises in repair & deliver them up at the end of the term. By a private Act of Parliament passed in 1853, which recited that the Freeman & Stallingers & other persons had claims on the property, it was provided that the premises should be & the same were thereby absolutely vested in pltf., free from all claims & incumbrances, but subject to the existing leases thereof. Defts. threatened to commit a breach of the covenants, & pltf. brought this action for an injunction to restrain them from doing so. Defts. amongst other defences contended that pltf. were not grantees or assignees of the reversion within 32 Hen. 8, c. 31, inasmuch as the original lessors had not executed any grant or assignment to them, & that they could not sue on the covenants:—Held: the Act of 1853 must be treated as equivalent to a grant by the Freeman & Stallingers of Sunderland, the lessors under the lease of 1844, of the reversion expectant on that lease, & consequently pltf. came within 32 Hen. 8, c. 31, & could enforce the covenants.—SUNDERLAND ORPHAN ASYLUM v. 5691. Lease not under seal.]—Deft. being tenant under a lease not sealed, the lessor assigned the reversion to pltf., who gave notice to deft. of the assignment. Deft. continued to occupy, & afterwards was sued by pltf. for breach of certain terms of the lease. The declaration in assumpsit alleged that deft. became tenant to pltf. under the terms, & promised to perform them; the plea denied that deft. became tenant under the terms; & there was no plea of non assumpsit:—Held: the jury were warranted in finding for the pltf., & that the existence of a contract was not put in issue.

It has long been settled that such covenants only pass to an assignee, as touch or concern the thing demised, & that the statute [32 Hen. 8, c. 34] does not extend to collateral covenants. . . . This covenant [to repair & yield up upon the determination of the term the works erected by virtue of the licence, & authority conferred by the indenture] directly touches & concerns the thing demised, & it would seem also to be assignable with the reversion (MARTIN, B.).—*MARTYN v. The deed contained a subsequent declaration "that there shall not be implied in this lease any covenant or provision whatever on the part of either of the parties hereto":—Held: the covenant must be construed as qualified & controlled by the declaration, accordingly it did not run with the reversion; & not being incident to the relation of landlord & tenant, liability for breach thereof properly fell to be borne by the general estate of the deceased lessor. Even if as held by the ct. below, it was unqualified & ran with the reversion, it was not a charge thereon. As between the specific devisees of the reversion & the general estate, the latter should primarily bear a liability which in its nature is not incident to the relation of landlord & tenant, but was incurred preparatory thereto.

5701. — — — — —.]—The assignee of the reversion on a lease, whether under seal or not, is entitled at common law to maintain an action against the lessee for breach of an implied, as distinct from an express, covenant in the lease committed since the date of the assignment. He is not, however, entitled to maintain an action for breach of such a covenant committed prior to the assignment if accrued causes of action do not pass to him by the assignment.

By the rules of common law none but parties or privies to express covenants were bound by or could take advantage of them, & grantees of reversions were regarded in the light of strangers. If the grantee of a reversion could have maintained an action of covenant against the lessee upon his express covenant, the provision of 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, would have been in a great degree unnecessary. But the statute refers only to express covenants, & not to covenants in law or implied covenants. The statute provides that grantees of reversions "shall & may have & enjoy all & every such like & the same advantage, benefit, & remedies by action only, for not performing of other conditions, covenants, or agreements contained & expressed in the indentures of their said leases." The reason why the statute extended only to express covenants was that no such provision was necessary with regard to covenants in law or implied covenants (SWINFEN EADY, L.J.).—*WEDD v. At the time of making this demise the premises were under mtge. to a building society. Interest being in arrear, the mtgees. on Aug. 24 gave notice to ptfs. not to pay any more rent to B., the mtgor.; & early in Sept., pursuant to the power contained in the indenture of mtge., the mtgees. contracted to sell the premises to deft., possession to be given on Dec. 25. The conveyance, however, was not executed until Feb. 14, 1873. On Sept. 28, 1872, the mtgees., protesting that ptfs. were not entitled to notice, gave them notice to give up their standings at Christmas, & in Nov. 1872, & Feb. 1873, they received from them the quarter's rent due respectively at Michaelmas & Christmas. In the meantime some conversations took place between ptfs. & deft. as to the former continuing in the factory upon altered terms; but no terms were ever agreed to, & no rent was received by deft. On Mar. 24, 1873, deft. demanded possession of the portion of the factory occupied by ptfs.; on May 15 he cut off the supply of steam power; & on May 22 ptfs. brought their action:—Held: deft. was not bound by the contract between B. & ptfs., it not being under seal, & therefore not within the above Act, & consequently, in the absence of adoption by him or of some new contract of tenancy between him & ptfs., not liable in this action.—SMITH v. 5709. ———. ———. ———. Running with reversion.—A mtgee. under a mtge. created in 1873, who was not in possession, but collected the rent as agent of the mtgors., executed an agreement under seal for a tenancy of a farm from year to year to deft. The agreement was expressed to be made between the mtgee. "as agent, hereinafter called the landlord," & deft., "hereinafter called the tenant." "The landlord" thereby let & "the tenant" took the premises. By one of the covenants the tenant agreed to consume on the premises all hay & fodder & to spread on the land all manure & compost produced on the farm, & not to sell off any hay or fodder, & to leave all manure & compost at the end of the tenancy. The mtgee. afterwards sold the farm, & his purchaser sought to enforce the above covenant by deft.:—Held: (1) the question who was the lessor was one of construction, in deciding which the ct. could look at the surrounding circumstances, & on the true construction of the agreement the demise was the demise of the mtgee.; the words "as agent" were not, in a demise under seal, sufficient to prevent the demise operating on the legal estate vested in the mtgee., & ptff. as his assign could therefore enforce any covenant contained in the agreement the benefit of which ran with the reversion; (2) the covenant in question touched & concerned the land, & the benefit of it therefore ran with the reversion.

If the agreement operates as a demise of the farm by R. to deft., it follows that ptff., as assignee of the reversion, can enforce any covenants contained therein the benefit of which runs with the reversion. In my judgment the benefit of the covenants in question does run with the reversion (PARKER, J.).—CHAPMAN v. SMITH, [1907] 2 Ch. 97; 76 L. J. Ch. 394; 96 L. T. 662; 51 Sol. Jo. 428.

5724. — Breach of covenant to treat land in husbandlike manner.]—A., seised in fee, demised for a term to B.; the indenture contained covenants for treating the lands in a husbandlike manner, & imposed penalties upon the tenant for every rod of living fence & every tallow or tree which he should cut down or spoil during the term. The lessor died having devised the demised premises to pltf. in fee. The latter sought to recover penalties for tellows, trees, & hedges, cut down & spoiled during the term:—Held: pleas alleging that the tellows, trees, & hedges were cut down & spoiled in the lifetime of the lessor were a good answer to the alleged breaches; & the devisee of the reversion could not recover the penalties.—*DAUBUZ v. 5725. — Breach of covenant not to assign.]—Deft. was the lessee of a shop, the lease containing a covenant by him not to assign or underlet the premises. Deft. let the premises to pltf. for the remainder of the term, this lease containing a covenant by deft. for quiet enjoyment of the premises by pltf. without any interruption by deft. or any person lawfully claiming through him. Subsequently the original lessor assigned the reversion, & the assignees of the reversion brought an action against deft. to recover possession of the premises as upon the breach of covenant against assignment. Deft. gave pltf. notice of the action, telling him that there was no defence, & signed a consent to judgment for possession, under which pltf. was evicted:—Held: as deft. had a good defence to the action, the breach of covenant having occurred before the assignment of the reversion, the act of deft. in consenting to judgment for possession was the cause of the interruption of pltf.'s enjoyment, & was therefore a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment.—*COHEN v. See, generally, PLEADING.

5728. What must be shown—Lessor's estate.]—

In a declaration by the exors. of one of several lessors, against the assignee of the lease, it is necessary for pltf. to show what estate their testator had in the premises, although the covenant was with their testator alone; for the assignee is chargeable only by reason of the privity of estate, & not by reason of any privity of contract.

Semble: in a declaration charging the assignee of a lease at the suit of the lessor, the entry of the lessee is a material averment, & traversable.—WIGGINS v. MASSON (1827), 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 93.

5729. — & derivation of assignee's title.]—In an action upon covenants in an expired lease, pltf. stated the lease, that the term had expired, that at its expiration defts. were the assigns of the lease, & liable to perform the lessee's covenants, that pltf. became, & at the expiration of the term was entitled to, the immediate reversion in the demised property, subject only to the term, that he was & is entitled to enforce all the lessee's covenants, & that defts. had for eight years paid him rent:—Held: such pleading was insufficient, & pltf. ought also to have shown what the reversion was which the lessor had, & how pltf. derived his title to that particular reversion. Accordingly, a statement of claim containing the statements so held to be insufficient was ordered to be struck out under R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 27, as a pleading tending to embarrass the fair trial of the action.—DAVIS v. JAMES (1884), 26 Ch. D. 778; 53 L. J. Ch. 523; 50 L. T. 115; 32 W. R. 406.

5730. Sufficiency of pleading—Allegation that lessor was seised.]—The assignee of the reversion suing deft. in covenant, alleged that the lessor was seised, without stating of what estate, & being so seised, devised to pltf. in fee. After verdict:—Held: a sufficient allegation of title.—HARRIS v. BEAVAN (1828), 4 Bing. 646; 1 Moo. & P. 633; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 149; 130 E. R. 918.

The assignees of the reversion made a lease to pltf. to take effect in præsenti for twenty-one years. A quarter's rent being unpaid by deft.:—Held: by virtue of 4 & 5 Ann. c. 3, ss. 9, 10, pltf. could sue deft. before attornment for the quarter's rent.—HORN v. BEARD, [1912] 3 K. B. 181; 81 L. 5737. ———.]—By an indenture of lease dated Feb. 24, 1913, the lessee of a house in London for a term of ten years, thereafter called the lessor, demised the first, second, & third floors thereof, with the hall on the ground floor & the staircase & passages, to deft. for five years from Dec. 25, 1912, the lease reserving to the lessor & her employees a right to use the hall for the purpose of gaining access from the street to the shop & premises occupied by her. The lease contained covenants by deft. that she would keep & yield up the premises in good & tenable repair, that she would not make any alteration or addition to the premises without the consent of the lessor, that she would pay for the gas consumed in the premises including the hall, & that she would use the premises for carrying on occupations of a quiet & inoffensive nature only. The lessor covenanted that she would pay the rent & perform & observe the covenants in the lease under which she held, & would pay all rates, taxes, & outgoings payable in respect of the demised premises. By an agreement between the administrators of the lessor who had died & deft. contained in correspondence, it was arranged that on the expiration on Dec. 25, 1917, of deft.'s lease she should as from that date continue to occupy the premises on a quarterly tenancy. On June 20, 1918, deft. gave a quarter's notice to quit the premises on Sept. 29, 1918. Before the expiration of that notice, by an indenture dated July 10, 1918, the administrators demised the premises to pltf. for the residue of the term created by the head lease less three days. Pltf. sued deft. for alleged breaches of the repairing covenants:—Held: pltf. was the assignee of the reversion expectant upon the determination of deft.'s tenancy; the terms of the expired lease as to repairs were to be implied in the new agreement in writing for a quarterly tenancy; those terms being implied in the written agreement were "therein contained" within the meaning of Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 10 (1), & therefore pltf. was entitled to sue for breaches of the covenants to repair as contained in the agreement for the quarterly tenancy.—COLE v. KELLY, [1920] 2 K. B. 106; 89 L. J. K. B. 819; 123 L. T. 105; 36 T. L. R. 262, C. A.

5738. Tenancy in common—Right of assignees to enforce—Assignment to lessor & another.]—A lease contained a proviso empowering the lessor

"upon giving three months' notice of his intention to resume any portion of the demised premises . . . to enter into such possession." The lessor subsequently conveyed by deed his reversion to the use of himself & another as tenants in common. Shortly afterwards the tenants in common served upon the lessees a notice of resumption of the whole of the lands:—Held: (1) the fact that a sum "per acre" which was by the lease covenanted to be allowed as rebate upon resumption, would in the case of resumption of the whole of the lands exceed the rent per acre originally reserved would not constitute evidence of an intention to resume part only of the entire demised premises; (2) actual re-entry was not necessary under such notice; (3) the severance of the reversion did not determine the right to resumption in pursuance of the proviso; (4) service of the notice upon a servant living at the house of one of the lessees, the said servant "promising to give it to him on his return home in a few days" was good service upon that lessee.

With regard to the question as to the proper service of notice. . . . The jury has found that it was served at the usual place of abode of appts. & that was quite sufficient (LORD CHELMSFORD).—LIDDY v. KENNEDY (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 134; 20 W. R. 150, H. L.

5739. ———.]—H. demised a farm to certain lessees whose interest was vested in deft. During the continuance of the lease H. died, & under his will the reversion was severed & became vested in several tenants in common, of whom pltf. was one.—Held: pltf. could, without joining the other tenants in common, maintain an action to recover damages for wrongful acts causing injury to the reversion, & for breach of a covenant running with the land.—ROBERTS v. HOLLAND, [1893] 1 Q. B. 665; 62 L. J. Q. B. 621; 41 W. R. 494; 5 R. 370, D. C.

5743. — Partial merger of term.]—Declaration by B. & L. against the exor. of V., alleged that G., holding premises under lease for ninety-nine years expiring in Dec. 1849, underlet them to V. & S. for a term ending in Mar. 1849, V. & S. jointly & severally covenanting with G. to repair during the term, & to deliver up the premises to G., or his assigns, in repair at the end of the term; & V. & S. entered & became possessed as joint tenants; that, during the continuance of the lease to V. & S. G. granted his reversion to S., B. & L.; that afterwards V. assigned his interest in the underlease to S.; that afterwards S. died, before the determination of the underlease made to V. & S.: Breach: that V. did not deliver up the premises in repair, at the expiration of the underlease to V. & S. On demurrer to the plea:—Held: the declaration showed a good cause of action. For that the whole reversion existing at the time of the breach was then in B. & L. alone; either from the grant of the reversion by G. to S., B. & L. operating so as to cause one undivided third of the interest to coalesce with so much of S.'s interest in the term, which, semble, was the legal effect, or from one-sixth then coalescing & another sixth on the subsequent assignment by V. to S.; that B. & L. being solely interested in the whole existing reversion, could sue alone on the covenant, though the damages they could recover must be commensurate with their interest; that, supposing, which, semble, was not the case that, during the interval between the grant by G. to S., B. & L. & the assignment by V. to S., S. was interested in the covenant both as covenantor & covenantee, this, though it might have suspended & so destroyed the right of action for any breach happening at that time, did not affect the right to sue on the covenant for a breach happening after S. ceased to be so interested; that the right of action in such a covenant, by virtue of privity of contract under H. 8, c. 34, s. 1, is apportionable; but in this case pl'tfs. would recover without apportionment, since the covenantee was bound to leave the whole of the premises in repair, though pl'tfs. B. & L. would be entitled to only two-thirds of the damages.—BADELEY v. VIGURS (1854), 4 E. & B. 71; 2 C. L. R. 1627; 23 L. J. Q. B. 377; 23 L. T. O. S. 297; 1 Jur. N. S. 159; 119 E. R. 28.

5744. — Reversioner with reserved interest in residue.]—Deft., being tenant of land under a lease for years granted by pl'tfs. & containing the usual lessee's covenant to pay rent, assigned all her interest in the term. Subsequently pl'tfs. granted their reversion in part of the demised premises. No rent having been paid by the assignees of deft., pl'tfs. sued her for arrears of rent accrued due since the grant of their reversion in part of the premises, the sum claimed being a fair apportionment of the rent in respect of the other part, the reversion of which remained in pl'tfs.:—Held: the covenant to pay rent was divisible; the rent could be apportioned, although the action was founded on a privity of contract only; & therefore pl'tfs. were entitled to recover.

It was admitted by counsel for deft. that no rent had ever been paid by the assignees, & deft.'s name still stood as tenant in the books of the corp'n. Under these circumstances the mere knowledge by pl'tfs. of the assignment did not amount to an extinguishment of the privity of contract between pl'tfs. & deft. . . . The covenant is divisible, so that the assignee of the reversion of part may sue upon the covenant in respect of his interest in that part. If, therefore, the reversioner can assign the reversion of part of the premises to A. & of the residue to B., & A. & B. can both sue in respect of their respective interests, there seems no good reason why, if the reversioner assigns the reversion of part of the premises to A., & reserves to himself the reversion in the residue, he should not be allowed to sue in respect of his interest in the residue (POLLOCK B.).—SWANSEA CORPN. v. THOMAS (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 48; 52 L. J. Q. B. 340; 47 L. T. 657; 47 J. P. 135; 31 W. R. 506.

The mtge. deed contained an attornment clause whereby A. attorned tenant from year to year to the trustees in respect of the mtged. premises at a yearly rent of £800, to be paid by equal quarterly payments, & it was thereby agreed that it should be lawful for the trustees "at any time after Sept. 1, 1871, without giving previous notice of their intention so to do, to enter upon & take possession of the premises, & to determine the tenancy created by the aforesaid attornment." A. filed a liquidation petition on May 17, 1879, when a receiver was appointed, & notice of the petition & the appointment was given to the mtgees. On May 19, the mtgees. entered & distrained upon the goods & chattels on the premises in respect of a half-year's rent:—Held: the attornment clause created a tenancy from year to year, although determinable at the will of the landlord, & not a tenancy at will, & the mtgees. were entitled, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, s. 34, to distrain for the half-year's rent due from A. to them at the date of the petition.

to determine the tenancy on certain contingencies, & also the following clause: the "lessees to be at liberty to determine this agreement, or the lease hereby agreed to be granted, & to abandon the said ironworks, on giving to the lessor six months' notice in writing of their intention so to do." The lessees entered & worked the mines & paid rent, but no lease was ever executed. On Aug. 10, 1863, the lessees gave notice of their intention to quit at the end of six months:—Held: in an action to recover the rent for a whole year, this being a mining lease, & taking into consideration the surrounding circumstances, the lessees were entitled to determine the tenancy at any time by giving six months' notice, such tenancy to expire at the expiration of six months after the date of the notice.

All contracts are to be construed according to the intention of the parties, & in construing a contract, you must take the words of the instrument & the surrounding circumstances at the time it is made. . . . It is competent to the parties to make special terms—to make the tenancy determinable at a three months' or a six months' notice, to expire at any time; but in the absence of such special arrangement, the general presumption holds. Premises are let for one year & so on for any number of years the parties may mutually agree: either party is at liberty to give the other a six months' notice that he will not let or take the land for the ensuing year, that is the meaning of the ordinary six months' notice to quit (ERLE, C.J.).—*BRIDGES v. A. died, & his son C. succeeded to the property & received rent from B. C. gave B. a week's notice to quit, & at the end of the week, took possession of the premises & refused to allow B. a reasonable time to remove his goods:—Held: a jury were justified in finding that C. was bound by the stipulation respecting the tenancy entered into by his father, & B.'s tenancy continued for a reasonable time after the notice so far as was necessary for the purpose of removing the goods.—*CORNISH v. The agreement contained a provision that it should be lawful for either party "to determine the tenancy hereby created by giving to the other of them three calendar months' notice in writing for that purpose:—Held: the agreement created a yearly tenancy determinable by three months' notice expiring with any year of the tenancy, & not a tenancy for an indefinite term determinable by a three months' notice expiring at any time.—*LEWIS v. The tenant entered into possession, & paid rent regularly in advance. He was served in 1919 with a three months' notice to quit expiring on July 1, 1919, but refused to go out, asserting that he was a yearly tenant, & therefore the notice was invalid as it did not expire at the period when the tenancy began:—Held: (1) the tenant holding over was subject to exactly the same conditions as were contained in the agreement; (2) notice could be given at any time to expire at the end of any month; & (3) in these circumstances the notice was a valid one & the landlords were entitled to recover possession.—MITCHELL v. TURNER (1919), 63 Sol. Jo. 776.

5808. ———.]—It is not repugnant to the nature of a tenancy from year to year to include a provision that it be determinable by a notice to quit less than six months in length; or by notices to quit by the landlord & tenant respectively which are unequal in length; or by notice to quit by either party, & also in some other way depending upon the discretion of one of the parties only, as, for example, on the sale of the premises by the landlord.

A farm being in the occupation of T. as tenant from year to year subject to the usual six months' notice to quit on either side, & his tenancy being about to expire, an agreement was entered into in Feb. 1915, between plffs., who were the owners of the farm, & deft., by which the latter engaged "to become tenant of the farm . . . now occupied by T. from Apr. 6, next . . . upon the same terms as he is now tenant until Apr. 6, 1916, or such later date being Apr. 6, immediately following the sale of the farm." Deft. took possession of the farm under the agreement. Plff. sold the farm in Oct. 1919. Deft. refused to give up possession on Apr. 6, 1920, & plffs. brought an action against him for possession:—Held: the agreement, on its true construction, was for a tenancy from year to year, determinable by the usual six months' notice to quit by either party, or on Apr. 6, which next followed the sale of the farm by the lessors; the last-mentioned mode of determining the tenancy was not repugnant to the nature of a tenancy from year to year; in the circumstances the tenancy was duly determined on Apr. 6, 1920, & plffs. were entitled to possession of the farm.—*ALLISON v. Consequently a notice served on Mar. 26, to quit on Sept. 29, then next, is not a valid notice.—MORGAN v. DAVIES (1878), 3 C. P. D. 260; 39 L. T. 60; 26 W. R. 816.

5832. — Six lunar months.]—A notice to quit, given by a tenant less than six months before the expiration of the current year of his tenancy, is not binding upon the tenant himself; & does not authorise the landlord, upon the tenant's refusing to quit, to charge him with the double rent.

The law requires that there must be half a year's notice to quit in order to determine such a tenancy. . . . But in legal proceedings the word "months" means lunar months, unless the contrary appear to be the meaning from the subject matter to which that term is applied. Six lunar months must necessarily be less than half a year, & therefore, there has not been the notice required by law to determine the tenancy (BAYLEY, J.).—JOHNSTONE v. A notice to quit on May 18, would equally have been a good notice.

5858 vi. ———.]—A notice to quit served on Friday, Dec. 17, requiring deft. to give up possession of premises held under a weekly tenancy on Friday, Dec. 24, is sufficient, but deft. has the whole of Friday, Dec. 24, within which to give up possession, & a summons for possession served on that day is premature.—*SULLIVAN v. 5861 i. What constitutes "end of tenancy"—In yearly tenancy—Anniversary of date of commencement.]—DEMPSEY v. TRACY, [1924] 2 I. R. 171.—IR.

The express statement in this agreement that the tenancy is to commence on May 19, is too clear & unambiguous to warrant any inference which might otherwise have been drawn from the stipulation that the rent is to be paid by equal quarterly payments, in advance if demanded, on the usual quarter days (LINDLEY, L.J.).

Pltf. has only himself to blame for the difficulties he is in in this case. Had he added the words which are very ordinarily inserted in a notice to quit, "or at the expiration of the year of your tenancy, which shall expire next after the end of one half year from the service of this notice" . . . all would have been in order (SMITH, L.J.).—SIDEBOTHAM v. he became the owner, & had paid rent to him for many years; that she quitted & was succeeded by H.; that N. succeeded H. & paid rent. In the beginning of Sept. 1858, deft. & N. severally called on pltf. & asked if he would accept deft. as tenant. On each occasion pltf. said he would. On Sept. 7 deft. took possession, & in Oct. of the same year, paid the rent to Michaelmas, 1858, for which pltf. gave a receipt as for rent due from N. Pltf. received the rent at Christmas, 1858, & gave a receipt for it to deft. as for rent due from him. In Mar. 1859, pltf. gave to deft. notice to quit at Michaelmas or otherwise at the end of the year of the tenancy which should expire after the end of one half year from the time of his being served with that notice. On Dec. 17, 1859, pltf.'s agent served a notice on deft. to quit at Midsummer. Deft. said pltf. might have the house if he paid the valuation of the fixtures & goodwill:—Held: it was a question for the jury, & not for the judge, to be determined by a consideration of all the facts, at what time the tenancy commenced; there was evidence of a tenancy ending at Michaelmas, & it was a misdirection to withdraw from the jury all the facts, except the conduct of deft. when the notice to quit at Midsummer was served on him.—*WALKER v. C. Tenant Entering between Quarter Days.

5891. No provision for commencement in agreement—Commencement from date of entry.]—

Where premises are taken under an agreement by which the "tenant is always to be subject to quit at three months' notice," this constitutes a quarterly tenancy, which may be determined by a three months' notice to quit, expiring at the same time of the year it commenced, or any corresponding quarter day. But although the tenant under such an agreement enters in the middle of one of the usual quarters, if there appears to be no agreement to the contrary, he will be presumed to hold from the day he enters; & the tenancy can only be determined by a notice expiring that day of the year, or some other quarter day calculated from thence.—*KEMP v. After the death of A., C. being also dead, A.'s widow, by agreement with the landlord, continued to occupy the premises at the same rent, nothing being said about the commencement of her tenancy:—Held there was evidence enough to warrant the jury in assuming that the widow's tenancy was a mere continuation of the original tenancy of A., & therefore properly determined by a notice to expire at Christmas.—LUMPHREYS v. FRANKS (1856), 18 C. B. 323; 27 L. T. O. S. 108; 20 J. P. 486; 139 E. R. 1394.

will not take effect if a contrary intention be shown by the days fixed for the payment of the rent.

A written agreement for the letting of certain premises expressed the tenancy to be "for a year certain, & so on from year to year until a half-year's notice should be given by or to either party, at a yearly rent of £50 payable quarterly, the first payment to be on Mar. 25, next." The agreement was dated Dec. 20, 1872, & specified no date for the commencement of the term:—Held: a notice to quit given by the landlord on June 24, 1874, was a good notice.—*SANDILL v. At the end of the three years he stayed on, & continued to pay the rent quarterly as before. A declaration in ejectment laying the demise on Nov. 1, was on Jan. 16, following served upon the tenant, who at the time made no objection to the notice to quit, but said he should go out as soon as he could fit himself:—Held: prima facie evidence, that the tenancy commenced at Michaelmas & was determined before the day of the demise.—*DOE d. F. Tenant Holding Over.

5908. After expiration of term—Of years & part of year.]—Tenant for life makes a lease for years, to commence on a certain day, & dies, before the expiration of the lease, in the middle of a year. The remainderman receives rent from the lessee, who continues in possession, but not under a fresh lease, for two years together, on the days of payment mentioned in the lease. This is evidence, from which the ct. will presume an agreement between the remainderman & the lessee, that the lessee should continue to hold from the day, & according to the terms of the original demise, so that notice to quit ending on that day is proper.—ROE d. JORDAN v. WARD (1780), 1 Hy. Bl. 97; 126 E. R. 58.

5909. — — — — —.]—Demise of one year & six months certain from Aug. 13, at a rent payable on the usual quarter days; three calendar months' notice to be given on either side before determination of the said tenancy. The tenant continued to occupy beyond the year & six months:—Held: a three months' notice to quit, expiring on Aug. 13, was proper; & not a notice expiring at the end of a year from the termination of the year & six months.—DOE d. ROBINSON v. DOBELL (1841), 1 Q. B. 806; 1 Gal. & Dav. 218; 10 L. J. Q. B. 242; 5 Jur. 434; 113 E. R. 1340.

5910. — — — — —.]—By an agreement dated Nov. 15, 1915, pltf. let premises to deft. "for the term of one year & one-eighth of another year from Nov. 11, 1915, at the yearly rent of £40 payable quarterly on the usual quarter days, the first payment to be for the half-quarter ending Dec. 25, 1915, & to be the sum of £5." On the expiration of the term at Christmas 1916, deft. held over without any further agreement, & pltf. accepted the quarter's rent due on Lady Day, 1917:—Held: deft. was tenant from year to year under an implied tenancy commencing at Christmas, 1916, & a notice given by him on June 8, 1917, to quit on Dec. 25, 1917, was valid.

The statement, first appearing in Cole on Ejectment, p. 50, & since repeated in other text-books, that, "generally speaking, an implied tenancy from year to year, created by the payment & acceptance of rent after the end or determination of a previous term, will be deemed to have commenced at the same time of the year as the original term, & notice to quit should be given accordingly" is not supported by the cases relied upon as authority for it.—CROFT v. WILLIAM, F. BLAY, LTD., [1919] 2 Ch. 343; 88 L. J. Ch. 545; 121 L. T. 18; 35 T. L. R. 556; 63 Sol. Jo. 607, C. A.

5911. Under void lease.]—If a landlord lease for seven years by parol, & agree that the tenant shall enter at Lady Day, & quit at Candlemas, though the lease be void by Stat. Frauds as to the duration of the term, the tenant holds under the terms of the lease in other respects; & therefore, the landlord can only put an end to the tenancy at Candlemas.—*DOE d. RIGGE v. 5912. — — — — —.]—Where tenant for life grants a lease for years which is void against the remainderman & the latter, before he elects to avoid it, receives rent from the tenant, whereby a tenancy from year to year is created, yet there is with reference to the old term, & therefore a half year's notice to quit from the remainderman ending with the old year is good.—*DOE d. 5913. Absence of special arrangement.]—A. enters upon premises as tenant to B., under an agreement, not binding under Stat. Frauds, for five years & a half from Michaelmas 1823. In 1826 a negotiation is entered into for a term of seven years "from the expiration of the present term," at an increased rent, the landlord making some alterations. The alterations are made, but no lease is executed. At Michaelmas, 1829, a whole year's rent is paid at the increased rate, & payments are afterwards made on the same footing:—Held: a notice given on Mar. 11, 1835, to quit at Michaelmas, was a valid notice.

A party who enters under an agreement void by Stat. Frauds, becomes by that Stat. tenant at will to the owner, & the tenancy described in the Stat. as a tenancy at will has since been construed to enure as a tenancy from year to year. But such tenant may quit without notice, & be ejected without notice, at the expiration of the period contemplated in the agreement. If, subsequently to that period, the tenant goes on paying the rent, I think he must be considered as tenant with reference to the period of the original entry, unless something appears which shows that a different arrangement was come to. Here, the letters show that the parties entered into a negotiation for a term of seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, to commence from Lady Day. But deft. did not enter under that negotiation; he was in possession before. It is convenient not to depart from the general rule of construction in cases of tenancies from year to year; which rule is, that the time for giving notice to quit is fixed & determined by the period of the original entry. I think, therefore, that a non-suit ought to be entered (COLTMAN, J.).—BERREY v. LINDLEY (1841), 3 Man. & G. 498;

5914. — Assignment by tenant.—Where a tenant by lease continues to hold after the expiration of it as tenant at will, & assigns to another, the tenancy of the assignee shall be held to commence at the day on which it commenced, under the lease, & a notice to quit on that day only is good, notwithstanding the assignee came in on a different day.—DOE d. 5915. — Granted to sub-lessor.—By a lease dated Apr. 28, 1834, certain premises were demised to E. to hold from May 1, then next, for forty years, at the rent of £55 a year, payable half yearly, on Nov. 1, & May 1. The lease contained a covenant by E. not to underlet without the consent in writing of the lessors, & a proviso for re-entry in case he should commit any act of bkpcy., on which a fiat should issue under which he should be duly found & declared a bkpt. In Dec. 1838, E. underlet a part of the premises to deft., with the consent in writing of the lessors for twenty-one years, at a rent of £25 per year. In Nov. 1840 E. committed an act of bkpcy., on which a fiat issued, under which in Feb. 1841, he was found & declared a bkpt. The lessors thereupon brought an ejectment against E. did not serve it upon deft. E. let judgment go by default, & the writ of possession was executed on May 12, 1841. Deft. remained in possession of the part underlet to him. In Feb. 1843 an execution was levied on his goods & the lessors served the sheriff with notice that £25 "a year's rent due in Nov. last," was in arrear from deft. to them, & required the sheriff to pay over the same out of the levy, which he did accordingly. On Apr. 29, 1843 deft. was served by the lessors with a notice to quit :—Held : in ejectment brought against deft., on a demise dated May 4, 1844, the proper inference to be drawn from the facts above stated was, that deft.'s tenancy from year to year to the lessors commenced on May 12, & therefore the demise was laid too soon.—DOE d. LLOYD v. INGLEBY (1845), 14 M. & W. 91; 14 L. J. Ex. 240; 5 L. T. O. S. 96; 153 E. R. 402.

5916. — ——Tenant for a term under-leased. The sub-lessee held over, & paid rent. 5917. — Permission from head lessor to remain in possession.—Premises were let by the owner in fee on a lease expiring at Midsummer, 1866. The lessee underlet to deft. on a lease from year to year, commencing at Michaelmas. Deft. was in possession at Midsummer, 1866, when the lease of his immediate lessor came to an end,

& the owner in fee granted a new lease to pltf. as from that time. Deft., who continued to occupy the premises, paid pltf. a sum equal to a quarter's rent on the terms on which he had held the premises, as for rent from Midsummer to Michaelmas, 1866, at which time pltf. insisted upon an increase of £5 per annum on the rent, & such increased rent was thenceforth paid by deft. In Dec. 1873, pltf. gave deft. a six months' notice to quit at Midsummer :—Held : the notice was bad, deft. having been allowed to hold over the expiration of the lease originally granted to him, without any explanation or fresh stipulation, save as to the increased rent; the inference being that there was a tacit agreement between him & pltf. that he should continue to hold as tenant from year to year according to his original holding, that is, as from Michaelmas to Michaelmas.—KELLY v. On Dec. 23, 1913, the tenants wrote to the landlord giving notice to quit the premises "at the earliest possible moment," & stating that if, as the tenants hoped, a satisfactory re-organisation of their business was effected, the notice would be cancelled:—Held: the fact that the tenants claimed by the notice to exercise in a certain event a right which they did not possess, namely to cancel the notice, did not render the notice bad as being conditional, & the letter constituted a valid notice determining the tenancy at the expiration of six months from Mar. 1, 1914.—MAY v. 5929. ———. ———.]—An agreement for a yearly tenancy of a small holding provided that the tenancy might be determined by a six months' written notice expiring at any Michaelmas. On Mar. 21, 1917, the agent for the landlords sent to deft., who was in arrear with his rent, a written notice to quit on Oct. 11, old Michaelmas Day, 1917. The notice to quit was enclosed in a letter in which the agent said: "I am instructed by the Small Holdings & Allotments Committee to serve upon you the enclosed notice to quit which is intended to terminate your tenancy at Michaelmas next unless they see sufficient reason in the meantime to change their opinion." The tenant claimed that the notice was a conditional notice & therefore invalid. In Mar. 1916, a notice to quit had also been given to deft., whose rent was in arrear, but this notice was withdrawn at deft.'s request upon his paying the rent due :—Held: the covering letter on its true construction, read in the light of what happened in the previous year, did not introduce into the notice to quit a condition or a reservation of right to ptlts., & the notice was valid.—NORFOLK COUNTY COUNCIL v. Where a party held tithes under a yearly composition, commencing at Michaelmas, some of the tithes being payable in May, & on Mar. 24, he gave the tithe owner notice that he intended "from henceforth" to set out the tithes in kind:—Held: this notice could not enure to determine the composition from the Michaelmas following, but it was altogether inoperative.

Suppose a tenant of land on Mar. 24, gave this notice: "I hereby give you notice that I intend to quit & deliver up the farm I now hold of you," without more; would that be a good notice for Michaelmas? Such a notice only can be good as, on a reasonable construction of it, denotes an intention to give up the premises at the lawful time (PARKE, B.).—*GOODE v. The notice being insufficient for the next Oct. 11:—Held: the subsequent words did not make it a good notice for the next year.

This notice is upon the face of it a three months' notice for Oct. 11, 1840, & to make it applicable to the next year, care should have been taken to make it more distinct in its terms. The landlord here seems not to have been quite certain himself of the time at which the tenancy would expire, & he has tried to throw the burden of discovering that upon his tenant (ALDERSON, B.).—*MILLS v. 5946. — "At the earliest possible moment."]
 —MAY v. BORUP, No. 5928, ante.

5947. — "Earliest day your tenancy can legally be terminated."—A written agreement of tenancy of a public-house contained the clause: "either party shall be at liberty to determine the tenancy hereby created upon giving to the other three months' previous notice in writing of his or their intention so to do expiring on any one of the days appointed as special transfer sessions by the justices of the district in which the said premises are situate." On Oct. 12, 1923, the landlords served on the tenant a notice to quit in these terms: "We hereby give you notice to quit & deliver up to us . . . on the earliest day your tenancy can legally be terminated by valid notice to quit given to you by us at the date of the service hereof all that," etc., naming the demised premises.

The justices of the district at the annual general meeting in Feb. 1923, had fixed Jan. 8, 1924, as a date of special transfer sessions. At the annual general meeting in Feb. 1924, Apr. 8, 1924, was fixed for special transfer sessions. If the words "three months" in the tenancy agreement meant lunar months, the earliest day on which the tenancy could be terminated by a valid notice to quit given on Oct. 12, 1923, would be the earlier day fixed for the special transfer sessions, namely, Jan. 8, 1924; but if the words "three months" meant three calendar months, Apr. 8, 1924, would be the earliest day.

The landlords, notwithstanding that they had supplied the tenant with liquors after Jan. 8, in the belief that he was entitled to three calendar months' notice to quit, brought an action for possession of the premises, alleging that the tenancy had been determined by a valid notice to quit expiring on Jan. 8:—Held: (1) the expression "three months" in the tenancy agreement meant three lunar months; (2) the landlords were not in the circumstances precluded from asserting that the tenancy had determined on Jan. 8, & (3) the notice to quit was invalid, inasmuch as it placed upon the tenant the burden of resolving the questions of law, when his tenancy could be legally determined, & what was a valid notice to quit.—PHIPPS (P.) & CO. DEFONVIELLE (1846), 2 Car. & Kir. 415, N. P.

5953. Exception to rule—Agreement providing for written notice.]—Where power is given to a party to determine a lease on giving a notice in writing, he cannot determine it by giving a parol notice.—LEGG d. SCOT v. BENION (1738), Willes, 43; 125 E. R. 1047.

D. Notice to Quit on Contingency.

5954. How far valid—To quit on obtaining another situation.]—If tenant from year to year give his landlord notice that he will quit upon a contingency, & does not quit when the contingency happens, he is not liable to an action on Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), for double rent.—FARRANCE v. ELKINGTON (1811), 2 Camp. 591, N. P.

5955. — To quit "if breach of covenant shall be committed."]—Now it is obvious, that the two notices directed by the proviso are, in their nature, essentially different. It is one thing to say, "you have committed a breach, & therefore I will turn you out at the end of a month." It is quite another thing to say, "if you shall at any time hereafter commit a forfeiture, I will turn you out at the expiration of a month after such forfeiture." Where an act has been done, or omitted to be done by the grantee, whereby a forfeiture has been incurred, it is in the power of the grantor to waive the forfeiture, or to take advantage of it; & the object of requiring a notice to be given seems to be, that a month's time may be allowed to the grantee to remove his goods after the grantor has definitely elected to vacate the grant, at a fixed definite day. But the notice that has been given in this case binds the landlord to nothing; if a further breach of covenant is committed, he may waive it, or not, at his election; the grantee does not know whether he is to quit or not, or at what time he is to quit. To hold this notice to be sufficient, would be in effect to deprive pltf. of the whole benefit of the clause in question. We think, therefore, that the notice was insufficient (TINDAL, C.J.).—MUSKETT v. HILL (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 694; 7 Scott, 855; 9 L. J. C. P. 201; 132 E. R. 1267.

5958. —.]—Deft. leased about twenty acres of land for five years, at a yearly rent, from the owner in fee simple, under a memorandum of agreement, & immediately afterwards sub-let about six acres, part of the premises, to another person on a yearly tenancy. At the conclusion of the term, deft. continued possession of the whole, & during the first year after the term expired the lessor conveyed to pltf. the six acres which deft. had sub-let, & agreed with pltf., but without the consent of deft., as to the amount of rent to be apportioned to this part of the premises out of the rent which deft. paid. Although notice of the conveyance & agreed apportionment of rent was afterwards given to deft., he never recognised pltf. as his landlord, but continued to pay rent for the whole premises to his lessor, who handed over the agreed portion to pltf. Pltf. gave deft. notice to quit the sub-let premises six months before the expiration of a year's tenancy; & deft. forwarded this notice, with a further notice to quit from himself, to his sub-tenant. At the end of the year the sub-tenant gave up possession of his premises to pltf., but deft. wrote to the latter claiming to hold the same as tenant to the original lessor, & requiring possession. Deft. then did certain acts upon the premises which had been in his sub-tenant's occupation, for which pltf. brought this action of trespass:—Held: pltf.'s notice to deft. to quit part only of the premises demised to him was invalid; his passing on the notice to his tenant did not preclude his disputing it; & the action could not be maintained.—*PRINCE v. 5960. Person to whom premises to be given up—Necessity for statement.—By a memorandum of agreement, dated June 23, 1842, between A., as agent for & on behalf of the churchwardens of the parish of St. M., not naming them, of the one part, & B. of the other part, it was agreed, provided a licence could be obtained from the lord of the manor, & upon B. putting the premises into repair, that the churchwardens should grant a lease to B. for twenty-one years from Midsummer Day then next, under the clear yearly rent of £30. Such lease to contain covenants for payment of rent & taxes, & to repair, insure, not to commit waste, etc., & all other usual & proper covenants, etc., & B. agreed to accept such lease, & execute a counterpart, etc., & that, until such lease & counterpart should be granted, the said yearly rent should be payable & recoverable by distress or otherwise, in like manner as if such lease & counterpart had been executed:—Held: the tenancy thereby created, whether a tenancy from year to year, which the ct. thought it was, or a tenancy at will, was properly put an end to by a notice to quit & deliver up possession, given by persons acting as agents for C. & D. who were churchwardens at the time the agreement was made & B. let into possession; notwithstanding the notice purported also to have been given on behalf of the churchwardens & overseers in office when the notice was served, & did not state to whom the possession was to be delivered up.—*DOE d. In 1837 G. received rent from deft. In Mar. 1838, G. gave deft. notice to quit upon Sept. 29, then next, or at the expiration of the current year of the tenancy. In Feb. 1839, G. appointed to E.:—Held: in an ejectment, containing a demise by G. on Oct. 1, 1838, & by E. on Nov. 1, 1839, the notice to quit was sufficient to determine the tenancy, & that, whether E. came in under the deed of settlement in 1830, or under the appointment in 1839.—DOE d. EGREMONT (EARL) v. FORWOOD (1842), 3 Q. B. 627; 11 L. J. Q. B. 321; 114 E. R. 647.

5977. Remainderman—Right of purchaser from remainderman.—Where a power of leasing requires that a fixed rent & a money heriot payable under peculiar circumstances shall be reserved, a lease granted under the power reserving a larger heriot is void.

A remainderman received rent from the lessee of a void lease, & having given notice to quit conveyed the property by virtue of a power to the lessor of pltf.:—Held: in ejectment the purchaser might take advantage of the notice given by the remainderman.—DOE d. EGREMONT (LORD) v. HELLINGS (1842), 6 Jur. 821.

5978. Mortgagee of reversion—Mortgagor in possession—Legal estate in mortgagee.—Notice to a tenant to quit was signed by the mtgees. after mtge. of the reversion. A clause in the mtge. deed provided that if the interest were duly paid by the mtgor., the principal money was not to be called in by the mtgees. until a period after the date of the notice. There was also the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held: notwithstanding this clause, the signature of the mtgee. to the notice was sufficient.—BURTON v. DICKENSON (1867), 17 L. T. 264.

See, further, MORTGAGE.

5979. Purchaser of part of reversion—Division not recognised by tenant—Invalid—Subsequent notice by purchaser of remainder no remedy.—When a landlord has sold in two lots property that is let on a single tenancy & the tenant has not recognised the division of the tenancy, a notice to quit given by the purchaser of one lot is invalid ab initio & cannot be varied by a subsequent notice to quit given by the purchaser of the other lot, even when the second notice is given before the date from which a notice determining the entire tenancy must run in order to be effective.

A landlord or tenant who gives a bad notice is not precluded or estopped from saying afterwards that it is a bad notice.—Re BEBINGTON'S TENANCY, BEBINGTON v. WILDMAN, [1921] 1 Ch. 559; 90 L. J. Ch. 269; 124 L. T. 661; 37 T. L. R. 409; 65 Sol. Jo. 343.

5980. Joint reversioners—After severance of reversion—Notice to quit entire holding—Subsequent contract of sale by one reversioner.—Where the reversion on an agricultural holding held by a tenant from year to year, is severed without any legal apportionment of the rent, a valid notice to quit the entire holding, given by both reversioners is not nullified by a subsequent contract by one reversioner to sell his part of the holding.—ROCHESTER & CHATHAM JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. CLINCH, [1925] Ch. 753; 134 L. T. 139.

K., the trustees, & pltf., executed the deed:—Held: G. was an agent lawfully authorised to give the notice required by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 1.—POOLE v. WARREN (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 582; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 693; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 518; 3 Jur. 23; 112 E. R. 959.

C. Receivers.

5982. Appointed by court.—It was objected that the notice to quit was not given by the landlord nor by any agent of his thereunto lawfully authorised. It being given by the receiver appointed by the ct. alone:—Held: the receiver was an agent for the landlord, lawfully authorised for this purpose.—WILKINSON v. COLLEY (1771), 5 Burr. 2694; 98 E. R. 414.

5983. With general authority to let.—It seems that a receiver appointed by the Ct. of Chancery, with a general authority to let the lands to tenants from year to year, has also authority to determine such tenancies by a regular notice to chased, cannot by such notice validly determine the tenancy. In such circumstances the notice to quit, to be valid, should be signed by both the vendor & purchaser or at all events by the purchaser as the expressly authorised agent of the vendor.—GRAHAM v. M'ILWAINE, [1918] 2 L. R. 353.—IR.

Where such notice was given by an agent under a written authority, which at the time of the service of the notice had been signed only by some of the several joint tenants, but afterwards was signed by all the others:—Held: the subsequent recognition was sufficient to give validity to the authority from the beginning, & the notice to quit was therefore sufficient.—GOODTITLE d. Cestui que trust—Provision for notice to representatives & assigns.]—A testator being entitled to a customary freehold held of a manor, according to the custom of which tenants could not grant leases for longer than a year & a day without the licence of the lord, devised the tenement by will to trustees upon trust for his widow for life, with remainder to his son. Testator died in Dec. 1877, having on June 15, 1877, with the licence of the lord, let the premises in question to the two defts. T. & S. on a repairing lease for twenty-one years from Dec. 25, 1876, at a yearly rent of £130, determinable at the end of fourteen years by one year's notice to the lessor, his representatives or assigns, expiring with that year. On Dec. 21, 1889, S., one of defts., gave testator's widow, who had been permitted by the trustees to receive the rents, directly, notice of defts.' intention to quit the premises on Dec. 25, 1890; & on Aug. 13, 1890, the widow purported to leave the premises for a term of seven years to defts., but without the licence of the lord, at a rent of £100, & with less onerous covenants. The widow died, & the trustees of the will brought this action, claiming that the original lease of June 15, 1877, had never been duly determined, & the new lease of Aug. 13, 1890, was inoperative:—Held: the notice of Dec. 21, 1889, was bad, not having been served on the "representatives or assigns" of the bailliffs in succession is merely evidence of a tenancy in the corporation. 6013. — Implied authority to receive notice—Rebuttal of implication.]—The service of a notice to quit made at the house of the tenant upon a person whose duty it would be to deliver the notice to the tenant, is sufficient to sustain ejectment, although in fact the notice was never delivered to the tenant. The presumption in such a case is that it did reach the tenant himself. In such a case the question is not whether the servant performed his duty in delivering it to his master, but whether the servant was to be considered as the agent of the master to restore the notice. If he was, the service of the notice will effectually bind the master.

T. lived in a house where his two sons & his daughter also resided. T. was imbecile. The house was managed by his daughter, the farming business by his two sons. A notice to quit, addressed to the father, was served at the house by delivery to the daughter. She put it on the dresser in the kitchen, & afterwards burnt it. One of the sons knew of its existence, but was not shown to have known its exact terms, though he was aware of its nature:—Held: this was a service sufficient to entitle the landlord to maintain ejectment against the father.

Effective service of notice on a servant at the dwelling house situated in the demised premises is a service on the tenant. The law considers that servant to be an implied agent of the tenant for that particular purpose. The only evidence by which that could be rebutted would be by producing evidence to show that such implied agency was not correctly implied & the inference of agency not correctly drawn from the facts & that consequently there was no agency (HATHERLEY, L.C.).—*TANHAM v. B., in Nov. 1823, mortgaged to C., & in June, 1829, the mtge. term was assigned to D., & ultimately became vested in E. After B. had assigned to C., & when he had no reversion, but a mere equity of redemption, he, by indenture granted an underlease for seventy-six years to F., with a proviso for re-entry similar to that contained in the original lease from A. Some of the mesne assignments were made subject to this underlease. In ejectment by the legal representatives of E. for a breach of the covenant in the original lease, in using the premises as a public-house or beershop:—Held: the payment to, & acceptance by, E. of rent under the underlease by B. to F., merely created a tenancy from year to year; & such tenancy was well determined by a notice to quit served upon the attorney of the administratrix of the person who had paid the rent to the lessors of pltf., & under whom deft. claimed.—*DOE d. In an action by the assignee of the reversion to recover possession of the premises on the ground that the demise had been duly determined by notice under the proviso, it appeared that the lessee had disappeared some years previously, after having mortgaged the premises by way of underlease, that his address could not be found, & that written notice to determine the tenancy directed to him had been sent to his last known address, & had also been delivered to the mtgee. & to the occupier of the premises:—Held: the action could not be maintained, as there had been no service of the notice on the lessee, & as he had not assigned the premises no other service would satisfy the terms of the proviso.—*HOGG v. The agent was at his place of business until between six and seven o'clock in the evening, & did not receive the letter, but found it on the following morning:—Held: a sufficient notice to determine the tenancy, the jury having found that the letter was delivered on Mar. 25, after the agent left.

were proved to have been delivered by him on that occasion:—Held: on the trial of an ejectment, after the attorney's death, the indorsement so made by him was admissible evidence to prove the service of the third notice.—*DOE d. It was shown that J., a person deceased, was ordinarily employed for the landlord, to serve notices to quit; that a notice requiring R. to quit had been handed to J., who had brought back the duplicate, & had signed an indorsement stating service on R., & further, that J. had then orally stated that he had delivered the notice to W.:—Held: J.'s oral declaration was not admissible, as not appearing to have been made in the ordinary course of his business.—*STAPYLTON v. Sect. 8.—Waiver of notice: Sub-sects. 2 & 3, A., B., C., D., E. & F.]

SUB-SECT. 2.—CONSENT OF PARTIES.

6030. Necessity for.]—Though payment & acceptance of rent accruing after the expiration of a notice to quit amounts to a waiver of the notice a demand of such rent does not necessarily operate as a waiver; & it is a question for the jury, & not for the ct., whether, under the circumstances of the case, the notice has been waived.

In the case of determination of tenancy by notice to quit, the tenancy is put an end to by the agreement of the parties, which determination of the tenancy cannot be waived without the assent of both (MAULE, J.).—BLYTH v. DENNETT (1853), 13 C. B. 178; 22 L. J. C. P. 79; 20 L. T. O. S. 209; 138 E. R. 1165.

6031. — Consent of both parties.]—The effect of waiving a notice to quit given to a yearly tenant is to create a new tenancy; & consequently, a guarantor of the rent under the original tenancy is not liable for rent becoming due after the time when the notice would have expired.

It is clear that, whether the notice to quit is given by the landlord or the tenant, the party to whom it is given is entitled to insist upon it & it cannot be withdrawn without the consent of both (KELLY, C.B.).—TAYLEUR v. WILDIN (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 303; 37 L. J. Ex. 173; 18 L. T. 655; 32 J. P. 630; 16 W. R. 1018.

6032. — .]—It is obvious that after the notice [to quit] had been served no subsequent withdrawal of it which was not by mutual consent of the parties could have prevented the tenancy from determining on that date, & deft. from thereupon being not a tenant properly so called, but a mere tenant on sufferance, or possibly a trespasser (LORD COLERIDGE, J.).—HUNT v. 6041. — One day's rent.]—Under an agreement in 1889 defts., a telephone co., supplied to plffs. the use of a telephone wire & apparatus for three years at a rent payable quarterly. Upon the expiration of the term the parties continued the agreement by mutual consent. On Dec. 30, 1893, being the last day of a quarter, defts. gave plffs. a notice determining the agreement forthwith, & stating their intention to disconnect the wire & remove the apparatus, & at the same time they demanded rent "up to Dec. 31," being one day beyond the quarter. This rent was duly paid to & accepted by defts. Upon a motion by plffs. for an injunction to restrain defts. from interfering with the wire & apparatus:—Held: the agreement created the relation of landlord & tenant, & therefore the acceptance by defts. of rent for a day beyond that on which the notice determining the contract was given operated as a waiver of the notice; accordingly, an injunction was granted restraining defts. from acting on their notice.—KEITH PROWSE & Co. v. 6042. — Unless otherwise explained.—The mere acceptance of rent by a landlord, for occupation subsequent to the time when the tenant ought to have quitted according to the notice given him for that purpose, is not of itself a waiver on the part of the landlord of such notice but matter of evidence only to be left to the jury, under the circumstances of the case.

6053. — To continue tenancy for further year—Breach of condition in new agreement—Notice revived.—A tenant of a farm required that his rent might be reduced; the landlord refused; whereupon the tenant gave a notice to quit at Michaelmas, 1834. It was afterwards agreed that he should continue to hold on at a reduced rent, the notice continuing in force, until Michaelmas, 1835. Before that time arrived, the tenant offered to continue on as tenant at a certain rent, whereupon the landlord's agent wrote a letter, stating that the landlord had directed him to inform the tenant, that he could only consent to his offer as to the rent, from Michaelmas next to Michaelmas, 1836; provided he, the lessor, "could not find a tenant for the farm at the rent it appeared to him, the agent, to be worth, by Aug. 1." One C. having applied for the farm, the tenant refused to allow him to go over it, & C. made no offer :—Held : it was an implied condition of the agreement, that the tenant should allow persons applying for the farm to go over it; & that condition not having been performed by him, the contract was at an end.

In the construction of this, which is a parol contract, I think it was a necessarily implied condition, that the tenant should allow the person who might be desirous of taking it to come upon the farm to inspect it (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—*DOE d. 6054. Authorising tenant to pay charge on estate—Annuity.—An authority from a landlord to his tenant to pay a charge upon the estate, in respect of a period subsequent to the expiration of the notice to quit, is not a waiver of the notice; nor is it an admission, that the person to whom it is addressed is filling the character of tenant at that period, because the tenant would be liable to answer for the amount in an action for mesne profits.—*DOE d. 6056. — ——Question of fact.—In assumpsit for rent of coal, the issue being whether or not for an injunction to restrain the tenant from so doing:—Held: upon the true construction of the agreement, the tenant had not broken any of the covenants, as the "pasture lands" in the agreement referred solely to those parts of the farm which were meadow land at the date of the agreement; & further, ploughing the field would not have been waste or spoil on the tenant's part.—*RUSH v. 6065. Expiry of notice.—When once the notice to quit has expired the position of the parties is precisely the same as it would be if the original lease had provided for the determination of the term on the date mentioned in the notice. There is in that case no room for election by the landlord. The landlord & the tenant may of course agree that a new tenancy shall be created on the old terms, & that is what in effect they do when they agree that the notice to quit shall be waived. But the agreement to continue the tenancy must be proved. It must be shown that the parties were ad idem as to the terms (LUSH, J.).

A notice to quit can be withdrawn at any time before the date fixed for the termination of the tenancy. But after the time has expired the lease is at an end & a landlord can no more waive his notice to quit than he can waive the effluxion of time (SHEARMAN, J.).—*DAVIES v. SECT. 10.—PROOF OF NOTICE.

6066. Evidence of attesting witness—Proof of service insufficient.—A notice to quit in writing, signed by the party giving it, & attested by a witness, must be proved by calling that witness, or his absence must be accounted for; proof that it was served on the tenant, that he read it, & did not object to it, is not sufficient.—DOE d. HAWKES (1706), 2 Esp. 504, N. P.

6072. ————Acceptance of irregular notice.—By agreement in writing, dated May 20, 1824, deft. "agreed to let pltf. two upper rooms, & part of a lower room as a workshop & smithy, & to find power for three lathes, etc.; deft. agreed to pay rent for the above; £61 per year, to be paid quarterly in cash; & that three months' notice was to be required on each party." Pltf. took possession of the rooms the same day, & deft. found the power. On Aug. 20, deft. served pltf. with a written notice of that date, to quit the rooms on Nov. 20, following. Pltf. did not then object to the notice, but held over after Nov. 20, from which day deft. ceased to find the power. On Jan. 19, 1825, pltf. & deft. settled their accounts up to Nov. 20, preceding, when pltf. agreed to give up the key of the rooms; but afterwards refused to do so, saying "that the notice was bad;" to which deft. replied, "then there would soon be another quarter's rent due." In an action by pltf. for damages for the discontinuance of the power by deft.:—Held: the agreement was a demise of a tenement, creating a tenancy which could not be determined but by a notice ending with the current year, except by custom; & pltf.'s agreeing to give up the key when he did, was no acquiescence in the notice served upon him, & no surrender of his tenancy within Stat. Frauds; though such an acquiescence, if established, would have been a bar to the action.—BROWN v. BURTONSHAW (1826), 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 603.

6073. ————Second notice on discovery of error—Notice taking effect in future.—A tenant from year to year, believing that his tenancy determined at Midsummer, gave a written notice to quit at that period, which the landlord accepted, & made no objection to. The tenant having afterwards discovered that his tenancy expired at Christmas, gave his landlord another notice accordingly, & on possession being demanded at Midsummer, refused to quit the premises. An ejectment having been brought:—Held: the tenancy was not determined by notice, inasmuch

It is a general rule of construction that the words of a covenant must be taken most strongly against the covenantor, & that rule applies more strongly to a proviso for re-entry, which contains a condition that destroys or defeats the estate (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—*DOE d. I do not think provisos of this sort are to be construed with the strictness of conditions at common law. These are matters of contract between the parties, & should in my opinion be construed as other contracts. The parties agree to a tenancy on certain terms, & there is no hardship in binding them to those terms. In my view of cases of this sort the provisos ought to be construed according to fair & obvious construction without favour to either side (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—*DOE d. DAVIS v. (2) I think that the condition ought to be construed with this amount of strictness, that it ought clearly to appear the condition was meant to include & did incorporate the covenant on the breach whereof the right to re-enter is claimed; but that the question whether the covenant itself is broken . . . is to be determined by reference to the rules which prevail in construing ordinary contracts between party & party (CHANNEILL, B.).—CROFT v. 6086. Without regard to proviso for re-entry.]—A lease was granted to two partners, B. & H., as joint tenants. The lessees covenanted that they, their exors., administrators, or assigns, or any or either of them, would not, during the term, assign, underlet, or part with the possession of the demised property to any person or persons without the written consent of the lessor; & there was a proviso for re-entry on the breach of any of the covenants. The partners dissolved partnership, & agreed that the partnership property should be made over to B., & that the leasehold property should be assigned to him with the consent of the lessor, if such consent could be obtained, & recited, as the fact was, that A. had given up sole possession of the leaseholds to B. Consent was not obtained, & no assignment of the leasehold was executed, but B.,

from the time of the dissolution, remained in sole possession:—Held: there had been no breach of the covenant, & the proviso for re-entry had not come into operation.

In my opinion we must in the first place construe the covenant without regard to the proviso for re-entry, for its construction must be the same in an action for damages for breach of the covenant as in an action for the recovery of the land on the ground that the proviso for re-entry has come into operation by reason of such breach (JESSEL, M.R.).

I agree that, although it is a question of forfeiture, we must construe the covenant fairly, ascertain its meaning without regard to forfeiture, & then see whether, upon that ascertained meaning, a forfeiture has been incurred (COTTON, L.J.).—BRISTOL CORPN. v. 6087. Literal construction—Unless reason to contrary.]—Lease for years by indenture rendering rent, & lessee covenants with lessor that he will pay the rent, & will not assign without leave of lessor, provided that if the rent be in arrear, or if all or any of the covenants hereinafter contained on the part of lessee shall be broken, it shall be lawful for lessor to re-enter; & there were no covenants on the part of lessee after the proviso, but only a covenant by lessor that lessee paying, etc., & performing all & every the covenants hereinbefore contained on his part to be performed, etc., should quietly enjoy:—Held: lessor could not re-enter for breach of the covenant not to assign, for the proviso is restrained by the word hereinafter to subsequent covenants, & though there were none such, yet the ct. could not reject the word.

I believe the safest rule for the construction of these instruments is to construe them according to the letter, unless we can see a decisive reason for departing from it (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—DOE d. SPENCER v. GODWIN (1815), 4 M. & S. 265; 105 E. R. 833.

The lessee, being a trader, committed an act of bkpcy., on which a fiat issued against him, & he was by the comrs. found & declared a bkpt.; but the petitioning creditor's debt on which the fiat was founded was proved by A. & B., as partners, whereas it was due to A., B., & C., as partners:—Held: the lessee was not duly found & declared a bkpt., within the meaning of the proviso.—DOE d. By a subsequent Act the quantity to be carried was increased; proviso, that if B. did not yearly carry such increased quantity to C. "or to some other place near thereto, to be used as a depository for coals instead thereof," A. might re-enter:—Held: by the last proviso, the first was virtually repealed; & B. carrying the increased quantity to a depository near to C. was excused from carrying coals to C.

In construing such local Acts of Parliament, we are to look not at the preamble, or at the words of any one particular clause, alone, but at the language of the whole; & if in the preamble, or in any one clause, we find expressions less large & extensive than we find in other parts, & upon a view of the whole we can see that the larger & more extensive expressions used in other parts best show what the intention of the legislature was; then it is our duty to give effect to the larger expressions, notwithstanding the more limited phrases which may be found in other places. We must look at the whole Act, & form our judgment upon it as a whole (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—DOE d. BYWATER v. BRANDLING (1828), 7 B. & C. 643; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 600; 6 L. J. O. S. K. 6093. Act working forfeiture nullified by subsequent act.]—A forfeiture cannot be enforced in respect of an act, which of itself might work a forfeiture, but which, by a subsequent act, is rendered void. Thus, where a lease contained a clause of forfeiture in case the tenant should assign that lease, & the tenant did assign it to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, & upon this deed, treated as an act of bkpcy., a commission issued against the tenant:—Held: this assignment, turning out to be void, was not sufficient to entitle the landlord to enforce it as a ground of forfeiture.—DOE d. 6094. Where demise not under seal.]—(1) A demise may contain a clause of forfeiture, though it be not under seal.

(2) Where there are clauses, some of which contain words of agreement or covenant & others contain words of agreement or covenant & also words of condition, the deed shall be construed so as to give effect to both. Accordingly, where by demise, not under seal, certain things were "stipulated" & other things "stipulated & agreed" between the parties & there was a clause stating that it was "stipulated & conditioned" that the tenant should not underlet:—Held: the latter words were words of condition; & the tenant having underlet, he had incurred a forfeiture.—DOE d. Then followed this proviso, "provided always that, if the rent should be in arrear, etc., or if B., his exors., etc., should make default in the observance & performance of the covenants & conditions on his or their part herein contained, then & in either of the said cases it shall be lawful for B., his exors., etc., to enter the premises, etc., & same to have again & enjoy as in his or their former estate, & B. & all other occupiers thereof & thereout to remove, & thenceforth these presents & everything herein contained shall cease & be void." B. was let into the premises, & paid rent. The repairs not having been done by the time agreed on:—Held: (1) A. was entitled to re-enter; (2) an agreement creating a present demise, void as a lease by Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), s. 3, may still enure as an agreement.—*HAYNE v. 6097. ——— Incorporating covenants from prior lease—Insertion of new covenant in agreement.—By an agreement in writing, but not under seal, pltf. agreed to let & deft. to hire on lease for twenty-one years a house, etc., on the following terms: the rent to be £55 per annum; the lease to commence from Mar. 25 next, & to contain an extract of the covenants in the original lease which pltf. is bound under: that the proposed lease shall not be sold, parted with, or any portion of the property underlet without the consent in writing of pltf. In the original lease were six covenants by the lessee, with a proviso for re-entry on the breach of any of them; but there was no covenant not to underlet without the consent of the landlord. Deft. entered & paid rent, & underlet the premises without the consent of pltf., who thereupon brought ejectment, & was nonsuited:—Held: the nonsuit was right; deft. held as tenant from year to year, on such of the terms of the agreement as were applicable to that tenancy; the agreement incorporated the six covenants in the original lease, & the proviso for re-entry on the breach of any one of those covenants; but the agreement could not be read as applying the proviso for re-entry to the new clause as to not underletting; & on the authority of Shaw v. Coffin, No. 6108, post, on mere words of agreement a condition could not be created.—CRAWLEY v. PRICE (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 302; 33 L. T. 203; 23 W. R. 874.

6098. Alternative remedy available—Increased rent payable on breach.—A clause in a lease stipulated that if any of the trades, occupations or things thereafter covenanted not to be carried on or done upon the demised premises, should be carried on or done, the lessees should pay to the lessors the further net yearly rent of £25 by equal quarterly payments. The lease contained the usual covenants for payment of rent & taxes, to repair, etc.; & also a covenant that the lessee would not carry on or be suffered to carry on certain named trades, or any offensive, noisome, or noisy trade or business whatsoever. The lease also contained the following clause: "Provided always, & these presents are upon this express condition, that if the net yearly rent of £30 hereinbefore reserved, or the further rent of £25 (in case same shall become payable) or any part thereof, respectively shall be in arrear for twenty-one days, or if & whenever there shall be a breach of any of the covenants hereinbefore contained on the part of the lessee, etc., then it shall be lawful for the lessors, etc., into & upon the premises, or any part thereof in the name of the whole, to re-enter, & same to have again, repossess & enjoy as in their first & former estate, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding":—Held: the covenant for the payment of an additional rent was an alternative remedy, at the option of the lessors, & did not prevent them availing themselves of their right of re-entry upon a breach by the lessee of his covenant not to carry on an offensive trade.

6099. Act not within terms of lease—Affixing poster on premises.—Under a lease the landlord had only a right of re-entry upon the non-performance of the covenants by the tenant or on non-payment of rent. The tenant committed no breach of covenant, but during the tenancy he affixed on the premises an election poster, which was removed by the landlord, who maintained that he had a right to do so. In an action by the tenant against the landlord for damages for trespass & for an injunction:—Held: the landlord had no right to enter upon the premises except in the event of non-payment of rent or breach of covenant, & the tenant was therefore entitled to a declaration to that effect & to damages for the trespass.—YELLOLY v. MORLEY (1910), 27 T. L. R. 20, D. C.

On demurrer, judgment was given for pltf.:—Held: (1) the words of the proviso are sufficient, to make the use limited to I. for years, cease; (2) a denial by parol is not any breach of the condition, but there ought to be some act done: as after request made by the exors. shutting the door against them, or laying his hands upon them.—FRAUNCES'S CASE (1609), 8 Co. 6106. — Reversion vesting in coparceners.—(1) A lease of lands, etc., by A. to B., contained a general covenant by B. to repair, & a further covenant that A. might give notice to B. of all defects & want of repair, & if B. did not repair the defects within two months, A. might enter & do the repairs himself, the expense of which B. was to repay at the time of paying his next rent, & if he did not do so, A. might distrain on him for the expense, as in case of rent arrear. There was also a power to A. to re-enter upon breach of any covenant. The premises being out of repair, A. gave B. notice to repair within six months, & that, if B. did not repair within that time, he would perform the repairs, & charge B. with the expense. The premises were not repaired within the six months. During that time, a negotiation was entered into by A. & B.; & after the expiration of the six months, A. gave notice to B., that, if he did not agree to certain terms in three days, A. would hold him to the covenants in his lease. B. did not agree:—Held: A. could not recover in ejectment for a forfeiture, he having elected to perform the repairs & distrain on B. for the expense, & the general power to re-enter not being revived by the three days' notice.

Breach arising through act of law.—Land was demised for one thousand years by indenture in 1793 to A. & B., the latter described as visitor & guardian of the poor of the parish of C., their successors & assigns, under 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, for the purpose of erecting a poorhouse thereon, & occupying & cultivating same for the use & benefit of such poorhouse, & of the poor of C. & such other parishes as should be united therewith for the purposes of the Act. Proviso for re-entry if C. & all the other parishes which should or might at any time be so united should of themselves discontinue to adopt the provisions of the statute. Further proviso that, if, during this demise, the legislature should repeal 22 Geo. 3, c. 82, so that the poor of the several parishes should no longer be permitted to remain under the care of the visitor & guardians of such parishes, it should be lawful for the visitor & guardians, their successors & assigns, yielding up the land to the lessors, to pull down the poor houses & carry away the materials. The house was built; & C. & other parishes adopted the provisions of the Act; & C. continued to follow them till the making of the after-mentioned order; but the other parishes seceded from the union. In 1836 the Poor Law Comrs. incorporated parish C. in the Hambledon Union, & ordered all the paupers to be removed to the union workhouse; after which

Proviso for re-entry on breach of the covenant. The house was built & together with the land used agreeably to the covenant. Afterwards Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), passed; & the Poor Law Comrs. incorporated parish R. in a union, & removed all the paupers to the union workhouse. The workhouse of R. became uninhabited, & was locked up; & the land was let at a rack rent, which was applied in aid of the poor rates. Plea: that after the making of the lease the railway co. required to take the paddock under powers given them by an Act of Parliament of 1862, for purposes for which they were by the Act empowered to take same; that the paddock was land which the co. were empowered to take compulsorily for the purposes of the undertaking authorised by the Act; & that the co. under the powers so conferred did compulsorily purchase & take the paddock, & that the assignment by deft. to the co. was the assignment in completion of such compulsory purchase; that the co. afterwards built on the paddock the erections complained of, which were erections reasonably required for the purposes of the undertaking authorised by the Act. Replication: that though the erections were reasonable, it was not necessary or compulsory for the co. to build them. On demurrers to the plea & replication:—Held: deft. was entitled to judgment: for deft. was discharged from his covenant by the subsequent Act of Parliament, which compelled him to assign to the railway co., & so put it out of his power to perform the covenant, on the principle of the maxim, lex non cogit ad impossibilia; & it could make no difference whether the co. were only empowered, or were compelled to build the station on the paddock.—*BAILY v. ii. Non-Payment of Rent.

6114. Right of re-entry an auxiliary proviso.—To secure payment.].—By the Royal Proclamations dated Aug. 6, 1914, & subsequently, which were made pursuant to 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 11, certain payments, which included rent, were postponed at first until Sept. 4, 1914, & then to a later date. On Aug. 25, 1914, a writ was issued claiming arrears of rent for one year, the last quarter's rent due being that payable at Midsummer, 1914. Pltf. also claimed possession of the premises under a provision in the agreement of tenancy for re-entry if any quarter's rent were in arrear for twenty-one days. It was contended for deft. that the right of re-entry had always been considered as a security for the payment of the rent, & that as admittedly the payment of this rent was postponed, so also was the enforcement of the security:—Held: the right of re-entry on non-payment of rent had always been treated as an auxiliary proviso to secure the payment of the rent, & as, when the writ was issued no rent was payable, the right of re-entry no longer then subsisted.—DURELL v. GREAD (1914), 84 L. J. K. B. 130; 31 T. L. R. 22; sub nom. DURRELL v. GREAD, 112 L. T. 126; 59 Sol. Jo. 7.

6116. When right implied—Exclusion of implied right by express right.]—Covenants in law may be qualified by express covenants, but if a man made a lease for years upon condition to pay £20, in this case an entry by the law is implied for default of payment; but yet if it added that, if it be behind he may enter & retain till he is satisfied of the £20 now in this case this had taken away the implied covenant & condition (HUTTON, J.).—TRENCHARD v. Michaelmas, etc. Proviso, that if the rent be arrear by the space of a year after the day of payment, it being lawfully demanded, & no distress to be found there per totum tempus prædict. he might re-enter. The rent was arrear for a year; the jury found a demand, & that there was not any distress on the last day of the year upon the premises, & that the lessor entered, & let to pltf.: whether the lessor's entry was lawful was the question. Without argument the ct. resolved for deft., that the condition is not broken, if there be a distress there at any time of the year; for per totum tempus prædict. shall be taken for any part of the year; & a condition shall be taken most favourably for the lessee: but here the words are plain. Wherefore it was adjudged for deft.—GRYGG v. MOYES (1600), Cro. Eliz. 764; 78 E. R. 995.

6133. ———.—]—Under a proviso in a lease for the entry of the landlord, in case the rent should be in arrear for fourteen days, & no sufficient distress found upon the premises, he is entitled to recover in ejectment, on proof of half a year's rent due at Lady Day, & no distress on the premises on some day in May; the demise being laid on May 2, & the declaration served on June 6; deft. giving no evidence to rebut the inference, that there was no sufficient distress on the premises within the terms of the proviso; as by showing that there was a sufficient distress on the premises in May up to the day of the demise inclusive; or on June 6, when the declaration was served, if that were material with reference to 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. On such proof by pltf. 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, dispenses with proof of a demand of the rent on

There being three quarters' rent in arrear at Lady Day, 1890, the lessor, on Apr. 25, 1890, distrained, & after sale of the distress there remained due more than a quarter's rent. The lessor on May 25 issued a writ for recovery of possession of the premises:—Held: the effect of the words "if & whenever" in the proviso was to give the lessor a right of re-entry as often as at any moment of time the two conditions named in the proviso existed, & as these conditions existed when the writ was issued the action was maintainable, & pltf. was entitled to recover possession of the demised premises.—*SHEPHERD v. In an ejectment for a forfeiture by a breach of the covenant, the above were all the facts proved, & the pltf. was nonsuited:—Held: the nonsuit was right (KELLY, C.B., MARTIN, & PIGOT, Bll.), on the ground that there was no evidence that the sale was by the permission of the lessee; (WILLES, J., & CLEASBY, B.) on the ground that there was no evidence that the sale had taken place without the consent of pltf., & pltf. was bound to give some evidence of this, though a negative; (CHANNELL, B., & BRETT, J.) on both grounds.—*TOLEMAN v. 6139. —[—]—A lease of premises for fourteen years contained a covenant by the lessees not to assign or part with the possession without the written consent of the landlord; with a proviso for re-entry in case the lessees should fail in the observance or performance of any of the covenants. The landlord, by a letter addressed to W., assented to a transfer of the lease by the lessees to W. on the same terms as those on which the lessees held it, adding, "it will be necessary for you to write me accepting these terms." W. entered into possession without any formal assignment, & afterwards, by the written licence of the landlord, assigned to trustees for W.'s creditors, who, without the consent of the landlord, sold the term to deft. In ejectment on the ground of forfeiture:—Held: (1) there had been no breach of covenant by the lessees, as the landlord had given his consent to W. going into possession without a transfer of the lease. (2) Semle: the proviso for re-entry applied only to the breach of affirmative covenants.—West v. Dobb (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 460; 10 B. & S. 987; 39 L. J. Q. B. 190; 23 L. T. 76; 18 W. covenant not to assign or underlet the premises without the consent of the lessor.

In a proviso for re-entry for non-performance of covenant, it seems to me that the word "perform" is used as meaning the fulfilment of the obligation or duty undertaken, & not as referring to the thing to be done or left undone in pursuance of the covenant. . . . (d) Disclaimer of Title.i. What Amounts to Disclaimer.

Rent generally.—See Part XV.

6144. General rule—Clear repudiation of relationship—Claim inconsistent with tenancy.—(1) A tenant from year to year, who had agreed to buy his landlord's estate, having remained in possession for several years without paying either rent or interest on the purchase money, the agent of the lessor applied to him to give up possession. To which he answered "that he had bought the property, & would keep it, & had a friend who was ready to give him the money for it":—Held: this was no disclaimer; because it was not a claim to hold the estate on a ground necessarily inconsistent with the continuance of the tenancy from year to year.

In order to make a verbal or written disclaimer sufficient, it must amount to a direct repudiation of the relation of landlord & tenant; or to a distinct claim to hold possession of the estate upon a ground wholly inconsistent with the existence of that relation, which by necessary implication is a repudiation of it. An omission to acknowledge the landlord as such, by requesting further information, will not be enough (PARKE, B.).

(2) If the true construction of the agreement be, that from the date of it, or any other certain time, deft. was to be absolutely a debtor for the purchase-money, paying interest on it, & to cease to pay rent as tenant from year to year, a tenancy at will would probably be created after that time; & the acceptance of such new demise at will would then operate as a surrender of the interest from year to year by operation of law (PARKE, B.).—*DOE d. m. Lessee giving up to third party—In fraud of landlord.—B. had leased from pltf. part of the property, & being in possession, gave it up for $60 to deft., who claimed it as her own:—Held: this was clearly a fraud upon pltf. as landlord, by which the lease was forfeited, & deft. could not set up B.'s right under it.—KYLE v. STOCKS (1871), 31 U. C. R. 47.—CAN.

quently assigned his interest in the premises to the lessors of pltf., & their attorney, under an impression that the seven years had expired, demanded possession. Deft. said, "I hold on lives, & as long as they live I will hold the premises; you know I have an agreement." The attorney then demanded a quarter's rent which was due, but deft. refused to pay it, saying, "I hold under H., & I was directed by him to pay K., who was the superior landlord, & I will do so; for how do I know he will not come and make a demand on me?"—Held: no disclaimer of the title of the lessors of pltf.

A disclaimer as the word imports must be a renunciation by the party of his character of tenant, either by setting up a title in another, or by claiming title in himself (TINDAL, C.J.).—DOE d. WILLIAMS & JEFFERY v. COOPER (1840), 1 Man. & G. 135; 1 Scott, N. R. 36; 9 L. J. C. P. 229; 133 E. R. 278.

6146. Refusal to pay rent to devisee under contested will.—A refusal to pay rent to a devisee in a will which was contested is not such a disavowal of the title as to entitle such devisee to maintain an ejectment without giving a previous notice to quit.—*DOE d. 6147. — Until title of claimant established.—Deft. held premises under a tenant for life, on whose death possession was claimed, & rent demanded, by the heir-at-law of the deviser; whereupon deft. wrote to the attorney of the heir-at-law, stating, that he held as tenant to J., the husband of the tenant for life, in right of his wife; that he had never considered claimant as the landlord of the house; that he should be ready to pay the arrears to any person who should be proved to be heir-at-law; but that he must decline taking upon himself to decide upon the claim made on him, without more satisfactory proof, in a legal manner.—Held: this letter amounted to a disclaimer of the title of the heir-at-law; & he might maintain ejectment against the tenant, without giving him a previous notice to quit.

If a tenant denies the tenancy, there can be no necessity for notice to end that which he says has no existence (BEST, C.J.).—DOE d. CALVERT v. FROWD (1828), 4 Bing. 557; 1 Moo. & P. 480; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 114; 130 E. R. 883.

6149. — Request to pay to superior landlord.—DOE d. WILLIAMS & JEFFERY v. COOPER, No. 6145, ante.

6150. — Notice of contested claim.—Deft. had for several years occupied a cottage as tenant from week to week to one M. After the death of M., deft. continued to pay his rent weekly to certain persons to whom M. had devised the premises. The devise being discovered to be void by reason of Mortmain Act, the heir-at-law of M. by his agent demanded the rent, whereupon deft. said that he had received notice from the other party, & would not pay any more rent until he knew who was the right owner:—Held: this did not amount to a disclaimer or repudiation of the title of the heir-at-law, so as to entitle him to eject deft. without any notice to quit. Semble: a tenancy from week to week can only be determined by a week's notice.—JONES v. MILLS (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 788; 31 L. J. C. P. 66; 8 Jur. N. S. 387; 142 E. R. 664.

6151. — Parol denial of right to rent.—(1) B. had concurred, with other members of his family, in letting land to C. as tenant from year to year, & it was agreed that the rent should be paid to D. as agent for the family. B., to whom alone the land really belonged, demanded rent of C., who said, "You are not my landlord." B. then demanded possession, which C. refused to give up:—Held: if the jury were satisfied that the fair meaning of this was, that C. asserted that B. & himself were not in the relation of landlord & tenant, this was a disclaimer; & C. was not entitled to notice to quit.

(2) If in ejectment the lessor of pltf. rely on a disclaimer, it will be no objection to his recovering, that the disclaimer was on the day of the demise laid in the declaration.—DOE d. BENNETT v. LONG (1841), 9 C. & P. 773, N. P.

6152. — Claim for reduction of rent—Temporary increase for specific purpose.—Certain parish lands had been let to the labouring inhabitants at a forehand rent of 4s. per acre: the lands having been afterwards inclosed, the churchwardens & overseers for the time being increased the rent to 12s. per acre, for the purpose of raising a fund to pay the expenses of the inclosure. The tenants, having paid this increased rent for many years, conceiving that the inclosure expenses had been paid off, insisted that they were entitled to hold the land at the original rent of 4s. an acre, & refused to pay the 12s.:—Held: this did not amount to a disclaimer of the landlords' title, so as to enable them to eject the tenants without notice.—HUNT v. ALLGOOD (1861), 10 C. R. N. S. 253; 30 L. J. C. P. 313; 4 L. T. 215; 25 J. P. 614; 7 Jur. N. S. 1123; 9 W. R. 536; 142 E. R. 448.

6153. — Refusal to pay increased rent.—In an action of ejectment it was proved that *pltf.*s., who claimed to be landlords of certain tenements, had given notice to defts., as their tenants, that the rent of the tenements would be raised, & that defts. had thereupon written a letter stating that they "disputed *pltf.*s.' alleged right to raise the rent but were willing & offered to pay what was due in respect of the customary rent of 11s. a year, being all that they were liable to pay in respect of the property":—Held: this letter was a repudiation of the relation of landlord & tenant, & an assertion of a right to hold the tenements upon payment of a customary rent in the sense of a quit rent, & *pltf.*s. were entitled to eject, upon proving their title, without proving a valid notice to quit.—VIVIAN v. MOAT (1881), 16 Ch. D. 730; 50 L. J. Ch. 331; 44 L. T. 210; 29 W. R. 504.

6163. Request for information as to lessor's title.—Authority of agent to disclaim.—The father of deft., & after his death, deft., had held lands by the permission of & under the father of the lessor of pltf., & after the death of the father of the lessor of pltf., deft. continued to hold the lands. To show that the tenancy was determined, the lessor of pltf. offered in evidence the following letters. The first was a letter written by deft. to pltf., in which, after acknowledging the receipt of a letter from pltf. on the subject of the premises in question, he says, "As the circumstances in it are not within my knowledge, I have placed it in the hands of Messrs. F. & have requested them to communicate with you." The second letter, which was from Messrs. F. to pltf., was as follows: "Earl C. (deft.) has given us a letter from you on the subject of some ground you state to have been let by the late Mr. L. (the father of the lessor of pltf.) in 1811, & which has ever since been in the possession of his lordship's family. We will thank you to let us have the proofs that it was not the late earl's own." Another letter from Messrs. F. requested further information "as to the late Mr. L. having a right to let the piece of ground in question to Earl C. as it appears to us that the mere fact mentioned in your letter at the utmost only shows that Mr. L. might claim it, & not at all aver that Lord C. admitted it even on the representation of his own agent":—Held: (1) those letters did not amount to a disclaimer; (2) the letter of deft. did not confer on the agent any authority to bind deft. by making a disclaimer.

(3) A disclaimer, in such case, must be before the date of the demise. An admission, made after the date of the demise, of a disclaimer, must, to have the effect of determining a tenancy, amount to an admission that such disclaimer took place before the day of demise.—DOE d. 6165. Tenancy from year to year.—Payment of rent to cestui que trust.—Denial of trustees title.—Lands being held by G. as tenant from year to year to D., D., who died in 1837, devised same to trustees for the term of one hundred & forty years, upon trust (inter alia) to permit his wife E. to take the rents & profits thereof during her life. G. paid the rent to E. the widow, after D.'s death from 1837 to 1840, & on receiving a notice to quit from her in Mar. 1840, stated that he did not think she would turn him out of possession, as she had promised he should continue on as tenant from year to year:—Held: in an action of ejectment brought by the trustees for the recovery of the premises, this was sufficient evidence of a disclaimer by G. of the title of the trustees, to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for pltf.—DOE d. DAVIES v. EVANS (1841), 9 M. & W. 48; 11 L. J. Ex. 9; 152 E. R. 21.

6166. May be retrospective.—A disclaimer by a tenant of his tenancy with his landlord may have a retrospective effect, so as to entitle the landlord to recover upon a demise laid in point of date before the disclaimer was pronounced. Thus demand of rent by letter on June 18; answer by letter on the 26, that the tenancy had ceased for several years; ejectment, laying the day of the demise on May 1:—Held: the ejectment was well brought without a notice to quit.—DOE d. The proviso is, that, if the rent shall be in arrear, & there shall be no sufficient distress on the premises, or if Joseph Dakin shall become insolvent, or shall fail to perform any of the covenants, the lease shall cease & be void, & the lessors may re-enter. There would be very great inconvenience in holding, that the effect of such a proviso is to make the lease absolutely void in the cases specified. Upon the most trifling breach of covenant, if, for instance, the rent should be unpaid a few hours beyond the prescribed time, the lease would be at an end; & though the parties should deal together for years afterwards, upon the faith of its being a subsisting lease, neither of them could set it up again. . . . Both on the reason of the thing, & on authority, I am of opinion that the effect of the proviso is to make the lease voidable, & not absolutely void (PLUMER, M.R.).—DAKIN v. No. 46, subject to the terms & conditions contained in Colonial Acts of 1863 & 1866, the lessee failed to perform his covenant to cultivate one-sixth of the lands within a year from the allotment thereof. Rent, however, for the whole term of years was subsequently received by the Govt., the latest being in 1873, with full knowledge of the above breach of covenant, but after notification in the Gazettes of 1869, 1870 & 1871, that same would be received conditionally & without prejudice to the rights of the Govt. In ejectment brought by resp.:—Held: (1) whether or not a valid grant could be made to a selector failing to perform the condition under sect. 8 of the Act of 1863, the same sect. read into the above lease does not render it void, but voidable at the option of the lessor, on breach of condition by the lessee; (2) assuming a forfeiture had accrued, it was waived by the receipt of rent, notwithstanding the notifications; where money is paid & received as rent under a lease, a mere protest that it is accepted conditionally, & without prejudice to the right to insist upon a prior forfeiture, cannot countervail the fact of such receipt.

In a long series of decisions the cts. have construed clauses of forfeiture in leases declaring in terms, however clear & strong, that they shall be void on breach of conditions by the lessees, to mean that they are voidable only at the option of the lessors (Sir MONTAGUE SMITH).—DAVENPORT v. 6220. Re-letting—To underlessee in possession.—A lessor, finding the demised premises out of repair, intending to take advantage of a clause of forfeiture contained in the lease, entered into an agreement with an undertenant whom he found there to let them to him as a yearly tenant, & subsequently received rent from him:—Held: a sufficient re-entry to avoid the lease.—BAYLIS 6222. Service of notice on sub-tenants—To pay rent to lessor.—Action for personal injury from negligence in permitting the grating of a house alleged to be in the possession of defts. to be in bad repair.

Defts. in 1853, let to M., by lease for thirty years, the house & area, with a water tank in & gratings over the area. There was a clause of re-entry on non-payment of the rent. M. occupied the first floor, & sub-let the rest of the house to weekly lodgers, who had the right to take water from the tank, & to make use of the area for that purpose. In Mar. 1856, M. let the first floor to a weekly lodger & left the premises. He did not pay his rent, & in July passed through the Insolvent Ct., when he gave up his lease to the provisional assignee. In July, defts. gave notice to the weekly lodgers to pay their rents to defts. & two of the lodgers did so. On Aug. 4 plff. was injured by falling through the grating, which was out of repair. On Aug. 7, the inspector of nuisances served the first floor lodger with a notice, dated Aug. 1, to repair the grating. This notice was handed to defts., who repaired the grating. In Nov. defts. called upon the assignees in the usual way, to elect whether they would accept the lease, & the Insolvent Ct., upon the assignees electing to decline, ordered the lease to be delivered to defts., by whom it was received:—Held: there was no evidence to show that defts., before the accident, had either in law or fact avoided the lease & re-entered; they had done nothing to estop them from denying that they had done so; & therefore, they were entitled to the verdict.—BISHOP v. found; the reserved rent was afterwards paid, by the mother of H. & his sister, to the persons entitled to the reversion. On the death of the third life (E.), the reversioner let the premises to one I., & then brought ejectment & recovered possession; & against defts., tenants in possession under a subsequent letting by him, this ejectment was brought on the ground that the lease was still subsisting, with freehold in H.:—Held: (1) admitting the conviction of H. to have created insolvency within the terms of the proviso, the acceptance of the reserved rent by the reversioner, even from those who had no title, was a waiver; (2) the bringing of an ejectment against I., would have been a sufficient entry, although not done with the intent to avoid the lease for lives under the proviso for re-entry.—DOE d. 6227. —.]—A lease for years not warranted either at common law, or by 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, was made by A. tenant in tail to B. After A.'s death, C. the next entailee in remainder, demanded the arrears of rent accruing in C.'s time. After some negotiation, B. refused to pay the arrears to C. alleging that D., & not C., was entitled to the estate tail:—Held: no tenancy was created between C. & B. & C. might maintain ejectment against B. without notice to quit or demand of possession; the setting up of the title of D. amounted to a disclaimer of the title of C.; & for the purposes of the action of ejectment, the entry confessed in the consent rule, was sufficient to determine the lawful possession of B.—DOE d. 6233. —.]—The lessee of certain premises died intestate on May 24. On June 7 deft. was appointed administrator ad colligenda bona with power to sell the lease, & on that date he entered into possession of the premises. On June 24 a quarter's rent became due, but was not paid. On Aug. 23 pltf., lessor, commenced an action against deft. for recovery of possession of the premises on non-payment of rent, & for rent & mesne profits. Judgment for possession was obtained under R. S. C., Ord. 14, & on Oct. 18 deft. went out of possession. The rent of the premises under the lease was £450 a year. While deft. was in possession he used reasonable diligence to find a purchaser of the lease or a tenant, but without success, & the only sum received by him in respect of the premises was £26 5s., being rent from a sub-tenant of a part of the premises:—Held: deft., having entered into possession, was personally liable to pltf. for rent from June 7 to Aug. 23 at the rate of £450 a year, that being the yearly value of the premises, & for mesne profits at the same rate from the latter date to Oct. 18.—WHITEHEAD v. PALMER, [1908] 1 K. B. 151; 77 L. J. K. B. 60; 97 L. T. 909; 24 T. L. R. 41; 52 Sol. Jo. 45.

6235. —.]—A lease of premises contained a covenant by the lessee to repair, & a proviso for re-entry upon breach of any covenant in the lease. The lessee sub-let to deft., the underlease containing a covenant to repair similar to that in the head lease, & a similar proviso for re-entry. The premises having become out of repair, the lessor issued a writ against the lessee to recover possession. The lessee thereupon assigned the lease, subject to & with benefit of the underlease, to an assignee, who obtained an order, under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (2), that all further proceedings in the action should be stayed, & that the assignee should have relief from the forfeiture & should hold the premises according to the old lease without any new lease. The assignee then brought an action against deft. for rent due upon the underlease subsequent to the issue & service of the writ to recover possession:—Held: though the issue & service of the writ to recover possession operated as a final election by the lessor to determine the lease, the effect of the order for relief was to restore the lease as if it had never become forfeited, & therefore the underlease also remained in existence, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—DENDY v. this agreement is entered into upon the express condition that, if the tenant shall make default in payment of the rent, or any part thereof, within twenty-one days after same shall become due, being demanded, it shall be lawful for the landlord, without giving any notice to quit, & without any other warrant, authority, or proceedings, to re-enter, etc.:—Held: to entitle the landlord to avail himself of the right of re-entry, the rent must be in arrear twenty-one days, & a demand, but without the formalities of a common law demand, of payment be then made. Plffs. usually paid the rent upon the first day of the month, & plffs. & defts. believed that that was the day fixed by the agreement. Upon Apr. 7, 1885, plffs. not having paid the rent for the past quarter, defts. sent a written demand for the payment of £30, "being one quarter's rent under the advertising agreement, due on Apr. 1," & on May 30 the rent being still in arrear, they wrote to plffs. determining the agreement:—Held: the demand of Apr. 7, being inaccurate, was not a demand on which a forfeiture could be founded, & the agreement was not properly determined.—*JACKSON & Co. v. this agreement is entered into upon the express condition that, if the tenant shall make default in payment of the rent, or any part thereof, within twenty-one days after same shall become due, being demanded, it shall be lawful for the landlord, without giving any notice to quit, & without any other warrant, authority, or proceedings, to re-enter, etc.:—Held: to entitle the landlord to avail himself of the right of re-entry, the rent must be in arrear twenty-one days, & a demand, but without the formalities of a common law demand, of payment be then made. A demand within the twenty-one days is insufficient.—PHILLIPS v. BRIDGE (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 48; 43 L. J. C. P. 13; 29 L. T. 692; 38 J. P. 104; 22 W. R. 237.

Plffs. usually paid the rent upon the first day of the month, & plffs. & defts. believed that that was the day fixed by the agreement. Upon Apr. 7, 1885, plffs. not having paid the rent for the past quarter, defts. sent a written demand for the payment of £30, "being one quarter's rent under the advertising agreement, due on Apr. 1," & on May 30 the rent being still in arrear, they wrote to plffs. determining the agreement:—Held: the demand of Apr. 7, being inaccurate, was not a demand on which a forfeiture could be founded, & the agreement was not properly determined.—*JACKSON & Co. v. this agreement is entered into upon the express condition that, if the tenant shall make default in payment of the rent, or any part thereof, within twenty-one days after same shall become due, being demanded, it shall be lawful for the landlord, without giving any notice to quit, & without any other warrant, authority, or proceedings, to re-enter, etc.:—Held: to entitle the landlord to avail himself of the right of re-entry, the rent must be in arrear twenty-one days, & a demand, but without the formalities of a common law demand, of payment be then made. A demand within the twenty-one days is insufficient.—PHILLIPS v. BRIDGE (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 48; 43 L. J. C. P. 13; 29 L. T. 692; 38 J. P. 104; 22 W. R. 237.

6264. ———.]—By an agreement in writing dated Mar. 7, 1884, made between plffs. & defts., defts. agreed to lease to plffs. the advertisement spaces on the cars of defts. running at N. for three years from Jan. 7, 1884, at £120 payable quarterly from Jan. 7; & the agreement provided that the advertising boards & fittings should be found by plffs.; & it contained a condition that in the event of default by plffs. in payment of any moneys due under the agreement for thirty days after demand in writing, defts. should be at liberty to at once determine the agreement or lease & on the determination thereof the boards were to become the property of defts., who were to have the option of purchasing the other fittings. Plffs. usually paid the rent upon the first day of the month, & plffs. & defts. believed that that was the day fixed by the agreement. Upon Apr. 7, 1885, plffs. not having paid the rent for the past quarter, defts. sent a written demand for the payment of £30, "being one quarter's rent under the advertising agreement, due on Apr. 1," & on May 30 the rent being still in arrear, they wrote to plffs. determining the agreement:—Held: the demand of Apr. 7, being inaccurate, was not a demand on which a forfeiture could be founded, & the agreement was not properly determined.—*JACKSON & Co. v. In an action of trespass by B. against C. for breaking & entering, etc., & assaulting pltf., C. pleaded leave & licence. It appeared that rent being in arrear from B. to A., C., under a written order from A., had entered & forcibly expelled B. The foregoing agreement was given in evidence:—Held: the plea was sustained by the evidence.—KAVANAGH v. GUDGE (1844), 7 Man. & G. 316; 1 Dow. & L. 928; 7 Scott, N. R. 1025; 13 L. J. C. P. 99; 2 L. 6284. —[—]—By the common law the landlord never could re-enter without making a demand. Every clause of re-entry, therefore, contained the words “lawfully demanded,” in effect, though not in terms; & therefore in the lease of 1708, those words were quite nugatory. They were probably copied inadvertently into the subsequent leases without considering their effect. I am of opinion, that such a proviso for re-entry, which was originally introduced for the benefit of the landlord, ought not to be construed, in consequence of the introduction of those words, which were nugatory in the former leases, to deprive the landlord of the benefit intended to be conferred upon him by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. The case might have been otherwise, if the lease had contained an express covenant that he would not re-enter without demand, or that having entered he would not sell (ABBOTT, C.J.).—DOE d. 6305. ————————————Part of demised property in landlord's possession.—In ejectment for a forfeiture, under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 210, it appeared that pltf. sought to recover possession of two houses, numbered 13 & 14, which, in Aug. 1849, with two other houses, numbered 15 & 16, were demised by pltf. to L. for twenty-one years at an annual rent of £73 10s. payable quarterly. The lease contained the usual proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent. At Midsummer, 1858, a year's rent was due, & in July, 1858, the houses, Nos. 15 & 16, were deserted & a police constable entered & for some time kept possession of them, but afterwards, by the direction of pltf.'s agent, gave possession to T. to take care of them for pltf.; but upon a verbal understanding that if pltf. could get possession of Nos. 13 & 14, the four houses should be let to T. In Dec. 1859, a distress for £73, one year's rent, due Michaelmas, 1858, was put in on Nos. 13 & 14, which were then occupied by debts. At that time the property on the premises were only worth a few shillings, & there never was, up to the commencement of the action, a sufficient distress to satisfy the arrears of rent. No distress or search was made on Nos. 15 & 16 after T. took possession, & it was uncertain whether, at the time of the service of the declaration, there were or were not goods on those premises sufficient in value, if distrainable, to satisfy the arrears of rent:—Held: (1) there was no evidence for the jury of an eviction by pltf. in respect of the houses Nos. 15 & 16; (2) there was evidence of no sufficient distress, since pltf. was not bound to show that there were no goods of sufficient value in Nos. 15 & 16, inasmuch as the possession of T. must be considered as pltf.'s possession & under the circumstances, justifiable.—*WHEELER v. (2) Where the suit to redeem the lease was brought by the personal representatives of the lessee, evidence having been given tending to show that the lessee in his lifetime was insolvent, & had committed breaches of covenant, & that his estate was also insolvent, the ct. directed an issue to try whether other breaches of covenant had been committed or waived, but imposed it as a term upon pltf. that he should previously pay into ct. the costs at law & the arrears of rent due at the time the lessor sued out his writ of possession. Semble: the arrears of rent & amount of costs brought into ct. by pltf., in a suit to redeem a lease forfeited by non-payment of rent, must, if the bill is dismissed, be repaid to pltf.

(3) Semble: equitable agreements, charging the property comprised in a lease, but not accompanied with a change of possession or other alteration of the property, do not work a forfeiture of the lease in equity, notwithstanding there is a clause in the lease against assignment.

(4) A ct. of equity, when asked by a lessee to grant him relief, will consider the conduct of the lessee in dealing with the property whether that conduct does or not involve a breach of covenant.

(5) A lease provided that, in case of any breach of covenant, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter & expel the lessee, & the lease should, in that case, be forfeited, & be utterly null & void. The lessee committed a breach by non-payment of rent. Semble: such a lease is voidable & not void.

A ct. of equity will relieve a lessee from a forfeiture by non-payment of rent where there is a proviso that in that case the lease shall be void, as well as where there is a mere power of re-entry.—BOWSER v. COLBY (1841), 1 Hare, 109; 11 L. J. Ch. 132; 5 Jur. 1178; 66 E. R. 969.

In such a case an order may be made under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 212, giving the lessee relief in equity, & declaring that he may hold & enjoy the demised lands according to the lease made thereof without any new lease. The right of a lessee to be relieved from the forfeiture of a lease is a chose in action which vests in his trustee in bkpcy., & the trustee is entitled to sell such right & to assign it to a purchaser.

The house being out of repair, plffs. served deft. with a notice under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), of the breach of the covenant, together with a requisition to repair within three months & a schedule of the repairs required to be done. Subsequently plffs. accepted from deft. a half-year's rent which had accrued due since the date when the notice expired. In an action to recover possession of the premises in respect of the continuing breach of covenant arising out of their non-repair since the date when the rent so accepted became due:—Held: as the only object of the notice under the above Act was to inform the tenant what she was required to do, no new notice was necessary to support the action, even though so long an interval as twelve months had elapsed between the date of the expiry of the notice & the commencement of the action, & though the tenant had done a portion of the required repairs in that period, so that the physical condition of the premises which she was required to make good was not the same when the action was brought as when the notice was given. The tenant knew what she had been required to do & what she had left undone, & that was sufficient to keep the notice applicable.

The breach of a covenant to repair is a continuing breach from day to day, & therefore, though acceptance of rent is a waiver of forfeiture up to the date when the rent so accepted became due; it is not a waiver of any forfeiture for non-repair after that date (ROWLATT, J.).—*NEW RIVER CO. v. (2) An application by a lessee under sub-sect. 2 of the above sect. must be made in an action commenced by writ, & cannot be made by originating summons.

The first point is as to the jurisdiction of NORTH, J., to enter upon the question at all, & that raises this point, whether the application could be made on an originating summons. Now, what the judge was asked for was relief under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 39), s. 14 (2). Under what circumstances can he entertain that question? He can only entertain it "where a lessor is proceeding, by action or otherwise, to enforce such a right of re-entry or forfeiture." The first impression, therefore, is that it can only be brought before him whilst the lessor is proceeding to enforce the right of re-entry or forfeiture. If the re-entry has been made, then it is too late; he could not bring himself within the terms of that sect. But when the lessor is proceeding, I assume that the entry is not complete, the lessee may "in the lessor's action, if any, or in any action brought by himself, apply to the ct. for relief" (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—*LOCK v. Particulars of breach—Must be precise.—The notice to be served by a lessor on his lessee, under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (1) "specifying the particular breach of covenant complained of," to entitle the lessor to enforce by action a right of re-entry for the breach, must be given in such detail as will enable the lessee to understand what is complained of, so that he may have an opportunity of remedying the breach before action brought. A mere general notice of breach of a specified covenant is not sufficient. A notice by a lessor to his lessee that "you have broken the covenants for repairing the inside & outside of the houses" (describing them) contained in a specified lease:—Held: insufficient, & on this ground an action by the lessor to recover possession of the demised houses for breach of covenant was dismissed with costs; (2) also the lessor could not maintain the action for damages for the breach.—*FLETCHER v. of the lessee to the particular breaches complained of, so as to give him an opportunity of remedying them before an action is brought against him. The fact that such a notice sufficiently specifies other breaches of covenant which are complained of will not make the notice sufficient within the sect.

(2) A lessee having committed a breach of covenant which entitled the lessor to re-enter, the lessor sold the reversion "subject to & with the benefit of the lease" to a purchaser who had knowledge of the breach:—Held: this was a recognition in terms of the existence of the lease & therefore a waiver by the purchaser of the right to re-enter.—*DAVENPORT v. A notice was served under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, by the lessor of six small houses, stating that the repairing covenants as therein set out had been broken & that the particular breaches complained of were the committing or allowing the dilapidation mentioned in the schedule annexed to the notice. The schedule indicated, under general headings, repairs which were required to be done in all the houses, & in a few instances only specified repairs to be done in particular houses. In some instances it required the lessee to "examine & repair" specified parts of the houses. The schedule concluded with the words "& note that the completion of the items mentioned in this schedule does not excuse the execution of other repairs if found necessary:—Held: the notice sufficiently specified the particular breaches complained of, & it was not vitiated by the addition of the general clause at the end.—*FOX v. Notice referring to wrong covenant—Invalid notice.]—Pltfs. demised to defts. a piece of land, & defts. covenanted within twelve months to erect certain buildings thereon, & also at all times during the term of the lease to keep the premises "so to be erected as aforesaid in good & substantial repair, & the same in good & substantial repair" to deliver up at the expiration of the term. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the lessees' covenants. The buildings were never erected, but pltfs. accepted the quarter's rent which accrued next after the expiration of the twelve months limited for the erection of the buildings. Pltfs. afterwards served upon defts. a notice under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, referring to the building covenant only, & calling upon defts. to erect the buildings. In an action for recovery of possession:—Held: the building covenant was broken once for all at the expiration of the twelve months, & was not a continuing covenant; the repairing covenant implied an obligation to erect the buildings, & there was, therefore, a continuing breach of it; but inasmuch as the notice under the Act only referred to the building covenant as to the breach of which there was a waiver, & did not mention the breach of the repairing covenant, the notice was insufficient & the action failed.—*JACOB v. 6342. Notice relating to portion of premises—Sufficient.]—By an indenture of lease made in 1863 pltf.'s predecessors in title demised to one W. a parcel of land situated at B., of which they were the freeholders, upon a building lease for a term of ninety-eight years at the yearly rental of £17. The lease contained covenants by the lessee to repair & paint the buildings then being erected on the said land, & there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants or conditions in the lease. Five houses were built on the said land, & deft. O'M. became the assignee of the lease & bound by its covenants. S., other deft., was in possession of two of the houses under a sub-lease of Sept. 1912. This sub-lease contained repairing covenants substantially similar to those of the head lease. The houses, including the two in possession of the sub-lessee, were allowed to fall into a state of disrepair, & pltfs. prepared a schedule of dilapidations & served a notice pursuant to Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14. The notice, as well as the schedule of dilapidations, related to one only of the five houses, & was served under sect. 67 (3) of the Act, by affixment upon the house to which it related:—Held: (1) a notice relating to a portion only of the premises was sufficient; (2) where the head lessee fails to obtain relief under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, relief under Conveyancing Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 4, may be granted upon terms to an under-lessee of part of the premises, notwithstanding the fact that he himself has been guilty of a breach of his covenant with the head lessee.—*HURD v. 6343. General rule—Must be reasonable.]—A plot of land was demised for a term of years to certain persons, one of whom was a limited co. By the lease the lessees for themselves & their assigns, & each of them for himself & itself respectively & his & its respective assigns, covenanted to repair all buildings to be erected on the land, & not to assign or underlet the premises without the consent of the lessors. The lease contained a proviso that if the lessees failed or neglected to perform or observe any of the covenants, or "if the lessees shall become bkpt. or enter into liquidation for the benefit of or compound with their creditors, or being a co. shall enter into liquidation whether compulsory or voluntary," the lessors might re-enter. The lessors conveyed their interest in the premises to pltfs., & the lessees with the consent of pltfs. assigned the residue of the term to defts., one of whom was a limited co. Subsequently, in Jan. 1897, deft. co. passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, not because of insolvency, but for the purpose of reconstruction & increasing the capital. A new co. was formed, & deft. co. agreed to sell to the new co. all their interest in the leasehold premises for the residue of the term. No assignment was executed, but the new co. were let into possession. On Nov. 2, 1897, pltfs. served notice on defts. under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, stating that deft. co. had entered into liquidation, & that defts. had broken the covenant to repair, & that if defts. failed to remedy the breaches specified within a reasonable time pltfs. would re-enter. Two days afterwards pltfs. brought an action to recover possession:—Held: (1) the proviso for re-entry in the lease meant that if either the individual lessees became bkpt. or the co. lessee entered into liquidation the lessors might re-enter; the right of re-entry accrued upon the liquidation of the co. for any cause whatever, & not merely in consequence of insolvency; & the condition for re-entry in the event of the co. entering into liquidation ran with the land, & bound the assignees of the lessees; (2) the liquidation of the co. was equivalent to bkpcy. within the meaning of Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6), & the effect of Conveyancing Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 2 (2), was to take the case of forfeiture for bkpcy. or liquidation for one year from the date of the bkpcy. or liquidation out of the cases in which notice, required by sect. 14, sub-sect. 1 of the Act of 1881 before enforcing the forfeiture, was not necessary; therefore, notice was necessary, & the notice was bad.

The statute clearly contemplates that a reasonable interval shall elapse after service of notice & before action. Can two days' notice be said in all circumstances to be a reasonable notice? I think not (LORD RUSSELL, C.J.).—HORSEY ESTATE, LTD. v. STEIGER, [1899] 2 Q. B. 79; 68 L. J. Q. B. 743; 80 L. T. 857; 47 W. R. 644; 15 T. L. R. 367, C. A.

6347. — Covenant to keep land cleaned—Notice applying to whole land.]—In 1906, a local authority under their statutory powers, obtained compulsorily a lease of land & sub-let it in allotments to numerous persons. The lease contained covenants by the local authority to keep the land clean and in good heart & condition. In June, 1909, the lessor served the local authority with a notice under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (1), directed to the whole of the land, & alleging generally, breaches of the said covenants, & requiring the same to be remedied within a reasonable time, & in the following Nov. he issued a writ alleging that the breaches had not been remedied & claiming to re-enter. The local authority denied the breaches. At the trial of the action the lessor's evidence showed that all the allotments were in bad condition when the notice was given, that some of them were clean at the date of the writ, but that it would take at least a year from the date of the notice to put the whole of the land in good condition. On this the local authority objected that a reasonable time had not been allowed to remedy the breaches:—Held: (1) as the notice was in general terms & directed to the whole of the land it was not divisible, & as a sufficient time had not been allowed to remedy all the breaches, the action was premature & must be dismissed; (2) the objection that a reasonable time had not been allowed was not an allegation in the nature of a condition precedent within the meaning of R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 14, & one which ought as such to have been pleaded by the local authority in their statement of defence.—HOPLEY v. TARVIN PARISH COUNCIL (1910), 74 J. P. 209.

(b) Relief against Forfeiture.

i. Discretion of Court.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 146.

6354. Due diligence exercised by lessee in complying with notice.]—A lease contained the usual covenant to repair, & that it should be lawful for the lessor to enter upon the premises, & of all want of reparation to give notice in writing to repair within three months; & it was provided that in case the lessee did not perform the covenant, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter. On Sept. 16, the lessor gave notice to the lessee to do certain specified repairs within three months; the lessee proceeded to execute the repairs, but from the state of the weather, some small portions were not completed until some little time after the expiration of the three months. The greater part, however, were completed by Dec. 16. On Dec. 30, the lessor brought an action of ejectment. Upon a bill by the lessee, the ct. being of opinion that the lessee had used due diligence in complying with the covenant, & that the lessor had been guilty of precipitancy in bringing the action, restrained the further prosecution

6355. Relief not claimed by pleadings.]—In an action for the recovery of land for breach of a covenant to repair, relief will be granted under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), although the premises are in a very dilapidated condition, & the relief is not claimed by the pleadings.—MITCHISON v. THOMSON (1883), 1 Cab. & El. 72.

6356. Discretion unfettered.]—The discretion entrusted to the ct. under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (2), for relief against forfeiture for breach of covenant in a lease is wide in its terms, & it is not advisable to lay down rigid rules for guiding that discretion so as to fetter it by limitations which have nowhere been enacted.

In the case of a building which for many years had been used as a chapel, & was being converted into a place of public entertainment, certain extensive interior & external alterations being made, which included the removal of staircases & the construction of new ones, the opening of a new door, & the removal of iron railings, relief against forfeiture was granted by the House of Lords on the deposit by appts. of a sum sufficient to secure the restoration of the building to its former condition at the end of the lease.—*HYMAN v. S. C., Ord. 27, r. 15, on the application of the equitable mtgee., who should be at liberty to defend the action in deft.'s name, but deft. ought to have been made a party to the application, & therefore notice must be served on deft., & he must have liberty to apply to vary or discharge the order.—*JACQUES v. Deft. in an action for recovery of land was in possession of the premises as tenant under an agreement for a lease, which provided that the lease to be executed thereunder should contain (inter alia) a covenant to keep the premises in repair & a condition for re-entry for breach of such covenant. Rent had been paid under the agreement, but no lease had been executed. The premises being out of repair the landlord brought the action to recover them as upon a forfeiture. No notice had been given before action under the above sect. :—Held : there being no lease in fact executed or title shown to a decree for specific performance by execution of a lease, the sect. did not apply, & the action was maintainable.

6386. ——— Items unnecessarily incurred.]—The owner of the reversions upon four leases, each comprising a number of houses, brought four actions for the recovery of the houses respectively comprised in each lease, on the ground of forfeiture for breach of covenants to repair contained in the leases. He made defts. in the actions a very large number of persons who respectively occupied the houses as weekly tenants to one H., to whom the leases had been assigned. H. obtained leave to appear & defend the actions; & subsequently having put the houses into a state of repair, he made application in each action for relief against the forfeiture. An order for such relief was made by consent in each action on condition of his paying pltf.'s costs of the action as between solr. & client. On taxation of pltf.'s costs, the master allowed in each action (inter alia) items in respect of copies of the writ for service, & service thereof on each of the weekly tenants. On application for a review of taxation, the ct. being of opinion that, under the circumstances, the real object of the actions, namely, to compel the execution of the repairs, might have been attained by one action against H. as sole deft.:—Held: the above mentioned items having been unnecessarily incurred, they must be disallowed under R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27, sub-r. 20, but H. having consented to an order for relief in each action being made on condition of his paying pltf.'s costs of the action, the ct. could not order that pltf. should only have the costs of one action.—*GEEN v. 6388. Breach due to mistake—Negligence of solicitors.]—In a lease for years the lessees covenanted not to underlet the premises, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessor, which consent the lessor agreed should not be arbitrarily withheld in the case of a respectable or responsible person, & power to re-enter was given to the lessor in case the lessees did not well & truly observe & perform their covenants. The lessees underlet part of the premises without obtaining or asking for the lessor's consent. The underlease was prepared by their solr., who omitted to look at the head lease, & forgot that it contained the covenant not to underlet without consent. Both the lessees & their underlessees were respectable & responsible persons, & no injury was done, or likely to be done, to the lessor by reason of the underlease, nor could he have had any valid objection to it if his consent had been asked. In an action by the lessor to recover possession of the premises for breach of the covenant:—Held: the omission to ask the lessor's consent was not a mistake in respect of which the ct. would grant the lessees equitable relief against forfeiture for breach of the covenant, & therefore pltf. was entitled to succeed in the action.—BARROW v. 6389. —.]—In a lease for years the lessees covenanted not to underlet, assign, or part with the possession of the premises, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessors, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld. The lease contained a power to re-enter upon breach of any of the covenants. The lessees, without asking for the consent of the lessors, underlet a part of the premises to a tenant who already occupied under the lessors, & to whom no objection could have been reasonably taken. In an action by the lessors to recover possession of the premises for breach of covenant:—Held: the fact that the breach of covenant had been committed through forgetfulness, or because the lessees thought it unimportant, did not form a ground for giving them equitable relief against forfeiture for breach of the covenant, & pltf. were entitled to succeed in the action.—EASTERN TELEGRAPH CO. v. 6390. Assignment for benefit of creditors.]—

By a lease the lessee covenanted not to assign or underlet the demised premises without the consent of the lessor, & there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants, or if the lessee should (inter alia) execute an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The lessee executed an assignment of all his real & personal property, except that of a leasehold tenure, to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, & he declared that he would stand possessed of all his leasehold property upon trust for the trustee & to assign & dispose of the same in such manner as the trustee should direct for the purposes of the deed. The trustee entered into possession of the demised premises, but no legal assignment of them was executed. The lessor served upon the trustee a notice alleging as ground of forfeiture the execution by the lessee of the assignment. In an action against the lessee to recover possession of the premises:—Held: (1) as there had been no legal assignment of the premises, there had been no breach of the covenant against assignment; (2) the condition against assignment for the benefit of creditors was not a condition against disposing of the land leased within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6) (i), & therefore service of notice on the lessee under sect. 14 (1), was necessary before the lessor could enforce his right of re-entry; & service of the notice on the trustee under the deed was not a sufficient compliance with Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), ss. 14 (1), 67 (2).

A condition against the disposing of the land leased within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6) (i), means a condition which on its face is against the disposing of the land leased.—GENTLE v. A lease contained a covenant not to assign without licence, & a proviso for re-entry on bkpcy. of the lessee or breach of any covenant. The lessee having been adjudicated bkpt. on his own petition, the lessor purported to determine the lease under the proviso of re-entry, & obtained peaceable possession from the lessee without giving any notice under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14:—Held: (1) the lessor's re-entry was void as against the lessee's trustee in bkpcy., for the statutory notice was necessary before the lessor could obtain possession either peaceably or by action; (2) the lessee's being adjudicated bkpt. on his own petition did not operate as a breach of his covenant not to assign.—*Re RIGGS, Ex p. The lease contained a covenant that "the lessee shall not . . . during the last ten years of the term hereby granted, assign or part with his lease or the premises hereby demised or any part thereof without the licence & consent of the" lessors. First deft., who was the assignee of the lease, mortgaged his interest in the premises to second deft. by sub-demise, retaining in himself a few days. The mtge. deed excluded the right of the mtgor. to grant leases in pursuance of the provisions of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881. Subsequently, in Nov. 1921, first deft. agreed with G., to let to G. some rooms in the house for three years from Sept. 29, 1921, at a specified rent, the tenant to have the option of continuing the tenancy for successive periods of three years so long as the landlord or his assignees should remain lessees of the premises. In Aug. 1922, pltfs. brought an action against defts. for recovery of possession owing to breach of covenant, the breach alleged being the agreement to sub-let the premises to G. :—Held: (BANKES & ATKIN, L.J.J.) (1) in view of the ambiguity in the covenant in the lease, in that it did not make it clear beyond any question, that the intention of the parties was that the mere parting with possession of the premises should work a forfeiture, pltfs. had failed to show that there had been any breach of the covenant, & therefore the action failed; (SCRUTTON, L.J.) (2) the action failed on a different ground, namely, because no notice of the alleged breach of covenant had been served on defts. under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14.—RUSSELL v. It was provided (a) that in case (inter alia) the lessees should during the term be bkpts., or file a petition in liquidation, the term should cease; (b) that the lessees might by notice determine the term at the end of seven or fourteen years; (c) that on the determination or cesser of the term all the machinery, & also all the buildings erected by the lessees, other than certain specified buildings, should be their property, & should be removed by them previously to the determination or cesser of the term, unless it should be then mutually agreed that the lessors should purchase them, the lessors, in case of removal, to make good all damages which might be caused by such removal. After Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 53), came into operation, the lessees presented a bkpcy. petition, & a receiving order was made :—Held: (1) the presentation of the petition caused a forfeiture of the term; (2) notwithstanding the forfeiture, the official receiver was entitled to the articles mentioned in the schedule to the covenant & clause (c) of the proviso as being property of the lessees; (3) Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, had no application.—Re WALKER, Ex p. 6410. Power of court to vary rent.]—In granting relief under s. 4 of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), to an underlessee against the forfeiture of the head lease the Court has, under that section, the most ample discretion in fixing the terms, covenants & conditions as to rent & otherwise, of the new lease vesting in the underlessee the property, or any part thereof comprised in the headlease—a discretion which is to be exercised having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the circumstance that the forfeiture has operated to vest in the original lessor the whole of the rights in the demised premises, unfettered by any limitation except that contained in the latter part of the sect., namely, that the underlessee shall not be entitled to require a lease for a longer term than he had under his original sub-lease.

A lease of a tavern was granted to a limited brewery co. for a term of thirty years at a yearly rent of £300 with a condition for re-entry if the lessees "should enter into liquidation either compulsory or voluntary." On the same day the co. granted an underlease of the tavern to a publican for a term of twenty-nine & a quarter years at a yearly rent of £800 reducible to £300 so long as he got his beer from the co. Subsequently the co. which was perfectly solvent went into voluntary liquidation for the sole purpose of amalgamation with two other solvent brewery cos., so as to form one new brewery co., & assigned the original lease to that new co. Thereupon the original lessor, claiming that the voluntary liquidation of the original lease co. had occasioned a forfeiture of the lease, brought an action against the underlessee & the new co. to recover possession of the tavern. The underlessee then counterclaimed under s. 4 of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), for relief against the forfeiture (if any) & insisted that the rent to be payable under any new lease which might be granted to him under the sect. should be no larger than that fixed by his original underlease:—Held: the voluntary liquidation of the lessee co. had occasioned a forfeiture of the original lease, & the ct. in fixing the terms of the new lease to be granted to the underlessee under s. 4, had power to vary the rent which had been reserved by the original underlease having regard to the circumstances that the tavern by reason of the forfeiture of the original lease & the consequent destruction of the underlease had ceased to be a tied house.—EWART v. T. the ground floor & basements of R. for a term of twenty-one years at a rent of £300 for the first three years & thereafter at a rent of £350. By an underlease, dated Dec. 31, 1896, S. T. & C. T. demised unto C. a part of the ground floor of R. for the term of twenty-one years, except the three last days thereof, at a rent of £125. Forfeiture of the lease of June 22, 1896, having occurred by reason of the non-payment of rent, on Sept. 9, 1902, pltf. co. instituted an action to recover possession of the premises demised by them to S. T. & C. T. & for £226 being arrears of rent up to June 24, 1902, & for further proportionate rent from June 24, 1902, until payment. The action was brought against all persons then interested in the premises, & on Jan. 7 & Jan. 15, 1903, judgment was recovered against all defts. except C. C. by his defence & counterclaim delivered Jan. 13, 1903, denied that under the lease of the June 22, 1896, any cause of forfeiture had arisen, & claimed an order under s. 4 of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), vesting in him the premises comprised in the underlease of Dec. 31, 1896, for the whole of the term thereby created. It was admitted by C. at the trial that cause of forfeiture had, in fact, arisen under the lease of June 22, 1896. The ct. granted the order as claimed by C. but upon the terms that he should pay all arrears of rent due from S. T. & C. T. to pltf. co. down to Jan. 15, 1903, & the costs of the present proceedings, & that as from Jan. 15, 1903, he should pay a fair rent to be ascertained.—LONDON BRIDGE BUILDINGS Co. v. this power does not extend to (amongst other things) a forfeiture on the bkpcy. of the lessee; & Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 4, gives the ct. a similar power to relieve underlessees against forfeiture:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction, under s. 4 of the Act of 1892, to grant relief to an underlessee for an act of forfeiture committed by the lessee, although the forfeiture be such that the lessee himself would have been precluded from all relief under s. 14 of the Act of 1881.

Accordingly, where a lessee leased to an underlessee & afterwards became bkpt., thereby incurring a forfeiture under the original lease, it was held that, although the lessee by his bkpcy. would have been shut out from all relief, the ct. had power to give relief to the underlessee, & did so on the terms that he should personally enter into the same covenants with the lessor, & pay the same rent as the lessee, but that he should not be required to pay the increased rent which it was alleged the premises were worth.—*CHOLMELEY SCHOOL, HIGHGATE (WARDENS, ETC.) v. —One T. as lessor under a lease dated 1855, brought an action for possession, rent, & for damages for breach of a lessee's covenant to repair against pltf. in respect of a number of houses. By a sub-lease granted in 1887 pltf. sub-let two of the houses to deft. The covenant to repair ran in the same terms as that in the head lease. In both lease & sub-lease a three months' notice to repair was provided for, which, if not complied with, worked a forfeiture. There was no covenant in the sub-lease of indemnity against the covenants in the head lease nor was there any covenant to perform the covenants in the head lease. Notice to repair was given by the superior landlord to pltf., & pltf. served a similar notice to repair on deft. There was an admitted default. The notices were not complied with, & T., the head landlord, brought his action. The repairs were executed, & pltf. subsequently obtained an order to which deft. was not a party, for relief against forfeiture on payment of fifteen guineas for rent, & on payment of costs as between solr. & client, without prejudice to any claim by pltf. against deft.:—Held: these costs so paid by pltf. were not recoverable as against deft.—*CLARE v. 6424. — Negligence of underlessee.]—The ct. has jurisdiction under Conveyancing Act, 1892 (c. 13), to relieve an underlessee against a forfeiture of the original lease, though such forfeiture was occasioned by breach of a covenant not to assign or underlet without licence, & therefore could not be relieved against in favour of the lessee under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), with which the later Act is to be read together. This jurisdiction, however, will be exercised with caution & sparingly, & the underlessee asking for its exercise must show that he is blameless, & has taken all precautions which a reasonably cautious & careful person would use. Where, therefore, L. purchased an underlease under a contract which did not give him a right to call for the title of the original lessee, who was bound by covenant not to assign or underlet without licence, & he purchased with the intention of laying out a considerable sum upon the property:—Held: L. had been guilty of negligence in entering into such a contract, that he was precluded from properly investigating the title, & relief against a forfeiture by the original lessee for breach of the covenant ought not to be granted to him.—*IMRAY v. 6427. Act recognising tenancy—After knowledge of forfeiture.—If a lessor receive rent arrear by any act affirming the lessee's possession, it bars his right of re-entry for non-payment on the day it was due.

But a distress for the rent, or a receipt of the rent due at another day, is a bar, for those acts do affirm the lessee to have lawful possession (per CUR.).—GREEN'S CASE (1582), Cro. Eliz. 3; 78 E. R. 269.

6432. Necessity for positive acts—Sufficiency of acquiescence or standing by.—If a lessee exercise a trade on the demised premises, by which his lease is forfeited, the landlord does not, by merely lying by, & witnessing the act for six years, waive the forfeiture. Some positive act of waiver, as receipt of rent, is necessary. But if he permits the tenant to expend money in improvements:—Semble: that is evidence to be left to a jury of his consent to the alteration of the premises.

Forfeitures of lease stand on the same ground with forfeitures of copyholds; & there are a great many cases in the old books, where it is held, that a mere knowledge & acquiescence in an act constituting a forfeiture, does not amount to a waiver; there must be some act affirming the tenancy (HEATH, J.).—DOE d. The mines were worked for twenty-four years, when the lessee died & a suit was instituted to administer his estate & a receiver appointed. The ironstone mine was then no longer worked, & ten years after the working of the coal mines was also stopped. Rent continued to be received, & a correspondence ensued not assuming a peremptory tone until fifteen years after the mines were shut up, the lessors having had knowledge of the abandonment all along. An action of ejectment was then brought, but restrained by reason of there being a receiver; & on summons for liberty to proceed with the action:—Held: the lessors had no right to prohibit the letting to responsible persons, & by acquiescence with knowledge of the breaches of covenant they had lost their right to proceed at law to recover possession immediately, but must give the lessees a reasonable time for restitution of the works; & the application for liberty to proceed at law was ordered to stand over for three months.—WHITEHEAD v. B. the owner of the manor of M. granted to A. a licence to carry away copper as stone on the shore of the manor for twenty-one years, from June 24, 1843, at the yearly rent of £25 payable half-yearly, & subject to a proviso entitling B. his heirs & assigns in case the rent should be in arrear for twenty-one days next after any of the days appointed for payment by notice in writing delivered to A. his exors. administrators or assigns, to terminate the grant. After Christmas 1857, the rent was in arrear for more than twenty-one days. In Mar. 1858, pltf., to whom the manor had been conveyed, distrained upon H. the then licensee under defts., A.'s assignees, for the rent in arrear, for which illegal distress an action was brought, & judgment suffered by default. In the course of negotiations for a settlement, an oral agreement was made between pltf. & H. the then licensee under defts. that a new licence should be granted to his son to commence from the termination of the old one. After making this agreement, pltf. withdrew from it, & a fortnight afterwards served deft., A.'s assignee, in whom the licence was then vested, with a notice determining the grant, on the ground that the rent had been twenty-one days in arrear after Christmas 1857, as aforesaid:—Held: in entering into the oral agreement as above, pltf. had sufficiently made his election to treat the old licence as subsisting, & had thereby waived the forfeiture of it.

conduct of the landlord is such as to lead the lessee to believe that the strict legal right will not be insisted on.

The lease of a house contained a covenant to repair upon six months' notice, & a proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant. The under-lease of the house to defts. contained similar provisions. On Oct. 22, 1874, pltf., who was the reversioner, gave notice to defts. to repair within six months. Defts., on Nov. 28, wrote in reply suggesting that pltf. should acquire their interest, & stating that they proposed deferring the commencement of the repairs until they should hear from him as to the probability of an arrangement. After some correspondence, pltf., on Dec. 31, wrote that the price demanded by defts. appeared to him to be out of all reason, & inviting a modified proposal. No further proposal was made, & in Apr. 1875, the repairs were commenced by defts. & completed in June, 1875. Pltf. then brought ejectment for breach of the covenant to repair after six months' notice:—Held: the effect of the correspondence was to lead defts. to the belief that the notice to repair was suspended during the negotiations, which were continued until Dec. 31, 1874, so that pltf. was not entitled to insist on forfeiture, because of the non-completion of the repairs within six months from the giving of the notice; & the lease having provided that six months' notice should be given, a period of six months from Dec. 31, 1874, must be taken to be a reasonable time for the completion of the repairs.—*HUGHES v. HUNT v. BISHOP, No. 6209, ante.

6452. Admission of existence of tenancy—In prior action for breach of covenant—No further breach since such action.]—Pltf., who had leased premises to B. for a term of years, which was unexpired at B.'s death, afterwards, in the belief that no one would administer to B.'s estate agreed with B.'s son for him to occupy the premises as a yearly tenant, at the rent reserved by the lease to B. The son accordingly occupied & paid rent. Pltf. repaired the premises shortly before Michaelmas, 1861, & having afterwards discovered that deft., a daughter of B., was the administratrix to his estate, & as such, claimed to hold the premises for the remainder of the term under B.'s lease, pltf. sued her on the covenant in the lease to repair, & also brought ejectment for forfeiture for non-repair. In the action on the covenant deft. paid a sum of money into ct., which pltf. accepted in satisfaction. There was no want of repair to the premises after pltf. had so repaired them, & the rent due up to Michaelmas, 1861, was paid by B.'s son, & received from him by pltf. before either action :—Held : (1) in the action of ejectment, either the rent paid by B.'s son was to be taken in satisfaction of the rent under the lease, & so there had been a waiver of the forfeiture, or else there had been an eviction of deft. by pltf. which would prevent his taking advantage of a forfeiture for non-repair during such eviction ; (2) the statement in the pltf.'s declaration in the action on the covenant, that the breach for non-repair occurred during the existence of the term, was a further ground against pltf. recovering in ejectment.—PELLATT v. BOOSEY (1862), 31 L. J. C. P. 281 ; 8 Jur. N. S. 1107.

covenant.—(1) E. commenced an action against D. & B. in respect of the breach [not to affix or permit any outward mark or show of business]. No lease had at this time been executed in pursuance of the agreement. The writ was indorsed with a claim for an injunction to restrain defts. from committing a breach of the agreement; damages for the breach & to recover possession of the premises comprised in the agreement. By his statement of claim pltf. said that the lease had not been granted to D. "but pltf. has always been & is ready & willing to grant same":—Held: the claim to an injunction, being founded on the continuance of the agreement, was inconsistent with the claim to recover possession, & pltf. must be taken to have waived the latter claim by stating that he was ready & willing to grant the lease. (2) Semble: a forfeiture for non-performance of covenants does not apply to breaches of negative covenants.—EVANS v. DAVIS (1878), 10 Ch. D. 747; 48 L. J. Ch. 223; 39 L. T. 391; 27 W. R. 285.

Some only of the thirty-four houses were built; but the lessor, notwithstanding, received the rent, payable under the lease, for forty-six years afterwards:—Held: on a sale of the property by public auction, by the assignees in bkpy. of the lessee; although there had been a waiver by the lessor of the covenant to build, still the covenant to deliver up the houses, at the end or sooner determination of the term, continued in force, & was a valid objection to the title.—NOUAILLE v. 6485. Rent paid into lessor's bank—Acquiescence of lessor.]—A lease of a house contained a condition of re-entry for breach of a covenant not to assign, underlet, or part with possession without the consent in writing of the landlord. It was provided that the landlord should not withhold such consent if the proposed assignee or under-lessee were a responsible person. The tenant had been in the habit of paying his rent into the landlord's banking account, but the landlord having discovered that the house had been sublet had given instructions to his bankers not to further receive it. After the landlord had commenced an action to recover possession of the house, the tenant had paid the rent which had just accrued due to the landlord's bankers. The landlord did not know of this for some months, but had not then taken any steps to repay it to the tenant, nor had he given the tenant any notice that he would not receive it:—Held: the landlord was not entitled to recover possession of the premises, as there had been a waiver by him of the forfeiture by the receipt of the rent, & the case did not come within the exceptions in Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14 (6).—PIERSON v. e. Not waiver—After institution of suit for possession.]—The acceptance of rent by the landlord after the institution of a suit to recover possession of the land is not a waiver of a forfeiture by the tenant under a condition in the lease.—TIMMARSA PURANIK v. BADIYA (1865), 2 Bom. 70, 2nd ed. 66.—IND.

Sect. 1.—Forfeiture: Sub-sect. 5, A. (b) i., ii., iii. & iv., & (c).]

6487. Proviso that any waiver should be in writing.]—The principle of law that a lessor who accepts rent knowing that there has been a breach of covenant in the lease thereby irrevocably elects to treat the lease as subsisting, & is precluded from claiming a forfeiture, is applicable although the lease provides that no waiver by the lessor shall take effect unless it is in writing. In 1904 the Crown granted a mining lease of land in Canada, the lessee covenanting to commence mining operations in one year, & to work a mine within two years & thereafter continuously, unless excused by the Minister; the lease also provided that no waiver of any breach should take effect unless it was expressed in writing, & that if the lessee failed to perform any covenant therein contained which had not been waived the Minister might cancel the lease, & that thereupon it should become null & void, & the Crown might re-enter upon the land. The lessee did not commence mining operations, but down to July, 1909, the time was periodically extended & the rent, which was payable annually & in advance, accepted; in July, 1909, the lessee paid a year's rent, & it was accepted conditionally pending a decision upon an application by the lessee for a further extension of time. In Sept. 1909, the Minister wrote to the lessee's solrs. stating that the lease had been cancelled & that the year's rent would be returned:—Held: the Crown had elected to treat the lease as subsisting & could not cancel it.—*R. v. 6498. —.]—Defts. held certain premises of pltf. for a term of years under a lease whereby the lessees covenanted not to permit or suffer, at any time during the said term, to be used, exercised, or carried on upon the premises, or any part thereof, any art, trade, profession, or business whatsoever, without the licence or consent in writing of the lessor, first obtained for that purpose. The lease contained a power of re-entry upon breach of covenant. The lessees had, by consent, made some alterations in the premises, & part of the new building was occupied by two of defts. as plumbers, & they carried on their business there in a shop suited for the purpose. There was no written licence or consent of the lessor for this business, but two quarters' rent was paid as usual by the lessees after the business commenced, with the lessor's knowledge of this use of the premises. There was no evidence of the nature of the plumbers' tenancy, but within a year of its commencement pltf. took proceedings to recover the land on the ground of a forfeiture by a continuing breach of the covenant:—Held: it could not be presumed that a plumber's business would be commenced upon a less tenancy than a year of the shop in which it was to be carried on; & pltf.'s waiver of the breach by receipt of rent was sufficient under the circumstances to render these proceedings ineffectual.

Where a lessor with full knowledge that a breach of this particular description has been committed waives the forfeiture by a distinct acceptance of rent accruing due after the forfeiture, that amounts not merely to a waiver of the past breach, but to a licence to continue the breach in future (COCKBURN, C.J.).—*GRIFFIN v. the lessee's covenants or the waiver of any breaches up to the time of completion, whether the lessor should be cognisant of such breaches or not. The lease contained a covenant to use the premises for the business of a public-house only, & not to permit any other trade to be carried on on any part of the premises without the lessor's written consent. The particulars on which the contract of purchase was indorsed showed that parts of the premises were underlet to persons who carried on other trades there. From the answers to objections to title it appeared that the lessors had received rent with knowledge of the under-lettings, & the last receipt for rent was produced. Specific performance of the contract having been decreed & a reference as to title directed by an order which was not appealed from:—Held: whether the breach of covenant was or was not a continuing breach such as to render the purchaser liable to be ejected after the completion of the purchase & whether this would or would not have furnished a valid reason for not decreeing specific performance, the vendor had made a good title in accordance with the contract, which the purchaser was bound to accept the decree for specific performance having been made & not appealed from.—*LAWRIE v. 6500. — Covenant to insure.—(1) Lessee of buildings covenanted in the lease to "insure & continue insured" such buildings in the joint names of himself & the lessor, his exors., etc., or assigns; & there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of the covenant. The lessee insured in his own name singly, but showed the policy to the lessor, who approved of it, & accepted rent during the next three years ending at Christmas 1842. The premiums of insurance were duly paid up to that time, the premium at Christmas 1842 covering the year 1843, & the policy continuing unaltered. In Jan. 1843 the lessor assigned; & the assignee, in the same year, brought ejectment for a forfeiture incurred by not insuring in the joint names. No notice had been given to the lessee to alter the policy:—Held: the covenant to insure in the joint names was a continuing covenant, & was not waived by the conduct of the lessor, except as to past breaches; & the ejectment lay.

The intention of the parties was, in the view of the ct., that the agreement should be regarded as a lease. The conditions were, to the landlord's knowledge, not fulfilled within the appointed time, but after that date the landlord demanded rent as under the leases & the tenant paid it:—Held: the landlord could not, on receiving the rent, stipulate that it was received without prejudice to any breaches of covenant made up to that time in the agreement for leases.

6505. Whether operative as waiver—Due after breach.—Ejectment for a forfeiture, A., by an agreement in writing, lot to B. a house at the rent of £60 a year, to be paid quarterly; & B. agreed, within three calendar months, to erect a shop front, & otherwise repair, paint, paper, & white-wash the house. It was further agreed, that, if B. did not erect the shop front within three months, it should be lawful for A. or his agents to re-take possession of the premises, & the agreement should be null & void. B. continued in the possession of the premises, & enlarged the window, but, as ptff. contended, did not erect a shop front. It appeared also, that, after a quarter's rent had become due, & after the expiration of three months from the date of the agreement, A.'s son, the father being too ill to attend to business, made a demand of a quarter's rent, which B. offered to pay, if he would indemnify him for a sum which he had paid as a penalty to A.'s lessor for carrying on a trade in the premises, which was refused. At the trial, B., defn., contended that he had made a shop front which answered the purposes of his trade; & he offered to show that A. held the premises under a lease from C., which contained a clause imposing a penalty upon the lessee, if he allowed a trade to be carried on upon the premises; from which it was to be inferred that the words shop front, in the agreement, were used in a peculiar sense; but this evidence was rejected:—Held: (1) it not having been proved that A. himself had any notice of the nature of the alterations, the son had not sufficient authority to waive the forfeiture; (2) the proviso in the agreement, that it should become "null & void," made it a lease voidable only at the election of the lessor.

On Nov. 13 plffs. served notice on the trustee of their intention within fourteen days to enforce their right of re-entry or forfeiture, but the notice did not require the lessees to make compensation for the breach of covenant, & on Nov. 28 the writ was issued. At Christmas they demanded & were paid rent for the premises:—Held: (1) plffs. were entitled to enforce their right of re-entry or forfeiture on the bkpcy. of the lessees; (2) the fourteen days was sufficient notice, & the notice was valid, although it did not require the lessees to make compensation; & (3) the payment of rent accrued, partly after the bkpcy. & partly after the issue of the writ, did not operate as a waiver of the forfeiture.—CIVIL SERVICE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY v. McGRIGOR'S TRUSTEE, [1923] 2 Ch. 347; 92 L. J. Ch. 616; 129 L. T. 788.

6535. ———. With intention of creating new tenancy.—In an action of ejectment to recover possession of premises for breaches of covenants contained in certain leases, deft. pleaded that after the bringing of the action plff., with the intention of waiving the breaches of covenant, accepted rent, which had accrued due after the bringing of the action, & that thereby the breaches of covenant were waived:—Held: a good statement of defence, for the facts pleaded amounted to an agreement for a new tenancy on the terms of the old lease.—EVANS v. WYATT (1880), 43 L. T. 176; 44 J. P. 767.

6536. ———. Subsequent claim for rent.—Plff. demised a house to C., who covenanted not to permit or suffer any sale by auction to take place on the premises. C. subsequently granted a bill of sale under seal assigning his goods in the house as security for a loan, & empowering the grantees to sell them by auction on the premises in default of repayment. He next mortgaged the house by an underlease to deft., & finally, executed a deed of assignment conveying all his estate to trustees for his creditors; he nevertheless remained in possession. The grantees of the bill of sale sold the goods by auction on the premises. Plff. brought an action of ejectment, & in compliance with a judge's order, delivered particulars of the following breaches of covenant, upon which she relied as causing a forfeiture of the lease, namely, first, non-payment of rent accrued since the day of the sale; secondly, the permitting & suffering a sale by auction to take place on the premises. Pursuant to an order under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 212, & C. L. P. Act, 1860 (c. 126), s. 1, the arrears of rent were tendered to plff., & being refused were paid into ct., whereupon the proceedings on the first breach were stayed, but the action went to trial on the second. The jury found that C. permitted the sale:—Held: he had power to do so, notwithstanding the conveyance of his estate, & having done so, had committed an act of forfeiture which was not waived by plff. stating in the particulars of breaches, the non-payment of subsequent rent.—TOLEMAN v. PORTBURY (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 344; 41 L. J. Q. B. 98; 28 L. T. 292; 20 W. R. 441, Ex. Ch.

6537. ———. Subsequent distress for rent.—A lease of a farm contained a condition of re-entry for breaches of covenants. Breaches of covenants took place before June 24, 1871. The lessors brought ejectment against the tenant on July 21, 1871; but the writ did not claim possession as from any antecedent date. After the commencement of the action, but before trial, the lessors distrained for rent due up to June 24, 1871:—Held: by such distress they had not precluded themselves from relying at the trial on any breach of covenant before June 24, 1871, on the ground that by bringing ejectment they had unequivocally declared their election to determine the lease on any ground of forfeiture which had not been waived before the commencement of the action, & the subsequent distress, if not justifiable under the 8 Anne, c. 14, which enables the landlord under certain circumstances to distrain after the determination of the tenancy, was a trespass.—GRIMWOOD v. MOSS (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 360; 41 L. J. C. P. 239; 27 L. T. 268; 36 J. P. 683; 20 W. R. 972.

6539. ———. [—]—A lease for years was made rendering rent, upon condition of re-entry, if the lessee, etc. granted or assigned the same or any part thereof without assent of the lessor, etc.; the lessee granted part of the term without his assent, & [the lessor] afterwards accepted the whole rent from the lessee, but did not then know that the condition was broken:—Held: (1) the condition being collateral, the acceptance of rent should not make the re-entry void, for notice in this case is material; (2) if the lessor distrains for the rent due, it is a waiver of the forfeiture; (3) where the condition is, that on breach thereof, the lease for years shall be void, acceptance of rent due at a subsequent day will not affirm it; (4) acceptance of rent by a person to whom none is due, does not bind him; (5) in case of a lease for life conditioned to be void on breach thereof, as the estate of freehold cannot be determined without entry, acceptance of rent due at a subsequent day is a waiver of the forfeiture, though otherwise as to a lease for years with such a condition.

In the case of a condition annexed to rent, the acceptance of rent due at a subsequent day is a waiver of the forfeiture: secus as to acceptance

6541. ———. Unless lessor estopped by own conduct.]—A., in occupation of land under a building agreement determinable if the buildings were not completed by Nov. 30, 1885, was informed in 1880 of the promotion of a bill for a railway which would affect the land. A. thereupon had an interview with his landlord's agent who told him to suspend building operations till the result of the railway scheme was known: no express agreement to extend the time for building being come to. In 1883 the co. obtained their Act & on July 31, 1883, purchased from the landlord such part of the land as was required; the purchase being made expressly subject to the building agreement. On Sept. 16, 1884, the co. gave A. notice to treat. A. sent in no claim & in Jan. 1886, the co. took possession without making a deposit or giving a bond as required by Lands Clauses Act, insisting that A. had no interest in the land. A. thereupon commenced his action for an injunction & to have it declared that the building agreement was subsisting & that he was entitled to have his interest assessed on that footing:—Held: as the co. had, without complying with the provisions of Lands Clauses Act, entered upon land of which A. was lawfully in occupation he had ground for an action & the action being brought to trial the ct. had jurisdiction to make a declaration as to his interest in the property; & although the term named in the agreement had expired he had an interest in the land for that the agent's direction to suspend building raised an equity against the landlord to prevent his ejecting A. at the end of the term until he had a reasonable time after notice to complete the building & the railway co. took subject to that liability.—*BIRMINGHAM & DISTRICT LAND CO. v. SECT. 2.—SURRENDER.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHO MAY MAKE AND ACCEPT SURRENDERS.

A. Who may Make.

6542. General rule.—Person for time being entitled to term.]—Where a lease for twenty-one years contains the usual proviso for its determination by the lessee or his assigns by six months' notice at the expiration of the first seven or fourteen years of the term, such notice, in order to be valid, must be given by or on behalf of the person in whom the term is vested; & therefore the first assignee of the lease, who has purchased an equitable charge created by a second assignee by the deposit of the lease with the assignments as security for a loan, is not entitled to give such notice, as he is not the person in whom the term is vested.

The first question that arises is as to who it is who must give notice, when there has been one or more assignments of the term. I think it is clear that it must be given by, or at all events on behalf of, the assignee in whom at the time of giving the notice the term is vested. The expression "the said R., his exors., administrators, or assigns," means that one of the persons mentioned who for the time being is entitled to the term. The giving of the notice is equivalent to a surrender of the last seven years of the term, & can, as it seems to me, only be given by some one entitled to surrender (CHANNELL, J.).—SEWARD v. DREW (1898), 67 L. J. Q. B. 322; 78 L. T. 19; 14 T. L. R. 200.

Annotation.—Consd. Stait v. Fenner, [1912] 2 Ch. 501.

6543. Underlessee.—If lessee joins.]—If tenant for thirty years makes a lease for ten years, & both of them surrender to him in the reversion in fee, the surrender is good for both the estates, & yet the lessee for ten years could not surrender by himself for want of privity, but when the other joined with him, his surrender shall be taken in law to precede, & the surrender of the lessee for ten years to follow, so that the same shall be good.—PARAMOUR v. YARDLEY (1579), 2 Plowd. 539; 75 E. R. 794.

6545. ———. Wife.]—A. & B. demised a house, by lease in writing, to C., at a rent payable quarterly. The key was delivered to C.'s wife. C. entered into possession; but before the first quarter's rent became due, there having been some dispute as to arrears of rent & taxes, C.'s wife delivered the key back to A., who accepted it. B., after signing the lease, had never interfered:—Held: (1) the delivering back of the key by the tenant, animo sursum reddendi, & the acceptance thereof by the landlords, amounted to a surrender of the term by act & operation of law, within Stat. Frauds; & (2) the jury were, upon the facts, warranted in finding that C.'s wife acted as his agent in surrendering the term, & A. acted as agent for B. in accepting such surrender, & B. was bound by such surrender & acceptance.

(3) By the old law before Stat. Frauds, if the lessee took a new lease from the lessor, it would operate as a surrender of the former term, although the second lease were for a shorter period than the first or were by parol (TINDAL, C.J.).—DODD v. ACKLOM (1843), 6 Man. & G. 672; 7 Scott,

B., his brother, agreed with the landlord to give him possession, & suffer the lease to be cancelled, on his abandoning the rent, which was twenty-eight days in arrear. B. afterwards took out letters of administration:—Held: the agreement of B., as exor. de son tort, did not conclude him as rightful administrator, nor give a right of possession to the landlord who had entered under the agreement, but who had not made any formal claim in respect of the forfeiture, nor taken a regular surrender of the lease.—*DOE d. In 1864 he granted an underlease of the same premises to C. for twenty-one years from Michaelmas, 1863, at the same rent. B. never attorned to C.:—Held: inasmuch as there was no attornment, the demise to C. did not pass the reversion to him, but only an interesse termini; & in order to establish C.'s underlease, a surrender by B. to A., & not to C., was the effectual & proper course.—EDWARDS v. WICKWAR (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 403; 35 L. J. Ch. 309; 12 Jur. N. S. 158; 14 W. R. 363.

6559. Assignee of reversion—Rent assigned separately—Agreement to defeat assignee of rent.]—Lands were subject to a lease of a way-leave at a certain rent for sixty-three years, which the lessee had the power of determining. The land & rent were sold separately by auction in two lots, & were purchased by two different persons. After some time, the purchaser of the land entered into an arrangement with the lessee, to put an end to the lease, & entered into a different one, in order to defeat the right of the purchaser of the rent:—Held: this was contrary to equity, & the right of the purchaser of the rent was made good out of the new contract.—*WOOD v. parts of it as should not be sold after Aug. 1, & before Sept. 1, following, should be divided into two equal lots between A. & B.; & that £100 should be paid by B. to C., the principal tenant, as a remuneration for his giving up possession of his farm at the Michaelmas following; & C. agreed to give up possession of his farm accordingly. No part of the estate was sold by Sept. 1, but some portions were sold subsequently, & the remainder was divided between A. & B., but such division was not completed till the following Mar. C. continued in possession, by the desire of A. & B., until that time, & then quitted:—Held: the agreement was not a surrender of A.'s term.

No particular words are necessary to make a surrender if it sufficiently appear to be the intention of both parties that the term should immediately cease; but this is an agreement for it to cease in futuro (PARKE, B.).—WEDDALL v. q. By acts of devisee—What acts constitute surrender.—GREENE v. GREENE (1881), 6 Nfld. L. R. 287.—NFLD.

6578. ——The mere cancelling in fact of a lease is not a surrender of the term thereby granted within Stat. Frauds, which requires such surrender to be by deed or note in writing, or by act or operation of law. Nor, where such a lease appears to have been once in the possession of the lessee, who entered into possession of the property, will the fact of the lease being produced by the lessor in a cancelled state, unaccompanied by any other evidence, be sufficient to warrant a presumption that there has been a valid surrender.—DOE d. During the continuance of the tenancy deft. received an order from the Admiralty to join a ship for foreign service, but shortly afterwards that order was cancelled. Subsequently to the cancellation deft., purporting to act under the terms of the agreement & in the belief that he was thereby entitled to do so, gave pltf. a quarter's notice of his intention to give up possession. Pltf., in the belief that deft. was at that time under orders from the Admiralty to leave, resumed possession of the house on the expiry of the notice & advertised it for sale. Subsequently pltf. discovered the true facts, & brought the action to recover the rent which had accrued in the interval:—Held: (1) deft. was under the circumstances not entitled to give the notice to terminate the tenancy, & as the non-disclosure of the cancellation of the Admiralty's order was not fraudulent, the fact that pltf. accepted the notice under a mistake induced by the act of deft. did not prevent that acceptance from working a surrender by operation of law; but (2) the giving of the notice was a breach of an implied contract in respect of which pltf. was entitled to recover the amount of the rent due as damages.—GRAY v. OWEN, [1910] 1 K. B. 622; 79 L. J. K. B. 389; 102 L. T. 187; 26 T. L. R. 297, D. C.

Agreement to end term—Conditional agreement—Non-performance of condition.]—One being in possession of premises as tenant from year to year under an agreement for a lease of fourteen years, & the rent being in arrear, entered into an indenture with his landlords, whereby reciting such tenancy & arrears of rent accrued, & that he had agreed to quit & to deliver up the premises to them, & that a valuation should be made of his effects on the premises by two indifferent persons, to be chosen, etc., & that the same should in the meantime be assigned & delivered up to a trustee for the landlords; the deed assigned his effects on the premises to such trustee, on trust to have the valuation made, & out of the amount to retain the arrears of rent, & pay the residue to the tenant:—Held: the tenant not having in fact quitted the possession, nor any valuation having been made of his effects, such agreement to quit, etc., being conditional, & the condition not performed, nor the agreement in any manner acted upon, did not operate as a surrender of the tenant's legal term from year to year, & consequently, the right of the landlords to distrain for the arrears of rent continued after six months from the making of the indenture.—COUPLAND v. MAYNARD (1810), 12 East, 134; 104 E. R. 53.

6593. ——— Performance by tenant only.]—To an action upon an indenture of lease for non-payment of rent, & for non-repair of the premises, deft. proposed to plead, inter alia, as a defence on equitable grounds under Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125), s. 83, a plea to the effect that it was agreed between pltf. & deft., that the latter should surrender the tenancy to pltf., by yielding up possession of such portion of the premises as was in the occupation of deft., & by permitting pltf. to receive all future rents of such part of the premises as was occupied by deft.'s tenants, & by permitting the tenants to attorn to pltf., deft. to pay a certain sum of money, & give up certain machinery all of which was to be done by deft., & accepted by pltf., in satisfaction of the covenants of the lease; & that the lease & counterpart should be respectively given up to be cancelled. the premises which he occupied, & had never since been in the enjoyment or occupation thereof, or in the receipt of the rents; & that he had always permitted pltf. to receive the same, & the tenant to attorn. The plea then contained an averment of performance by deft. of all other conditions precedent & that deft. was ready & willing to do all things necessary to be done by him, for putting an end to the tenancy; & that the action was brought in fraud, & breach of the said agreement, & that it was wholly the fault & laches of pltf. that the surrender was not completed. Upon an application to plead several matters, the ct. refused to allow this plea to be pleaded with other pleas, as not disclosing an equitable defence within Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125); on the ground that a ct. of equity would require the execution by deft. of a valid surrender of the term as a condition precedent to staying the action, & the superior cts. of common law have no power to enforce such condition.—*MINES ROYAL SOCIETIES v. 6595. ——To effect a surrender of a lease by operation of law there must be an agreement by landlord & tenant that the term shall be put an end to, acted upon by the tenant's quitting the premises & the landlord, by some unequivocal act, taking possession.

A landlord's accepting the keys of demised premises "without prejudice" & endeavouring to let them is not such an unequivocal act as to constitute a surrender by operation of law.—RE PANTHER LEAD CO., [1896] 1 Ch. 978; 65 L. What amounts to delivery of possession.—See Sub-sect. 3, D., post.

6596. Acts amounting to estoppel—Independent of intention of parties.—A surrender by deed is unnecessary, where the former lessee is the party who takes the new lease, as the fact of his so doing is evidence that the new lease has been accepted by him, & such acceptance operates as a surrender in law; but it is not enough that the lessee agrees to an act done by the reversioner. Semble: a demise of premises by the reversioner to a stranger, with the consent of the lessee in possession, will not amount to a surrender by operation of law.

The term "surrender by operation of law" is properly applied to cases where the owner of a particular estate has been a party to some act, the validity of which he is by law afterwards estopped from disputing, & which would not be valid if his particular estate continued to exist. Thus when lessee for years accepts a new lease from his lessor, he is estopped from saying that his lessor had not the power to make the new lease, & as the lessor could not grant the new lease until the prior one had been surrendered, the acceptance of such new lease is of itself a surrender of the former one. Such surrender is the act of the law, & takes place independently of, & even in spite of, the intention of the parties.—LYON v. REED (1844), 13 M. & W. 285; 13 L. J. Ex. 377; 3 L. T. O. If a copyholder of inheritance takes a lease by indenture for years, by this his copyhold is gone, & this is a surrender of the inheritance; but if he take a lease to himself for life, there peradventure it shall be another case; but without all question, where he takes it to himself, to his wife, & to his son, for their lives, the inheritance is not here surrendered & gone, but this still remains in him, & this shall be in judgment of law but as a surrender to his use for his life, after to his wife for her life, & after to the use of his son for life, & it is a clear case, that this shall be so & by this way, & by this construction, all may well stand together (DODDERIDGE, J.).—BELFIELD v. 6614. —.]—DODD v. ACKLOM, No. 6545, ante.

6615. Conditions of new tenancy not performed—Valuation—Sureties.—A subsisting tenancy is not determined by an agreement, whereby the landlord lets to his tenant at a valuation, to be made by two persons, & stipulating that the tenant is to give sureties to answer for the rent, if no valuation be made, & no sureties given.—JOHN v. JENKINS (1832), 1 Cr. & M. 227; 3 Tyr. 170; 2 L. J. Ex. 83; 149 E. R. 384.

6616. One of lessees not party to new lease—Change of landlord.—Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), s. 7, does not authorise an equitable tenant for life, not being a lessor, to take a surrender which is not sanctioned by the ct.

Certain customary freeholds were demised by a lease of June 15, 1877 to two lessees, for twenty-one years from Christmas, 1876, at a rental of £130. The lease was determinable at the expiration of the fourteenth year, on the lessor or lessees giving to the other of them, "or his or their representatives or assigns," a written notice of such intention. The lessor died in Dec. 1877, having devised & bequeathed his customary freeholds & leaseholds to trustees in trust for his wife, M., during her widowhood, & then to other beneficiaries. On Dec. 21, 1889 one of the two lessees gave notice to M. of his intention to quit & yield up possession of the leasehold premises at Christmas, 1890. On Aug. 13, 1890, M. purporting to act under Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), granted a lease of the same premises to one of the two original lessees for seven years from Christmas, 1890, at the reduced rent of £100. The licence of the lord of the manor for this lease was not obtained. In an action by the trustees & beneficiaries of the original lessor against the two lessees:—Held: the old lease was not surrendered by operation of law, inasmuch as it was voidable if not void.

Defts. say a surrender of the old lease has been effected by operation of law by the grant of the new lease. I think this contention is untenable. The trustees who were the landlords under the old lease, were not parties to the new lease, nor was one of the lessees under the old lease a party to the new lease. . . . Now, no doubt, if a lessor & a lessee agree, even verbally, to determine a lease, & that is acted upon & followed up by the lessor taking possession of the demised premises, or doing that which amounts to his taking possession, then the lease is determined (ROMER, J.).—EASTON v. PENNY (1892), 67 L. T. 290; 41 W. R. 72; 8 T. L. R. 779.

(b) What Amounts to New Tenancy.

i. Agreement for New Lease.

6617. Agreement between lessor & stranger—Lessee no party.—An agreement between the lessor & a stranger that the lessee shall have a new lease is no surrender.—PORRY v. ALLEN (1590), Cro. Eliz. 173; 78 E. R. 430.

Annotation.—Refd. Brewer v. Hill (1794), 2 Anst. 413.

6618. Lease to old lessee & another jointly.—Tenant from year to year entered into an agreement, during a current year, for a lease to be granted to him & B.; & from that time B. entered, & occupied jointly with him:—Held: by this agreement & the joint occupation under it, the former tenancy was determined, although the lease contracted for was never granted.

If a sole tenant agrees to occupy, & does occupy jointly with another, that puts an end to the former sole tenancy (BAYLEY, J.).—HAMERTON v. STEAD (1824), 3 B. & C. 478; 5 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 206; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 33; 107 E. R. 811.

6619. Parol agreement.—In an action of debt for rent on a demise for seven years deft. pleaded that whilst the demise was in force, & before the accrual of the rent, it was agreed between him & pltf. that pltf. should make certain alterations, & that in consideration thereof he, deft., should relinquish his interest under the demise, & take a new lease for seven years; & until such new lease should be tendered, that he should remain tenant from year to year; that pltf. did make the alterations, & that he, deft., in pursuance of the agreement, relinquished his interest under the lease, & entered upon the premises under the agreement; & that, by means of the said premises, he deft. was tenant from year to year, & that his title under the lease was surrendered. Issue was taken on this plea, & at the trial no written agreement was proved, but the jury found a verdict for deft.:—Held: the agreement was an entire agreement, & the part relative to a lease for seven years being required to be in writing under Stat. Frauds, no part of it could be proved by parol.

In order to constitute a surrender by act & operation of law, there must be a legal agreement. . . . I cannot help observing how dangerous it would be to allow any departure from the law, which has gone on step by step, until the doctrine reversion, this amounts to a surrender in law.—LEWIS v. BROOKS (1851), 8 U. C. R. 576.—CAN.

b. Subsequent lease not incompatible with prior lease.—The rule that the acceptance of a second lease by the lessee operates as an implied surrender of the prior lease does not apply to cases where the subsequent

has become rather startling. The consequence would be, that, whenever a landlord chose to say that he would take less than the full amount of rent, it would be a question for the jury, whether the parties did not intend to create a new tenancy, which would be a surrender of the previous term by act & operation of law (MARTIN, B.).—FOQUET v. MOOR (1852), 7 Exch. 870; 19 L. T. O. S. 205; 155 E. R. 1202; sub nom. FORQUET v. MOORE, 22 L. J. Ex. 35.

6620. Agreement acted on by lessor—Increased rent.—A fire having occurred upon leasehold premises, the lessor entered. Subsequently an executory agreement was entered into between the parties for a new lease at an increased rent, as was evidenced by letters which passed between them, in one of which a suggestion was made that a memorandum should be indorsed upon the old lease, referring to the increase of rent. This was not carried out, but payments of the increased rent were demanded, & made, but under protest by the lessee's solr. Upon the bkpcy. of the lessee, the lessor distrained for rent at the increased rate. The county ct. judge held that the old lease was still subsisting, & that consequently the old rental alone could be distrained for:—Held: the old lease was surrendered by operation of law, & the agreement for an increased rent having been made & acted upon, the distress for such increased rent was lawful.—Re YOUNG, Ex p. VITALE (1882), 47 L. T. 480.

6621. Agreement not specifically enforceable.—A tenant of premises under a lease being desirous of surrendering it & obtaining a new lease, it was on Apr. 5, 1910, agreed between the tenant & the lessor that the lessor should upon the performance of certain conditions by the tenant grant to him such lease for the proposed term, which was to commence as from Lady Day, 1910. The agreed conditions were not in fact performed until after Apr. 28, 1910, the date of the coming into force of the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8). In June, 1910, the lessor granted to the tenant the new lease in pursuance of the agreement. The Crown thereupon claimed from the lessor reversion duty on the benefit accruing to him by the determination of the old lease after the coming into force of the Act:—Held: as the tenant had not performed the conditions before Apr. 29, 1910, he was not entitled at that date to specific performance of the agreement to grant the lease, & could not then be treated as being in the same position as if the lease had been granted; the agreement for the lease, not being under the circumstances equivalent to a lease, did not operate as a surrender by operation of law of the old lease; the old lease was not determined until the grant of the new one; & the lessor was consequently liable to reversion duty.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. DERBY (EARL), [1914] 3 K. B. 1186; 84 L. J. K. B. 248; 109 L. T. 827.

ii. Change in Terms of Tenancy.

6622. Restriction of lessor's power to determine—Memorandum indorsed on lease.—GOODRIGHT d. NICHOLLS v. MARK, No. 6821, post.

6623. Alteration of rent—Increase in respect of improvements.—A landlord who had demised premises for a term of years at £50 a year, agreed with his tenant to lay out £50 in making certain improvements upon them, the tenant undertaking to pay him an increased rent of £5 a year during the remainder of the term, of which several years were unexpired, to commence from the quarter preceding the completion of the work:—Held: the landlord, having done the work, might recover arrears of the £5 a year against the tenant, though the agreement had not been signed by either party; for it was not a contract for any interest in or concerning lands within Stat. Frauds; nor was it, according to that statute, an agreement "not to be performed within one year from the making thereof," no time being fixed for the performance on the part of the landlord.

The only way in which it could be taken to be rent would be that this contract creates a new demise at an increased rent, & that therefore, by operation of law, the old lease is surrendered by such new demise (LITLEDAL, J.).—DONELLAN v. READ (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 899; 1 L. J. K. B. 269; 110 E. R. 330.

6624. — Reduction—Verbal agreement.—By a written agreement, plffs. let to deft. certain premises at a rent of 20s. a week, payable as demanded; four weeks' notice to quit from any day to be sufficient. During the continuance of this tenancy, plffs. verbally agreed with deft. to accept 16s. a week, which was accordingly paid, & on two occasions, deft. submitted to a distress for that amount:—Held: no new demise was thereby created, & consequently the county ct. had no jurisdiction under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 122, the rent being above £50.—CROWLEY v. VITTY (1852), 7 Exch. 319; Cox, M. & H. 582; 21 L. J. Ex. 135; 18 L. T. O. S. 276; 16 J. P. 360; 155 E. R. 968.

At the end of the year, H. & L. met, & believing that the former tenancy was at an end, came to an agreement that the rent should be reduced by £30:—Held: there was a release of the existing term, & a new demise at the reduced rent.—HODGES v. to grant leases. After testator's death, & during the above term, the son granted the lessee a fresh lease of the land, & the new indenture of lease set forth that it was granted in consideration of the surrendering up into the hands of the lessor by the lessee at or before the delivery thereof of the lease first granted which surrender is hereby made & accepted accordingly. The new lease was a bad execution of the power. One of the lives mentioned in the first lease was still existing:—Held: the surrender was inoperative, & the first lease remained in force; & this, whether the second lease at the time of the demise was void or only voidable at the will of the tenant for life, & whether the surrender was implied or express; the ground of decision being that the new lease did not pass an interest according to the contract, & therefore the acceptance of it, though with express words as above stated did not affect an absolute surrender.

In case of an express surrender, so expressed as to show the intention of the parties to make the surrender only in consideration of the grant, the sound construction of such instrument, in order to effectuate the intention of the parties, would make that surrender also conditional to be void in case the grant should be made void (COLERIDGE, J.).—*DOE d. In 1788, the lessee being desirous to sell his term in part of the premises, it was arranged that the lessor should grant to the intended vendee a lease of this parcel, & grant the original lessee a fresh lease of the unsold residue. Indentures of lease were executed accordingly. The fresh lease to the original lessee purported to be made in consideration of the surrender of the prior lease & granted a term of ninety-nine years on the same three lives to commence from the date of the fresh lease. This lease was not a due execution of the power; but the premises were held under it till 1845 when ejectment was brought by parties in remainder, the lives not having terminated:—Held: the acceptance of the fresh lease, which had been avoided contrary to the intention of the parties thereto, & had thus failed to pass the interest contracted for, was not in itself a surrender of the prior lease, but worked no more than a surrender conditioned to be void if the new grant should fail.—*DOE d. The surrender of an old lease, implied from the acceptance of a new lease, is subject to an implied condition that the new lease is valid.—KNIGHT v. WILLIAMS, [1901] 1 Ch. 256; 70 L. J. Ch. 92; 83 L. T. 730; 49 W. R. 427; 45 Sol. Jo. 104.

pltf. agreed to grant her a lease for her life free of rent. Deft. duly handed over the old lease, & received in exchange a lease for her life, which was in fact invalid by reason of not complying with Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 108. In 1908 an action was brought by pltf. to recover possession of the property. Deft. set up that as she had surrendered the old lease in 1892, & the lease granted to her was invalid, Stat. Limitations began to run from that date, & that, as she had been in possession for more than twelve years since 1892, defts. were not entitled to recover possession of the premises:—Held: the lease of 1892, being an invalid one, there was no effectual surrender of the lease of 1599 which was given in exchange for it, & Stat. Two persons, partners, occupied premises under an agreement for a lease to be granted to them jointly, but after sometime dissolved partnership, when one of them quitted the premises, & the landlord subsequently received rent from, & several times distrained upon, the partner who continued to occupy, making no application to the partner who had quitted for five years, nor proceeding against him for twelve years:—Held: there was good evidence for a jury to conclude that the relationship of landlord & tenant with respect to

6682. ———.]—Upon a tenancy from year to year determinable at a quarter's notice the lessor licences the tenant to quit in the middle of a quarter, & the tenant quits & the lessor accepts possession. This is a surrender by operation of law, destroying the right to rent for the whole or any part of the current quarter.—GRIMMAN v. LEGG (1828), 8 B. & C. 324; 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 438; 6 L. J. O. 6683. Agreement for possession—Principal part of premises.]—An agreement between landlord & tenant, for the latter to give up the principal part of a farm to the former, who was to purchase the stock thereon at a valuation, & the tenant was to hold over half the house without paying rent, & deliver up at a subsequent day, requires a surrender stamp under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 181), sched. Part I., as such agreement operates as a surrender of the term.—WILLIAMS v. SAWYER (1821), 3 Brod. & Bing. 70; 6 Moore, C. P. 226; 129 E. R. 1208.

6684. — On discharge from further rent.]—Debt for £63, rent for two years & one quarter, due Mar. 25, 1837, reserved on a demise for forty-five years, at £28 per annum. Plea, that before any of the sum claimed became due, & more than two years & a quarter before Mar. 25, 1837, & before Dec. 25, 1834, viz. Apr. 17, 1834, pltf. & deft. agreed that deft. should give up, & pltf. take, possession of the premises before Dec. 25, 1834, in consideration whereof deft. should be discharged from the rent which would have become due for the occupation after Dec. 25, 1834; that possession was given up by deft. & accepted by pltf. accordingly; & that pltf. entered on Apr. 17, 1834, & had held ever since, & deft. had not held since; “& the said tenancy & deft.’s said interest were thereby then surrendered & extinguished”:—Held: on this plea, the objection did not arise whether the term was shown upon the record to be regularly surrendered according to Stat. Frauds, s. 3; the defence being merely an executed contract that, in consideration of deft.’s giving up possession, pltf. should abandon his claim to the rent: & such defence was valid.—GORE v. WRIGHT (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 118; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 243; 1 Will. Woll. & II. 260; 7 L. J. Q. B. 147; 2 Jur. 840; 112 E. R. 780.

6685. ———.]—A. & B. were tenants of certain chambers to one C. at a certain rent, payable quarterly; & in consideration that A. & B. would underlet the chambers to D. at a certain rent, payable quarterly, D. promised A. & B. that he would pay the said rent to C., & that, if he should not do so, he would indemnify A. & B. in respect thereof, & pay the same to them: & the breach assigned was, non-payment by D. of the rent due from A. & B. to C. Plea stated, that, before the rent became due from A. & B. to C., it had been agreed between A., for & on behalf of himself & B., & with his authority, & D., that D. should deliver up the possession of the chambers to A., & that, in consideration thereof, D. should be discharged from further liability for rent; & that D. did accordingly deliver up possession to A., which he on behalf of himself & B. accepted:—Held: this plea set up a good defence by way of executed contract.—SMITH v. 6686. — Return of goods distrained.]—Deft. having distrained the goods of pltf., for arrears of rent, the latter signed the following undertaking: “In consideration of Mr. C. giving me the household furniture distrained for rent due to him, but the furniture only, I undertake to give him possession of the premises held by my late husband, on or before one week from this date.” At the expiration of the week, pltf. having in the meantime acted upon agreement by removing part of the furniture, & selling other part, deft. & others entered & took possession. In an action of trespass for such entry:—Held: the above memorandum sustained a plea of leave & licence.—FELTHAM v. CARTWRIGHT (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 569; 7 Scott, 695; 9 L. J. C. P. 67; 3 Jur. 606; 132 E. R. 1219.

6687. Directions to under-tenant to attorn—To superior landlord.]—(1) An information having been filed in Chancery to set aside an improvident lease of parish lands, & judgment being in favour of prosecutor, the parish officers claimed possession from G. holding as one of the assignees of the original lease. G. wrote to his undertenant to attorn, which was done, & rent was paid for several years to the parish:—Held: what G. did amounted to a surrender.

(2) The same parish officers having demanded possession from F., who held another part of the premises as assignee in trust for other persons, F. declined to take a lease from the parish or to attorn, or to direct his undertenant to attorn, & refused to do anything:—Held: there was nothing done by F. which amounted to surrender.—GRAY v. 6690. ———.]—The lessee of certain premises erected a greenhouse thereon, which, though a fixture by agreement with the lessor, deft., he was entitled to remove. He subsequently assigned the greenhouse by a bill of sale, & the assignee immediately entered under the powers of the bill of sale. The greenhouse was put up to auction a month after the entry, but not sold. Ten days after the auction the keys of the premises were given up to deft. by the auctioneer, who had been in possession for the assignee, & deft. took possession; on the same day the assignee had notice of the surrender. The lessee made no attempt or claim to recover the premises after the entry under the bill of s.e. Between three & four weeks after possession had been given up to deft. the assignee sold the greenhouse to pltf., who claimed to be entitled to enter & remove it:—Held: the facts showed a surrender by operation of law, & the greenhouse, not having been removed by the assignee within a reasonable time after notice of the surrender, had become the property of deft., & could not be removed.—MOSS v. JAMES (1878), 38 L. T. 595, C. A.

6691. ———.]—Debt for use & occupation for half a year ending in May, 1840. Plea, never indebted. At the trial it appeared that deft. was tenant to pltf. from year to year, & that, in Apr. 1839, it was agreed that the tenancy should be determined at the following Martinmas; & that, at that time, deft. accordingly delivered up the keys of the premises & paid the rent then due:—Held: evidence of this agreement was admissible under the plea never indebted.—WASHINGTON v. MARTIN (1841), 10 L. J. Q. B. 253; 6 Jur. 127.

6692. ———.]—DODD v. ACKLOM, No. 6545, ante.

6693. Agreement to give up key—Key not delivered—No surrender.]—By agreement in writing, dated May 20, 1824, deft. "agreed to let pltf. two upper rooms, & part of a lower room as a workshop & smithy, & to find power for three lathes, etc.; deft. agreed to pay rent for the above, £61 per year, to be paid quarterly in cash; & that three months' notice was to be required on each party." Pltf. took possession of the rooms the same day, & deft. found the power. On Aug. 20, deft. served pltf. with a written notice of that date, to quit the rooms on Nov. 20, following. Pltf. did not then object to the notice, but held over after Nov. 20, from which day deft. ceased to find the power. On Jan. 19, 1825, pltf. & deft. settled their accounts up to Nov. 20, preceding, when pltf. agreed to give up the key of the rooms; but afterwards refused to do so, saying "that the notice was bad"; to which deft. replied, "then there would soon be another quarter's rent due." In an action by pltf. for damages for the discontinuance of the power by deft.:—Held: the agreement was a demise of a tenement, creating a tenancy which could not be determined but by a notice ending with the current year, except by custom; & pltf.'s agreeing to give up the key when he did, was no acquiescence in the notice served upon him, & no surrender of his tenancy within Stat. Frauds; though such an acquiescence, if established, would have been a bar to the action.—BROWN v. BURTINSHAW (1826), 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 603.

6694. Delivery on last day of tenancy—Not necessarily surrender.]—A house was demised, habendum for twenty-one years from Mar. 25, 1809, paying rent on certain days, of which Mar. 25 was one. The estate of which it formed part had been devised by the landlord to trustees to receive the rents & apply them to certain purposes. After the landlord's death, & before the trusts were completely executed, & during the tenancy, the reversion was sold. For a year after this sale, the purchaser received the rents, but, during the subsequent years, from Christmas, 1817 to Lady Day, 1830, they were received by the trustees. The trusts were completely executed in 1821. On Mar. 25, 1830, the lessee came to the house, no one being therein, gave the key to the trustees, & departed. The trustees entered; & the purchaser, who had been present at the above proceeding, & had come to take possession, entered also, but was put back by the trustees, & they remained on the premises:—Held: (1) if the lessee's term had expired the reversioner's entry would have been good, notwithstanding the entry of the trustees; but the term, under the above lease, did not expire till the end of Mar. 25, 1830; (2) the acts of the lessee on that day did not necessarily import a surrender or a forfeiture.—*ACKLAND v. Upon the bkpy. of B., A. sent the key of the rooms to the official assignee, where it was left with a clerk, who was told that it was the key of the rooms which A. had occupied. A. immediately quitted possession, & no further communication took place:—Held: not to amount to a surrender by act or operation of law.

Here there is nothing but the fact of the key being brought to the clerk of the official assignee. It is contended that he was bound to receive anything brought to the office for his master.

6698. Delivery under protest—Compulsory repairs—Landlord entering to rebuild.—On Nov. 4, 1858, A. let certain premises to B. for a term of four years from Michaelmas preceding, at a yearly rent payable quarterly, the agreement containing the following condition: "The condition of this agreement being binding on the said B., is, that the said A. shall make good & support the floor of the warehouse of the said premises, etc., within twenty-eight days of the date of this agreement: if not done, this agreement to be void." Within the twenty-eight days, A. entered with workmen, & afterwards departed, stating that he had made all secure. B. paid rent at Christmas & at Lady Day. Early in Apr. 1859, the warehouse floor having broken in, the attention of the comr. of sewers was called to the state of the premises, & the result was that in May an order was made upon A., under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, directing him to secure & repair the same. At the end of Apr., A. informed B. that he was about to pull down the premises, & offered to assist B. in removing his printing-presses & plant. After the date of the comr.'s order, A. entered the premises & pulled down the ground floor storey, including the warehouse floor, & took no steps to replace or repair it. B. thereupon obtained other premises, & he & his undertenants were out, & on June 23, B. sent A. the key, with a letter stating that he had been forced out of the premises by A.'s wilful & unnecessary destruction of the warehouse floor, etc. A. received the key, read the letter, & said nothing, & a few days afterwards entered & pulled down the whole house, for the purpose of re-building it:—Held: these facts showed an agreement for a determination of the tenancy on June 23, & consequently A. could not sue for the quarter's rent. Qu.: whether they amounted to a surrender or an eviction.—FURNIVALL v. He left the keys with an agent to dispose of the house if he could, if not, to make the best bargain he could with pltfs. for the surrender of the term. The agent was unable to find a tenant & gave the keys in Dec. 1868, to pltfs. They employed a house agent to let the house, & he put up bills in the house & advertised it to let, but the house was not let till Lady Day, 1872, when a new tenant went in. In 1870, for a short time, some workmen of pltfs.' occupied two rooms in the house for the purpose of pltfs.' saddlery business. Pltfs. having sued deft. for rent from Michaelmas, 1868, to Lady Day, 1872:—Held: there had been no possession of the house

By an agreement made with deft. previously to May, 1884, they had put up bills in the house after he had left it, & also a board in front of it, advertising it to be let. In Aug. they entered into an agreement with another tenant to give him possession at Michaelmas, 1884. E. Change in Position of Tenant.

6713. Appointment as bailiff—Lessee of manor.]—A lease for years was granted by the Bishop of Ely, of the Manor of Totteridge. The Bishop's successor by deed reciting the lease, granted the lessee the office of bailiff of the same manor, which it was contended constituted a surrender:—Held: if lessee for years of a manor be afterwards made bailiff, it is no surrender for the office of bailiff has not an interest in the land, but only an authority & it has not any part of the thing demised.—GAGE v. PEACOCK (1605), Noy, 12; 74 E. R. 983.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Patteson (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 9.

6714. ——— Lease of bailiwick.]—If the lessee for years of a manor, with exception of wards, marriages, reliefs, etc., afterwards take a lease of the bailiwick of the manor, this shall not operate as a surrender of the first lease, notwithstanding the exception is void. A bailiff of a manor, although he has no interest in the land, may receive rents, take fealty, etc.—GYBSON v. SEARL (1607), Cro. Jac. 176; 79 E. R. 154.

Annotation:—Refd. Roe d. Berkeley v. York (Archbp.) (1805), 6 East, 86.

6715. Appointment as servant of lessor—Lessee of ferry.]—The owner of a ferry demised it to A. by parol at a certain annual rent. The latter, at the end of a few weeks, finding it unprofitable, proposed to become the servant of the former as boatman, & to account to him for all money received from passengers, upon being allowed fixed daily wages. This was assented to by the owner of the ferry, & A. became his servant, & received the stipulated wages:—Held: there was a surrender of A.'s interest in the ferry by act & operation of law.—PETER v. KENDAL (1827), 6 B. & C. 703; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 282; 108 E. R. 610.

F. Irregular Notice to Quit.

6716. Whether operative as surrender.]—A tenant held under a demise from Mar. 26, for one year then next ensuing, & fully to be completed & ended, & so from year to year, for so long as the landlord & tenant should respectively please. The tenant, after having held more than one year, gave a parol notice to the landlord less than six months before Mar. 25, that he would quit on that day, & the landlord accepted & assented to the notice:—Held: (1) on demurrer in replevin, the tenancy was not thereby determined, there not having been either a sufficient notice to quit, or a surrender in writing, or by operation of law, within Stat. Frauds.

(2) Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18, only applied to cases where the tenant had the power of determining his tenancy by a notice, & where he actually gave a valid notice to determine it.—JOHNSTONE v. HUDDLESTONE (1825), 4 B. & C. 922; 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 411; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 71; 107 E. R. 1302; previous proceedings, sub nom. DOE d. HUDDLESTON v. JOHNSTON, M'Cle. & Yo. 141.

6717. ——— Right of landlord.]—If a tenant from year to year give a notice to quit, not expiring with the year, the landlord, if the notice be in writing, & signed by the tenant, may, if he pleases, treat this irregular notice as a surrender of the tenancy.—

r. Appointment as caretaker.]—Upon the surrender to the head landlord of a farm, held under a lease for lives, upon the day of surrender, he informed deft., a sub-yearly tenant of a house upon the farm of the surrender by his immediate lessor, & deft. acquiesced in it. Deft., who was a ploughman at weekly wages to the landlord, agreed to continue in possession of the house as caretaker, until some other house could be procured for him by the landlord:—Held: the agreement entered into by the parties amounted to a surrender in law, by deft.; his occupation of the house being inconsistent with the possession of any estate in the premises.—LAMBERT v. M'DONNELL (1864), 15 I. C. L. R. 136.—IR.

PART XXIV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.—F.

6716 I. Whether operative as surrender.]—A notice by a lessor to lessees to give up possession was irregular in that it failed to state at or within which time possession was required. The notice was treated by the lessees as valid & effective:—Held: the lease had been surrendered by operation of law.—RE ARBITRATION ACT, MASTERS & McDOUGALL v. STEPHEN, STEPHEN & McDOUGALL, [1925] 4 D. L. R. 684; [1925] 3 W. W. R. 493.—CAN.

6718. ——— Notice in futuro.—A yearly tenant, holding from Christmas, gave a half-year's notice in writing to determine his tenancy at Midsummer:—Held: in an action of ejectment brought upon this notice, the tenancy was not thereby determined, as it was not a sufficient notice to quit, & in futuro it would not operate as a surrender by a notice in writing within Stat. Frauds.

I am very thoroughly of opinion that there cannot be a surrender to take place in futuro (PARKE, B.).—DOE d. MURRELL v. MILWARD (1838), 3 M. & W. 328; 1 Horn. & H. 79; 7 L. J. Ex. 57; 150 E. R. 1170.

6721. Agreement for surrender—Necessity for consideration.—K., holding lands under the see of D. for a renewable term of twenty-one years, demised them, in 1787, to two persons for a like term, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal. These sold their interest in part of the lands, & divided the rest equally among them. On the death of one, his share passed to his two sons, A. & B.; the share of the other was sold to P. A. & B. obtained a renewal of the lease of all the lands to themselves in 1822, without P.'s knowledge, & then mortgaged them to M., & obtained a judgment in ejectment against P., who thereupon filed a bill against them & M., & obtained, in 1826, a decree for an account & reconveyance of his part, on payment of his proportion of the renewal fines & costs. W., who had been the attorney of A. & B. in all these matters, obtained an assignment of their interest in 1829. P. did not take up the decree of 1826, but he made several payments to W. in respect of the renewal fines & costs, & urged him to convey to him his part of the lands, & grant a renewal; but being in distress, he signed an agreement to surrender his lands to W., & take part of them as his tenant:—Held: the agreement signed by P. to surrender was without consideration, & void, & he was entitled to the value of his lands while they were in the possession of W., & to a reconveyance & renewal upon payment of the balance found due from him.—WALLACE v. PATTON (1846), 12 Cl. & Fin. 491; 8 E. R. 1501, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 5.—SURRENDER OF PART.

6723. Less than whole term—Lessee retaining reversion—No surrender.—As touching the surrender, if lessee for a hundred years grants unto his lessor all his term, excepting one year, this is no surrender, clearly, & so likewise it is if there be a saving to himself, a month, a week, or a day; this is no surrender (COKE, C.J.).—BACON v.

WALLER (1616), 3 Bulst. 203; 1 Roll. Rep. 387; 81 E. R. 171.

Annotation:—Mentd. Pugh v. Leeds (1777), 2 Cowp. 714.

6724. ———.]—It is laid down in 2 Roll. Abr. 497 (L.) 30, "if a lessee grants part of his estate to his lessor, whereby a reversion continues in himself, this is no surrender" (TINDAL, C.J.).—BURTON v. BARCLAY (1831), 7 Bing. 745; 5 Moo. & P. 785; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 231; 131 E. R. 288.

6725. Part of demised premises—Good.—Pltf., by deed, demised to deft. a house & premises for twenty-one years at the yearly rent of £50, & the lease contained a covenant by deft. to pay the rent during the continuance of the term. Deft. assigned the term, & the assignee surrendered to pltf. a portion of the premises, upon which was a scullery, pltf. in consideration thereof paying the assignee £25 & building a new scullery on another part of the premises. The rent apportionable for the part surrendered was £4 a year. In an action upon the covenant for a quarter's rent less the sum apportioned for the part surrendered:—Held: deft., by assigning his interest in the term, empowered the assignee to surrender any part of the premises; therefore, there had not been any eviction of deft. by pltf.; & deft., notwithstanding the surrender, was still liable on the covenant.—BAYNTON v. MORGAN (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 74; 58 L. J. Q. B. 139; 53 J. P. 166; 37 W. R. 148; 5 T. L. R. 99, C. A.

6728. ———.]—If a lessee for years re-demise his whole term to the lessor, with a reservation of rent, it operates as a surrender of the original lease; & therefore he cannot maintain debt for rent against the exor. of the original lessor, but must seek relief in equity; but if a lessee assign his whole term to a stranger he may bring debt for the rent reserved on the contract against him or his personal representatives.—FLOYD v. The sum in the agreement is considered as a sum to be paid annually in gross, not as rent; & the assignee cannot distrain either for that or

6734. ———.—In 1805, R., then Chancellor of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London, & parson of the parish church of Ealing, granted a lease for three lives of the glebe lands & hereditaments, of which he was seised in fee. In 1807, the tenants under the lease of 1805 granted a sub-lease of part of the property for ninety-nine years, determinable on the dropping of the same lives as in the principal lease. The last of such lives dropped in 1874. On Aug. 24, 1832, the persons then entitled to the lease of 1805 surrendered such lease to R., & on the following day R. granted a fresh lease for three lives. The last of such lives dropped in 1891. Pltfs., who claimed through R., had ever since the death of R., in 1839, received the rent reserved by the lease of 1832. Defts., claiming through the sub-lessee, had been since 1874 in actual possession of the lands without title. Pltfs. claimed recovery of possession & mesne profits, on the ground that their title first accrued in 1891. Defts. claimed to be entitled in fee, on the ground that pltfs.' title first accrued in 1874, & they claimed the benefit of Stat. Limitations:—Held: by the lease of Aug. 1832, an immediate estate passed to the lessees therein named, & not a mere right in the nature of an interesse termini to a future estate, to come into existence on the determination of the sub-lease; & moreover, such lease was by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, a valid lease, & was a lease which, passing an estate to the new lessees, prevented the grantor, & those claiming under him, from seeking to recover the lands till that lease had expired; & therefore, pltfs.' title did not accrue till 1891 when the last life dropped.—ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. FOR ENGLAND v. TREEMER, [1893] 1 Ch. 166; 62 L. J. Ch. 119; 68 L. T. 11; 41 W. R. 166; 9 T. L. R. 78; 37 Sol. Jo. 66; 3 R. 136.

6735. ——— Tenant claiming by adverse possession to lessee.—Where a trespasser on land let on lease has as against the lessee acquired a title under Stat. Limitations & the lessee subsequently surrenders the lease to the lessor, the lessor has no right of re-entry, & the period of limitation does not begin to run, until the expiration of the term for which the lease was granted.—WALTER v. 6736. Lessor's right of action against trespasser.—The contemporaneous surrender & renewal of a lease will not prevent the accrual to the lessor of a right of action against a trespasser.—ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. OF ENGLAND & WALES v. ROWE (1880), 5 App. Cas. 736; 49 L. J. Q. B. 771; 43 L. T. 353; 45 J. P. 36; 29 W. R. 159, H. L.

C. On Parties Claiming under Lessee.

(a) In General.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 150.

6737. Interest not affected.—Where tenant from year to year underlet part of the premises, & then gave up to his landlord the part remaining in his own possession, without either receiving a regular notice to quit the whole, or giving notice to quit to his sub-lessee, or even surrendering that part in the name of the whole, supposing that any thing short of a regular notice to quit from the landlord to his immediate tenant would after such sub-letting have determined the tenancy in the whole; yet the landlord cannot entitle himself to recover against the sub-lessee, there being no privity of contract between them, upon giving half a year's notice to quit in his own name, & not in the name of the first lessee; for as to the part so underlet, the original tenancy still continued undetermined.

The surrender of the lessee would not destroy any interest which a stranger claiming under him had acquired in the term in the meantime (BAYLEY, J.).—PLEASANT (LESSEE OF HAYTON) v. BENSON (1811), 14 East, 234; 104 E. R. 590.

Annotation:—Reid, London & Westminster Loan & Discount Co. v. Drake (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 798.

6738. ———.—Although a surrender of a life estate to the owner of the fee is as between the parties an extinguishment of the estate surrendered, yet may it have continuance to uphold a prior interest derived under it.

t. Privilege in lease.—The owner of land with a saw mill thereon leased the mill, with a right to cut timber during his lease. The lessee assigned the lease, & the assignee afterwards surrendered it to the proprietor of the freehold:—Held: the right to

of a copyhold tenement of deft.'s father, & afterwards the estate of J. was surrendered to the lord of the fee, who made a lease of the manor to the lessor of pltf.:—Held: inasmuch as the lease to deft.'s father, though not warranted by the custom, & though it suspended the copyhold tenure, was nevertheless good to pass an interest to him, the lessor of pltf. should not avoid the same during the continuance of one of the three lives in the lease to J., notwithstanding the surrender of that estate.

Though a surrender operates between the parties as an extinguishment of the interest which is surrendered, it does not so operate as to third persons, who at the time of the surrender had rights, which such extinguishment would destroy. As to them, the surrender operates only as a grant, subject to their right, & the interest surrendered still has, for the preservation of their right, continuance (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—DOE v. BEADON v. PYKE (1816), 5 M. & S. 146; 105 E. 6739. —[.]—The lessee of premises No. 137, High Street, East Ham, carried on therein the business of a pork butcher. The lease contained a covenant by which he covenanted not to carry on therein any noisy or offensive trade other than that of a pork butcher. He was also lessee under a different landlord of premises No. 170, in the same street, upon which he carried on the business of a general butcher. He sold & assigned to pltf. his interest in the last-mentioned premises, & the goodwill of his business as a general butcher, covenanting with pltf., inter alia, that he, his exors., administrators, & assigns, would not "cut, sell or deal in fresh hindquarter beef, mutton, veal, lamb, or poultry at or upon the premises No. 137, High Street, East Ham, or in connection with the business of a pork butcher now carried on there by him." He afterwards gave up business, & surrendered his lease of No. 137 to the landlord; & a new lease thereof was granted to his son by the landlord, which lease contained a covenant that the lessee would not carry on upon the premises any noisy or offensive trade other than, not "that of a pork butcher," as in the old lease, but "that of a butcher."

At the time when the landlord accepted the surrender, he had not in fact notice of the restrictive covenant entered into by the father with pltf. as regards No. 137, but the son, when the new lease was granted to him, knew of the existence of that covenant. The son afterwards set up the business of a general butcher on the premises No. 137, High Street:—Held: in the circumstances of the case the landlord was not affected with constructive notice of the father's covenant, & consequently, could grant to the son a lease free from the restriction of that covenant & the son therefore could not be restrained at the suit of pltf. from carrying on the business of a general butcher at No. 137.

A surrender only affects what the surrenderer can surrender, & when he has granted subordinate terms or sub-leases they are not discharged (SCRUTTON, J.).—WILKES v. SPOONER, [1911] 2 K. B. 473; 80 L. J. K. B. 1107; 104 L. T. 911; 27 T. L. R. 426; 55 Sol. Jo. 479, C. A.

6741. —[.]—(1) A demise from year to year generally, by a tenant from year to year, is, in legal effect, a demise from year to year, during the continuance of such tenant's term, & may be properly pleaded as such.

(2) It is said that the term from year to year granted to the underlessee, generally, would continue though the lessee surrendered his term or merged it; that is, it would continue longer than during the continuance of the demise to the lessee: not so a demise made during the continuance of the first demise. . . . But the authority [co. Litt. 338] gives an answer to the objection, for it shows that, "in regard to strangers, not parties or privies to the surrender, the estate surrendered has, in consideration of law a continuance." Therefore although H. might have surrendered, his estate would as to [underlessee] P. have continuance (BAYLEY, J.).—PIKE v. EYRE (1829), 9 B. & C. 909; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 601; 8 L. J. O. S. K. 6742. —[.]—At Michaelmas, 1851, W., the owner of two adjoining houses, Nos. 4 & 5, let No. 5 to A., as tenant from year to year. Deft. having become tenant to W. of No. 4, A. let him the cellars under No. 5 from year to year from Michaelmas, 1861. There was in the front cellar a gas meter communicating with the house No. 5, & it was a term of the letting that A. should be allowed to go to the meter, if necessary, whenever deft.'s premises were open. In July, 1871, it was agreed between A., W., & D., that A. should give up possession of No. 5 to W., & D. became tenant from year to year to W. from Michaelmas, 1871. Deft. was aware that No. 5 was given up by A., & re-let to D., but no notice to quit the cellars was given to deft. In Mar. 1872, D. put up in the cellars a water meter communicating with his house, without either objection or express permission of deft. Afterwards D. surrendered his interest in favour of pltf., & W. let No. 5, expressly including the cellars, to pltf. for fourteen years, from June 24, 1872. Pltf. entered into occupation, the cellars remaining occupied by deft., & pltf., without objection or permission of deft., put up more pipes & some bell wires in the cellars. In July, 1872, pltf. demanded possession of the cellars, but deft. refused to give them up without a proper notice to quit, & he retained possession till Apr. 1873. On Jan. 10, 1873, deft. cut off pltf.'s water supply by hammering up the service pipe passing through the cellars, & cut the gas pipes & bell wires. Pltf. having brought an action for being kept out of possession of the cellars & for the damages caused by deft.'s cutting the pipes, etc.:—Held: (1) deft. was entitled to keep possession until a proper notice to quit had been given; for the voluntary surrender by A. could not affect the interest of deft., his sub-lessee; & (2) pltf. was entitled to damages for the cutting of his pipes & wires; for a licensee, under a revocable licence, was entitled to notice of revocation & a reasonable time afterwards to remove his goods.—MELLOR v. WATKINS (1874), L. 6744. — Lessor without knowledge of forfeiture.]—A lessee of a field under a lease containing a covenant not to underlet without the leave of the lessor underlet it without such leave to pltf., upon a yearly tenancy, & afterwards surrendered his lease to the lessor, who had no knowledge of the underlease, & who subsequently let the field to deft. Pltf. declined to give up possession, & deft. thereupon entered & turned out pltf.'s cattle. In an action brought by pltf. to recover possession of the field & damages for trespass:—Held: pltf.'s term was not affected by the surrender, but was still subsisting at the date of the entry by deft.; it could not be got rid of by reason of the lessor granting another lease incompatible with it; & pltf. was therefore entitled to recover.—*PARKER v. Before the expiry of G.'s lease he took possession of the piece of land & surrendered his lease to his lessors. In an action by W. & the co. against G. & his lessors to recover possession:—Held: the sub-letting by G. "for the term of the lease" to him referred not to his interest in the tenements, but to the unexpired period of the lease, & therefore the surrender did not affect the sub-lease, & the stipulations in the lease to G. as to assignment or sub-letting did not bind W., the underlessee, & pltf. were entitled to possession.—*SLOUGH PICTURE HALL CO., LTD. v. 6747. — To observe covenants in head lease.]—Deft. held two plots of building land, B. & C., under a lease which contained a covenant to build the houses not less than thirty feet apart, the effect of which was to secure on plot B. a sea view over plot C. H. having entered into a treaty with deft. for an underlease of B., made inquiries of deft. as to what could be built on the land in front. Deft. replied that he, deft., could not build on C. closer than thirty feet, as his lease did not allow it. H. after having inspected the original lease took an underlease of B., containing a covenant by deft. that he, his exors., administrators & assigns, would observe the lessee's covenants in the original lease. Deft. afterwards surrendered his lease to the ground landlord, took a new lease not containing the old restrictions, & commenced building on C. in a way which would obstruct the sea view from houses on B. belonging to pltf., who was the assignee of H.:—Held: (1) the rights of H., under deft.'s covenant to observe the covenants in the original lease, were not effected by deft.'s surrender of that lease, & pltf. was on that ground entitled to an injunction to restrain deft. from building in contravention of those covenants; & (2) even if by reason of the surrender the covenant was gone, pltf. was entitled to an injunction on equitable grounds, for what deft. had said to H. amounted to a representation, that deft. could not during the term of his lease build otherwise than in a particular way, which representation he was bound to make good.—*PIGGOTT v. 6748. — Restrictive covenant.]—If a lessee for a term of twenty-one years, determinable by notice at the end of seven or fourteen years, at his option sub-lets the demised premises for a fixed term exceeding fourteen years, he ceases to be entitled to give a valid notice determining his own lease.

In a case, where the underlease contains a restrictive covenant binding upon the underlessor, & a notice purporting to determine the headlease is given &, in addition, a surrender of the superior term is executed, the original lessor, since he derives his title during the term through the underlessor, is bound by the covenant.

Where an underlease was of the upper floors of the demised premises only, & between the dates of the notice & the surrender the original lessor let the ground floor & basement for use as a restaurant, to which use the underlessor had covenanted that he would not put the premises retained by him:—Held: the restaurant keeper, as well as his lessor, was bound by the covenant of which he had constructive notice, because he knew that the entrance to the upper floors was through the ground floor, & having notice of rights over the premises demised to him, he should have inquired their nature & source, & if this had been done he would have learnt of the sub-lease & so have acquired notice of its contents.—*PHIPOS v. (2) Premises being demised & underlet, the first tenant surrendered his lease & took a new one with similar covenants. The undertenant continued in possession, & never surrendered. Qu.: whether special covenants in the new lease, coextensive with those in the old, as not to erect new buildings without leave, could be enforced by the head landlord against such undertenant, as “duties reserved” by the second lease, within 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6.—*DOE d. On the expiry of the notice to quit deft.'s rent was in arrear:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the rent by virtue of above Act, sect. 6, which provides that “in case any lease shall be duly surrendered in order to be renewed & a new lease made . . . every person . . . in whom any estate for life or lives or for years shall from time to time be vested by virtue of such new lease . . . shall be entitled to the rents” payable under any underleases “& have like remedy for recovery thereof . . . as if the original leases out of which the respective underleases are derived, had been still kept on foot & continued.”—*PLUMMER & JOHN v. The surrenderee had no actual notice that the lease had been deposited by way of mtge. with B.:—Held: the surrenderee had not, under these circumstances, been guilty of gross or wilful negligence, & was consequently entitled, as the holder of the legal estate, to priority over B., the prior equitable mtgee.—*BROWN v. 6759. Assignee of bill of sale.]—B., the tenant from year to year of a farm of deft., assigned by bill of sale to pltf. all his property upon the farm, together with all growing & all other crops which at any time thereafter should be in or about the same or any other premises of his. On Apr. 25, after the execution of this bill of sale, deft. distrained for rent, & while in possession under that distress, he, having no knowledge of the bill of sale, agreed with B. that he would forego all claim for rent, that B. should surrender the farm to him, & that the tenancy should be determined as from June 24, next ensuing. In May, B. having made default in payment of the instalments under the bill of sale, pltf. took an inventory of the goods on the farm, & put locks on the gates of the fields in which the crops were growing. Deft. then informed pltf. of the agreement between himself & B.; whereon pltf. removed the locks,

& shortly after gave deft. notice of the assignment to him by the bill of sale of the crops. Deft. attended to the cultivation of the crops, took possession of the farm on June 24, & reaped & sold the crops as they came to maturity. In an action of trover & for the conversion of the crops:—Held: although pltf. was in equity entitled to relief, yet an action of trover could not be maintained; the surrender by the tenant to the landlord was a valid surrender at law, but it could not affect prejudicially the equitable rights of pltf. as assignee of the crops; if there could be no valid surrender as against pltf., & if the tenant must still be considered with regard to pltf. to be in possession, so that pltf. could claim to be by the assignment in the same position as the tenant, then pltf., although entitled to the value of the crops when sold, was also liable to pay the rent of the farm & the expenses of cultivating & harvesting the crops; & as the balance on a settlement of account was in favour of deft., judgment must, in the circumstances of the case, be entered for deft.—*CLEMENTS v. 6765. ——— Claim for use & occupation.]—

The right to recover rent accrued due, & which has been reserved on a parol demise, is not extinguished by a surrender of the term by operation of law, notwithstanding the absence of a personal covenant by the tenant to pay such rent, but can be enforced by an action for the use & occupation of the premises demised, under the provisions of Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 14.—SHAW v. LOMAS (1888), 59 L. T. 477; 52 J. P. 821.

To my mind it is clear beyond dispute that by accepting that surrender & terminating the continuance of the lease he does not in any way waive or get rid of accrued rights of action in respect of breaches of the covenants of the lease during the time that the lease existed. His lessee entered into those covenants & was bound to keep them, & if he broke them there were vested causes of action, & there is nothing in the legal operation of the surrender which takes 6768. —.]—A surrender of a lease by a tenant operates only to release him from liability on the covenants taking effect after the date of the surrender, leaving him liable for past breaches; & this is so even though the surrender was made by agreement with the landlord.

A tenant negotiated with his landlord for a surrender of his lease on terms which had no connection with a discharge of the tenant from liability for past breaches of covenant, & in the result the landlord agreed that, if the tenant would pay the rent up to a certain future date & would give up possession, he would "release him," without saying from what:—Held: the release, though in general terms, must be read as limited to the matters which were in the contemplation of the parties at the time when the release was given, & consequently did not release the tenant from liability for past breaches of the covenant to repair.—RICHMOND v. SAVILL, [1926] 2 K. B. 530; 70 Sol. Jo. 875, C. A.

6771. Court guided by intent.—Bkpt. being the lessee under a lease for forty-six years subject to a former lease for twenty years deposited it by way of equitable mtge. He afterwards purchased the remainder of the term granted by the first lease, & deposited that lease also with the same parties for securing a further sum:—Held: the first lease was not under these circumstances merged in the second, & the depositaries were good equitable mtgees. under both deposits.

Merger & extinguishment are now considered as matter of intention (SIR JOHN CROSS).—Re Dix, Ex p. WHITBREAD (1841), 2 Mont. D. & De G. 415, Ct. of R.

6772. —.]—In dealing with questions of merger, the principle by which the ct. is guided is the intention; & in the absence of express intention, either documentary or verbal, the ct. looks to the benefit of the person in whom the two estates became vested. V. entered into possession of a portion of certain settled estates under an agreement for a lease of ninety-nine years made with the tenant for life; & subsequently himself became the tenant for life. There was no proof of express intention on the part of V. that the estates should merge, & it was clearly to his benefit that the estates should not merge:—Held: there was no merger.—INGLE v. VAUGHAN JENKINS, [1900] 2 Ch. 388; 69 L. J. Ch. 618; 83 L. T. 155; 48 W. R. 684.

6773. —.]—H. was entitled to certain houses for a term of ninety-nine years, less one day, by way of mtge from W. W. was entitled to the property for the original term subject to the mtge., & H. was entitled to the reversion in fee expectant on the determination of the original term. Under these circumstances W. conveyed the property to H. for the unexpired residue of the original term, & H. covenanted to indemnify W. against the rents & covenants in the lease & the principal & interest secured by the mtge. H. afterwards conveyed by way of sale to W. in fee, the conveyance being expressly "subject to & with benefit of the lease," & W. then conveyed to ptfs. in fee "subject to & with benefit of the lease." H. subsequently purported to convey by way of mtge. in fee to deft., who had no notice of ptfs.' title:—Held: whether the original term had merged in the reversion or not, yet, inasmuch as H. & W. had dealt with one another on the footing that the term was to be deemed in existence, it would be inequitable to allow it to be treated as at an end. H. had therefore, when he purported to convey the fee to deft., an equitable estate to the extent of the leasehold interest, which, under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 63, passed to deft., & ptfs. were bound to give effect to it.

The question whether two equitable estates are merged or not is one of intention. Qu.: whether this rule applies where a merger of legal estate has actually taken place.—THELLUSON v. LIDDARD, [1900] 2 Ch. 635; 69 L. J. Ch. 673; 82 L. T. 753; 49 W. R. 10.

6774. —.]—The equitable rule that merger depends upon intention applies to the merger of estates as well as to the merger of charges.

In 1871 a lease was granted of a public-house for a term of ninety-nine years at a rent of £100 per annum. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on default for twenty-one days in payment of the rent. This lease was assigned to deft. R. In May, 1897, R., "as beneficial owner," demised the house by way of mtge. to F. for the residue of the term, less the last day thereof. No rent was reserved by this deed, & R. covenanted to indemnify F. against the original rent. The deed contained provisions making R. in effect a trustee of the last day of the term for the mtgees. or a purchaser from them. By a deed dated July 27, 1899, the house was conveyed to R. in fee at the price of £3,650, "subject to, but with the benefit of," the lease. To enable him to complete the purchase he arranged to borrow £3,000 from ptfr. bank on the security of the house; & on July 27, 1899, a mtge. to the bank was executed immediately after the conveyance to R., the £3,000 being paid by the bank directly to the vendors. The property had been described to the bank as "a freehold ground rent of £100 a year" secured on the house. At this time registration of title to land under Land Transfer Acts had been made compulsory on sale in the parish in which the house was situate. On Aug. 28, 1899, R. applied for the registration of himself as proprietor of the house, with a possessory title. On the same day he executed an instrument charging the house with the payment to the bank of the £3,000 & interest. In Apr. 1901, R. executed a deed of arrangement with his creditors to which the bank were not parties. F. took possession of the house, & the bank demanded payment of the rent of £100 from them, as well as from the trustee of the deed of Apr. 1901, but it was not paid. The bank then brought an action against R., F., & the trustee of the deed of arrangement, claiming to enforce their security by foreclosure or sale. They claimed also a declaration that the term had not merged in the fee, & that they were entitled to re-enter for non-payment of the rent:—Held: having regard to all the circumstances, it could not have been the intention of the parties that the term should merge in the fee; before Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), there would in equity have been no merger; & consequently, by sect. 25, sub-sect. 4, of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), there was now no merger at law; the term was still in existence, & the bank, if the legal estate in the fee was vested in them, were entitled to enter for default in payment of the rent.—*CAPITAL & COUNTIES BANK, LTD. v. The lessee thereupon applied to the Ct. of Bkpcy. that unless the mtgee. elected to have the property comprised in the lease vested in him subject to the covenants & conditions in the lease, he should be excluded from all interest in the property. The Ct., upon this application went into the question whether the lease had been merged by reason of the lessee having purchased the reversion, & held that there was no merger, & that the lease was still subsisting at the date of the bkpcy., & made the order asked for. The order was not appealed against:—Held: the matter was res judicata & could not be tried again in another ct. Seemle: there was no merger, the lessee intending to keep alive the term, & it being for his benefit to do so.—LEA v. THURSBY, [1904] 2 Ch. 57; 73 L. J. Ch. 518; 90 L. T. 687; 20 T. L. R. 470; 11 Mans. 151.

Shortly after testatrix's death the daughters purchased the freehold of the larger piece of land, & the lease of the house & grounds was subsequently assigned to the daughters by the exors. of testatrix. Ten months later the daughters mortgaged the house & grounds, reciting & assigning their leasehold & freehold interests separately. There was no direct evidence of intention as to merger:—Held: the mtge. deed was admissible in evidence to show what was the intention of the daughters as to merger at the time when the leasehold interest was assigned to them; from that deed it appeared merger was not intended & the term had not therefore merged.—Re FLETCHER, READING v. FLETCHER, [1917] 1 Ch. 339; 86 L. J. Ch. 317; 116 L. T. 460; 61 Sol. Jo. 267, C. A.

A. afterwards made a will, giving to his wife "the whole of my personal property estate & effects of every & whatsoever kind they may be":—Held: the gift in the will was confined to personal estate, & did not pass the reversion in fee, but the term was a term in gross, & passed by the will as personal estate.—*BELANEY v. 6789. Lease held in right of wife—Reversion held beneficially.—In 1881 a woman seised in fee simple of two freehold houses & possessed of a long leasehold shop, but not in either case to her separate use, married a solr. On May 10, 1883, she purchased the freehold reversion of the shop. She died in 1897 without ever having had any issue, having by her will, made in 1888, devised "all" her "freehold shop" to her trustees upon trust for sale & to pay a sum of £1,300 out of the proceeds to certain named persons, & "all the residue of the real estate over which" she "had a disposing power" to her husband for life, to whom she also bequeathed all other her personal estate absolutely, & from & after his death she devised "all other" her "real estate" to her trustees upon trust for sale & to pay & divide the net proceeds as therein mentioned. The husband, the sole surviving exor. & trustee, proved the will & elected to pay & paid estate duty on the real estate passing on his wife's death. He went into, & remained in, possession of all her real estate until his death in 1917, without giving any acknowledgment of the title of the heir-at-law. He appointed plffs. exors. of his will which contained a devise & bequest of his real & residuary personal estate. Upon a summons for the determination of the parties entitled to the properties in question:—Held: as to the shop; the husband's marital interest in the term prevented merger, but as the wife had purported to deal with the whole interest in the shop, & not merely the reversion, & as the husband took a life interest in it subject to the charge of £1,300, & had accepted his wife's personal estate, he must be treated as having elected to allow his interest in the shop to pass under his wife's will.—*Re COOLE, COOLE v. 6790. Lease held beneficially—Reversion as administrator.—C. an administrator, granted an underlease for a term of years of land held by him as administrator. Shortly afterwards the underlessee assigned the land to G. for the residue of the term:—Held: there was in equity no merger of the term, & plffs. who would be entitled to the land if the term was in existence could maintain an action to establish their title to the land for the term, & for mesne profits.—*CHAMBERS v. On the death of A., his devisees & the devisees of B. granted a building lease of another portion of the freehold property to a person who assigned his interest under the lease to A.'s trustees alone. The legal estate in all the property was outstanding in a mtgee. who, subsequently to the above transactions, reconveyed the mtged. premises to the trustees of A. & B.:—Held: there was no merger of the leasehold interests in the reversion in fee of A., & the leases were consequently still existing.—BRANLON v. The lessors were to allow for all land taken for any of the purposes aforesaid an abatement from the rent at the rate of £2 per acre:—Held: unless it was shown that the lessors desired to resume possession of the demised land for building or other purposes, the power of re-entry never arose & never became exercisable.—*SOUTHBEND-ON-SEA ESTATES CO., LTD. v. of land by indenture contained this clause, following covenants to repair, pay rent, etc. "Provided nevertheless, that in case M." (the lessor) "shall at any time be desirous of having any part of the said piece of land delivered up to him, & of such his desire shall give three calendar months' notice to C." (the lessee), "then, at the expiration of such notice, he, the said C., doth hereby covenant peaceably to surrender up, & that the said M. shall & may take peaceable possession of, such part or parts of the said land as shall be mentioned in such notice; he the said M. paying to the said C. a reasonable compensation in respect of the moneys which may have been laid out by C. in improving the condition of so much of the said piece of land as shall be so given up; & then & from thenceforth the rent reserved by this indenture shall be reduced," etc. (in proportion to the land given up); "& the remainder of the said land shall be held by C. at such reduced rent, & M. shall have the same powers & remedies in all respects as if this lease had originally been granted at such reduced rent; & all the covenants, clauses, etc., herein contained, shall be as valid for so much of the demised land as shall not be included in such notice as if the reduced rent had been the original rent, & the land originally demised had been the land not included in such notice":—Held: under this proviso, the lessor, giving notice, might resume all the demised land; the proviso did not operate as a mere covenant by the lessee to give up on notice, but expressly gave the lessor power to take possession; & he might do so without having first paid compensation.

(2) The lessor served a notice requiring the lessee to give possession of the whole land at the end of three months, & adding: "I hereby offer & agree to allow you a reasonable compensation for any repairs which may have been done by you":—Held: a sufficient offer of compensation under the proviso.—*DOE d. 6811. — — — — —.]—A lease contained a proviso empowering the lessor "upon giving three months' notice of his intention to resume any portion of the demised premises . . . to enter into such possession." The lessor subsequently conveyed by deed his reversion to the use of himself & another as tenants in common. Shortly afterwards the tenants in common served upon the lessees a notice of resumption of the whole of the lands:—Held: (1) the fact that a sum "per acre" which was by the lease covenanted to be allowed as rebate upon resumption, would in the case of resumption of the whole of the lands exceed the rent per acre originally reserved would not constitute evidence of an intention to resume part only of the entire demised premises; (2) actual re-entry was not necessary under such notice; the severance of the reversion did not determine the right to resumption in pursuance of the proviso, & service of the notice upon a servant living at the house of one of the lessees, the said servant "promising to give it to him on his return home in a few days" was good service upon that lessee.—*LIDDY v. 6815. Effect of exercise—Operation of alternative covenants by landlord—Further option exercisable by tenant.—An agreement between landlord & tenant that the latter shall be at liberty to quit at Lady Day, 1814, in which event the former undertakes to take the fixtures at a valuation, or to permit the tenant to let the house to a respectable tenant creates an option to be exercised by the tenant, in case he gives up the premises. A letting by the tenant to an undertenant till Lady Day, 1814, is not an exercise of his right of option.—COLTON v. LINGHAM (1815), 1 Stark. 39, N. P.

6816. — Tenancy determined.—A lease was granted for fourteen years, which contained a proviso that the lessor might determine the lease at the end of the first seven years, by giving six months' previous notice. The father of the lessee joined as surety in the lease, & jointly covenanted for payment of the rent & performance of the covenants. Six months before the expiration of the first seven years, the lessor gave notice to the lessee "that he should require him to deliver up possession of the premises held by him under a certain indenture, determinable as therein mentioned." The lessor subsequently agreed to permit the lessee to continue in possession, which he did until the expiration of the fourteen years:—Held: the original term was effectually put an end to by the above notice, at the expiration of the first seven years; & the surety was exempted from liability in respect of any subsequent breaches of covenant.—GIDDENS v. DODD (1856), 3 Drew. 485; 25 L. J. Ch. 451; 20 J. P. 580; 4 W. R. 377; 61 E. R. 988.

6817. — Assignment of lease with proviso for return of purchase-money.—L. was the holder of a lease of premises from S. for twenty-one years, determinable at the will of either party at the end of the first seven or fourteen years. The first seven years would expire at Christmas, 1863. L. had expended considerable sums on the premises, for which he was to receive £1,800 from R., to whom he agreed to assign the lease. The agreement contained these stipulations:—"If R. is ejected by S., the £1,800 to be repaid to R. If S. exercises the power of determining the lease at Christmas, 1863, & R. leaves the house, £1,100 are to be returned to R. If at Christmas, 1863, the tenancy of R. is continued, the £1,800 to be retained by L." R. entered into possession, & his aunt, C., resided with him. In May, 1863, S. gave notice of an intention to determine the tenancy. At Christmas, 1863, C. became lessee to S., under a new lease, at a largely increased rent. R. continued to live in the house after his aunt, C., had become the lessee. R. claimed the return of the £1,100 under the agreement. There were equitable defences, to the effect that the new arrangement was collusive as between R., S., & C., but there was no proof that R. was the person really liable under the new lease:—Held: the agreement must be construed as applying entirely to a legal termination of R.'s tenancy, which having taken place, he was entitled under the agreement to the return of the £1,100.—LUCAS v. RIDEOUT (1868), 1 L. R. 3 H. L. 153, II. 1.; affg. S. C. sub nom. RIDEOUT v. LUCAS (1866), 14 L. T. 738, Ex. Ch.

6827. — Party entitled to equitable assignment—Licence by landlord to assign no estoppel.—(1) An underlease containing a proviso enabling the lessee to determine same cannot be determined by a person who has only an equitable right to call for an assignment. The fact that the landlord has granted licences to assign & has given him receipts for rent without knowing that the legal term was outstanding does not estop the landlord from disputing such person's right to determine the underlease.

An underlease contained the following proviso: "That if the lessee should be desirous of determining the present lease at the expiration of the first seven or fourteen years of the term hereby granted, & of such his desire shall give six calendar months' previous notice in writing to the lessors . . . & shall pay all the rent & perform & observe all the covenants . . . up to such determination then & in any such case & immediately after the expiration of the said term of seven or fourteen years, as the case may be, this present lease & everything herein contained shall cease & be void":—Held: (2) the payment of rent & performance of the covenants before the expiration of the seven or fourteen years respectively was a condition precedent to the determination of the lease at all.—*STAIT v. The superior lease of 1908 for twenty-one years from Sept. 29, 1908, was subject to determination by the lessee at the end of the first seven or fourteen years of the term. In 1920 the trustees of a friendly society took an assignment of the lease & underlease, & later acquired the freehold reversion in the whole of the premises. The agents of the society gave notice to the trustees of its desire to determine the underlease, & to pltf. of its intention to determine the sub-underlease:—Held: (1) the lessors of the sub-underlease were entitled to give notice to pltf. to determine the s.b.-underlease; (2) the notice of Feb. 17, 1922, given by the society's agents to pltf. was valid.

It is abundantly clear that the trustees, as the legal owners of the property, allowed the society, as the absolute beneficial owners, to have the full management of it . . . & any notice to terminate given by the society . . . was one given with full authority of the trustees so far as was necessary (SARGANT, J.).—*Re KNIGHT & HUBBARD'S UNDERLEASE, HUBBARD v. 6835. Strict performance essential—Payment of rent & performance of covenants.]—In a lease for seven years containing the usual covenants that the lessee should pay the rent, keep the premises in repair, etc., there was a proviso that the lessee might determine the term at the end of the first three or five years, giving six months' previous notice, & that then, from & after expiration of such notice, & payment of all rents & duties to be paid by the lessee, & performance of all his covenants until the end of the three or five years, the indenture should cease & be utterly void:—Held: the payment of rent & performance of the other covenants were conditions precedent to the lessee's determining the term at the end of the first three years, & his merely giving six months' notice expiring with the first three years was not sufficient for that purpose.—*PORTER v. 6837. — — Without prejudice to remedies for breach thereof.]—A. became tenant to B. of a colliery & also of some farm land, at distinct rents. The lease contained very numerous covenants as to the payment of the rents, & as to the management of each property. The term created was for forty-two years; but the tenant was to have liberty to put an end to the term, on giving eighteen months' notice before the expiration of the first eight years, or of any subsequent three years. The proviso which gave the tenant this liberty, after describing the giving of the notice, contained these words: "Then & in such case, all arrears of rent being paid, & all & singular the covenants & agreements on the part of the said lessees having been duly observed & performed, this lease, & every clause & thing therein contained, shall, at the expiration of the first eighth year, & thereafter at the expiration of any such third year, cease, determine, & be utterly void. . . . But nevertheless, without prejudice to any claim or remedy which any of the parties hereto may then be entitled to for breach of any of the covenants or agreements hereinbefore contained." The Ct. of Exch. had held that this proviso did providing that the lessor shall have the right in the event of a sale by her of the demised premises to determine the lease by giving three months' notice, only allows the then lessor to terminate, & gives no rights to a purchaser from the lessor to do so.—*MANZIE v. not make the performance of all the covenants a condition precedent to the tenant's power to put an end to the lease. The Ct. of Exch. 6838. ————.]—A lease for a term of years contained the usual covenant by the lessee to repair & deliver up in good & substantial repair the demised premises, with a proviso that if the lessee should desire to determine the lease at the expiration of the third, seventh, & fourteenth year of the term & should of such desire give six months' previous notice in writing to the lessor, "and shall pay all the rent & perform & observe all the covenants hereinbefore reserved & contained & on the part of the lessee to be paid, performed & observed up to such determination, then & in such case immediately after the expiration of the said term of three, seven or fourteen years as the case may be this lease & the term hereby granted shall absolutely cease & determine but without prejudice to the remedies of either of the parties hereto against the other in respect of any antecedent claim or breach of covenant." Under this proviso the lessee gave the lessor a six months' previous notice in writing to determine the lease at the expiration of the seventh year of the term & the premises being out of repair, commenced repairs shortly before & completed them a few days after the date for the determination of the lease:—Held: the performance of the covenant to repair was a condition precedent to the determination of the lease notwithstanding the qualifying words "without prejudice," etc., concluding the proviso; & the condition not having been fulfilled, the notice was bad & the lease had not determined.—*BURCH v. SUB-SECT. 4.—NOTICE TO EXERCISE.

6839. Notice by specific persons—Limitation to such persons.—(1) Demise from A. to B. for twenty-one years, if both should so long live; but if either should die before the end of the said term, then the heirs, exors., etc., of the person so dying should give twelve months' notice to quit, etc.:—Held: the lease could only be determined by twelve months' notice given by the representatives of the party dying before the end of the term, & consequently such notice given by the lessor to the representatives of the lessee, who died during the term, did not determine it.

(2) Where power is given to a party to determine a lease on giving a notice in writing, he cannot determine it by giving a parol notice.—LEGG d. SCOT v. BENION (1738), Willes, 43; 125 E. R. 1047.

6840. ———— Notice by all of such persons—Executors.—Where a lease for twenty-one years contained a proviso that in case either landlord or tenant, or their respective heirs & exors., wished to determine it at the end of the first fourteen years, & should give six months' notice in writing under his or their respective hands, the term should cease:—Held: a notice to quit, signed by two only of three exors. of the original lessor, to whom he had bequeathed the freehold as joint tenants, expressing the notice to be given on behalf of themselves & the third exor., was not good under the proviso, which required it to be given under the hands of all three; neither could such notice be sustained under the general rule of law, that one joint tenant may bind his companions by an act done for his benefit; for non constat the determination of the lease was for the benefit of the co-joint tenant; which it was incumbent on the party who wished to avail himself of it to prove. The notice to quit being such as the tenant was to act upon at the time, no subsequent recognition of the third exor. will make it good by relation: nor was his joining in the ejectment evidence of his original assent to bind the tenant by the notice.—*RIGHT d. SECT. 10.—ACTION FOR DOUBLE RENT OR DOUBLE VALUE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

6849. Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), s. 1—Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18—In pari materia—Same construction.]—Parol notice to quit, by a tenant on a parol lease, is within Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19).

Statutes in pari materia are to be all taken as one system to suppress the mischief. . . . The two laws, [Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), & Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19)], are only parts of the same provision (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.).

There is no power of distress in that Act, [Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28)], because no certainty of the value (WILMOT, J.).—TIMMINS v. ROWLISON (1765), 1 Wm. Bl. 533; 3 Burr. 1603; 96 E. R. 309.

Annotation:—Distsd. Johnstone v. Hudlestone (1825), 4 B. & C. 922.

6850. — — — — —.]—Notice to quit under 4 Geo. 2 (c. 28), may be previous to the expiration of the lease.

Notice or requisition to the tenant to quit at the end of his term, implies that it must be previous. It would be absurd, because impossible to be complied with, to require after the expiration of the term that the tenant shall quit at the expiration. 4 Geo. 2 (c. 28), & 11 Geo. 2 (c. 19), being in pari materia ought to have the same construction; & when, by the latter, the tenant is to be bound by his own notice to quit, that must be clearly previous. As to the second point, I doubt, that though the rent is demandable at sunset, yet it is not due, nor does the lease expire till midnight. If so the notice is a little premature. But this is only the fraction of a second; the ct. will not grant a new trial on such a frivolous objection (BLACKSTONE, J.).—CUTTING v. DERBY (1776), 2 Wm. Bl. 1075; 96 E. R. 633.

6851. Who may maintain action—Assignee of reversioner—Assignment after expiry of notice.]—Where a tenant holds over after giving notice to quit & the landlord assigns the reversion after the expiry of such notice without having taken any proceeding against such tenant, his assignee is a "landlord" within the meaning of Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18, & may maintain an action for double rent.—*NORTHCOTT v. 6857. — — No liability after quitting premises.]—A tenant who, after having given notice to quit, holds over for a year, paying double rent according to Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18, may quit at the end of such year without fresh notice.

Here the double rent has been paid during all the time the tenant has continued in possession & he is not bound to pay it after he has quit (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—BOOTH v. MACFARLANE (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 904; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 161; 109 E. R. 1022.

6858. Joinder of claim for use & occupation—For same period of occupation.]—A count in debt on Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18, for double rent of premises held over by a tenant after giving notice to quit, may be joined with a count for use & occupation of the same premises, during the same period.—*THOROTON v. 6859. Pleading—Must show terms of tenancy—& of notice to quit.]—In a cognizance by debt, as bailiff, for double rent under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18, the terms of the tenancy, and of the notice to quit, should be so shown, that the tenants power to determine the tenancy by notice to his landlord for that purpose, & the sufficiency in law, of the notice actually given, may appear. It is not sufficient to allege that the tenant "having power" to determine by such a notice as hereinafter mentioned," gave a notice to quit on a given day past.—*HUMBERSTONE v. Effect of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 1—Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 18 not repealed.]—The provision of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 1, whereby in the case of a dwelling house to which the Act applies any increase in the rent beyond the standard rent as defined by the Act is irrecoverable, does not prevent a landlord from recovering a penal sum amounting to double rent under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), where a tenant holds over after giving notice to quit.—*FLANNAGAN v. SUB-SECT. 3.—DOUBLE VALUE.

A. To What Tenancies Applicable.

See Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), s. 1.

6861. Yearly tenancy.]—A landlord declared in debt. (a) for the double value, (b) for use & occupation: the tenant pleaded nil debet to (a), & a tender of the single rent before action brought to (b), & paid the money into ct.: which plff. took out before trial & still proceeded:—Held: this was no cause of nonsuit, as upon the ground of such acceptance of the single rent being a waiver of plff.'s right to proceed for the double value; but that the case ought to have gone to the jury; & plff.'s going on with the action after taking the single rent out of ct. was evidence to show that he did not mean to waive his claim for the double value, but to take it pro tanto. It seems that though the single rent were paid into ct. on the second count, yet if plff. had not accepted it, but had recovered on the first count, debt. would have been entitled to have the money so paid in deducted out of the larger sum recovered.

If the tender of the single rent had been accepted before the action brought, it would have been a question for the jury to have determined, whether it were not a waiver of the landlord's claim to double value (ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—RYAL v. RICH (1808), 10 East, 48; 103 E. R. 693.

6867. Administratrix of landlord's executor—Before administration de bonis non—Not entitled—Notwithstanding attornment by tenant.]—The administratrix of an exor. cannot sue for the double value of lands held over after notice to quit under a demise from the testator, contrary to Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), without taking out administration de bonis non; even though the tenant has attorned to her.—TINGREY v. BROWN (1798), 1 Bos. & P. 310; 126 E. R. 921.

6868. Husband seised in right of wife—Tenancy created by husband only—Action by husband & wife jointly.]—In debt for double value under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), the declaration stated that plffs. were seised in their demesne as of freehold in right of pltf., Mrs. H., during her life, of a messuage held by deft. as tenant to said plffs. for a year, terminable on Oct. 11, 1844, the reversion thereof belonging to plffs. in right of the said Mrs. H. That plffs. on Sept. 1, gave notice in writing & demanded of deft. to deliver up possession of the said premises to plffs. on Oct. 11, which deft. refused to do. Plea, nil debet, by statute. Deft. became tenant to Mr. H., one of plffs., for one year, from Oct. 11, 1843, to Oct. 11, 1844, of a house, farm, etc., at a certain rent, & occupied the same as tenant to him for that year. The contract for this tenancy was by parol, & was made by deft. expressly with Mr. H. alone in his own right, & Mrs. H. was no party thereto. A demand & notice in writing for delivery up of the possession by deft. was made by the agent of plffs. Deft. retained possession of the premises:—Held: the two plffs. were not entitled to recover in this joint form of action, deft. not being the tenant of two plffs., & the reversion not being in the two plffs., but in the husband alone, & neither the averment of the tenancy, nor the words "to said plffs." in the allegation of the tenancy, could be rejected.—HARCOURT v. WYMAN (1849), 3 Exch. 817; 18

L. J. Ex. 453; 13 L. T. O. S. 213; 154 E. R. 1075.

6869. Lessee under future lease—To commence from determination of former term—Interest termini only.]—It is only the lessor or the person who stands in the situation of landlord, & not any one who derives title from the lessor, who can, under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), s. 1, sue a tenant for double value when there has been a holding over after the determination of the tenancy. Where, therefore, A., who had let certain premises to deft. under a letting which expired on Mar. 25, 1858, & had required deft., by notice in writing, to deliver up possession on that day, afterwards, but before the end of such tenancy, demised the premises to pltf. from such Mar. 25, 1858, & deft. held over without paying rent to or otherwise recognising pltf. as landlord:—Held: pltf. was not the proper person to sue deft. for double value under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), s. 1.—BLATCHFORD v. COLE (1858), 5 C. B. N. S. 514; 28 L. J. C. P. 140; 32 L. T. O. S. 316; 23 J. P. 166; 5 Jur. N. S. 412; 141 E. R. 208.

C. When and in What Court Maintainable.

6870. When maintainable—After recovery in ejectment.]—Where a tenant has held over possession after the expiration of his term, & the landlord recovers the possession by ejectment, he cannot afterwards maintain an action of debt under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), for the double value.

The true construction of the Act appears to be, that where there is a clear contumacy in the tenant, he shall be within the penalty of the Act; for if there is any doubt, if he had any fair ground of defence, & that defence was bond fide taken, it would be a hard construction to subject him to a penalty (LORD MACDONALD, C.B.).—WRIGHT v. 6871. — — —.]—After a landlord has recovered in ejectment against his tenant, he may maintain debt upon Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), for double the yearly value of the premises, during the time the tenant held over after the expiration of the landlord's notice to quit.

In what court maintainable—County court—Action for rent & double value—Whether dividing cause of action.]—Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, for recovery of small debts, it is not a dividing of the cause of action, within sect. 63, to levy one plaint for rent of premises, & another, under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1730 (c. 28), s. 1, to recover double value for holding the same premises after the expiration of a notice to quit. An action for double value lies in the ct. established under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. A party sued in such ct. for rent & double value, as above, cannot avail himself of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 58, to oust the ct. of jurisdiction, by alleging title to action for the recovery of double the yearly value of premises held over after notice to quit, that subsequent to the notice, & while the tenant remained in possession, an agreement was made between him & the landlord to refer to arbitr. a claim made by the tenant for improvements on the premises during the tenancy.—HATHWAY v. 6889. Time of expiration of notice—Not before expiration of term—Effect of notice for noon on last day.]—An action for double value under 4 Geo. 2 (c. 28), s. 1, for holding over after notice to quit, is not supported by a notice that the landlord requires the tenant to give up possession at twelve at noon on, etc., the day when the tenancy was determinable, at which time the landlord will attend to receive the keys & rent, & that, in the event of the tenant not so surrendering, the landlord will demand 7s. daily rent, a rate more than double the original rate of rent, till he can obtain legal possession. For the requisition to deliver up the premises at noon is premature, & insufficient as a notice to determine the tenancy. Although a notice to quit, when regular, operates also as a demand of possession under 4 Geo. 2 (c. 28), without a more specific demand:—Scmble: a notice having the above defect is not equivalent to a demand.—PAGE v. SUB-SECT. 2.—REMEDIES OF LESSOR.

A. Action for Damages.

6925. Liability of tenant—Holding over by sub-tenant.]—(1) A tenant, under a parol agreement, without any stipulation that he shall deliver up possession of the premises at the end of the term, is nevertheless bound at law to deliver up complete possession.

(2) Where, therefore, a tenant, under such an agreement, has underlet a part of the premises, & at the determination of both tenancies the undertenant holds over against the will of the tenant, the landlord can recover against the tenant as damages the value of the whole premises for the time he is kept out of possession, & the costs of ejecting the undertenant.

The landlord is entitled to recover all the loss he has sustained by not being put in possession of the entire premises at the end of the term; he is entitled to a sum equivalent to the rent which he has lost & to the expenses he has been put to in taking legal proceedings to oust the sub-tenant from a wrongful possession (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(3) The declaration contained a special count, alleging that deft. was tenant upon the terms that he should at the determination of the tenancy give up possession to pltf.; that the tenancy was duly determined, yet that deft. did not give up possession, whereby, etc. Deft. pleaded to this count, payment of 40s. into ct. The ct., being of opinion that, under the circumstances of the case, deft. could not have intended to admit that pltf. was entitled to recover more than the sum of 40s., intimated that it would, if necessary, allow such an amendment as would leave deft. at liberty to deny that there had been a breach of the contract alleged in the count.

(4) The question is where there is a tenancy & nothing is expressed as to delivering up possession at its determination whether there is an implied contract that the tenant shall not only go out of possession, but restore the possession to the landlord. . . . I think that there is such an implied contract (BLACKBURN, J.).—HENDERSON v. SQUIRE (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 170; 10 B. & S. 183; 38 L. J. Q. B. 73; 19 L. T. 601; 33 J. P. 532 17 W. R. 519.

Subsequently the landlord brought an action for the breach of covenant in not delivering up the fixtures:—Held: the tenant was not in such action estopped from denying the title of the landlord, & pltf. was not entitled to recover the full value of the fixtures, but only the actual damage he had sustained by being deprived of the possession of them for the period of time between the expiration of the tenancy & the giving of the notice by the mtgee.—*WATSON v. dismissed a complaint, on the suggestion of a third party that complainant had mortgaged his interest in the premises in question, & that an action of ejectment was pending, & refused to hear the witnesses in support of the complaint, this ct. issued a mandamus to them to hear & adjudicate.

To entitle a complainant to a mandamus to issue a warrant for giving possession under sect. 1 of above Act, the fact that the relation of landlord & tenant subsists between the parties, must be distinctly shown on affidavit. Semble: a mandamus to issue a warrant for giving possession under sect. 1 of above Act will lie, when due complaint has been made, & the proof required by sect. 1 has been given.

6955. ——— Hospital tenement—Tenant in without nomination.—B. had intruded, as alleged, into possession of a hospital tenement without the leave of the vicar & churchwardens, whose nomination was usual:—Held: as the relation of landlord & tenant did not exist between them, the vicar, etc., could not recover possession under above Act.—*BROWN v. Plea, a justification by deft., as acting in aid of a constable to whom a warrant had been issued to give possession to pltf.'s landlord, P., under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74). The plea stated the holding of pltf. under P. & the terms, that the reversion in fee was in P., notice to quit, P.'s right to possession, pltf.'s refusal to quit, notice by P. of his intention to proceed under the act, P.'s appln. to the justices, his complaint, pltf.'s non-appearance, P.'s proof to the justices of the matters of his notice & complaint, & of his right to possession; & the issuing of the warrant by the justices. Replication, de injuria:—Held: good, on special demurrer; for all the above facts necessary to constitute the jurisdiction might be traversed in that form, even assuming that Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), s. 5, does not protect persons other than peace officers & not named in the warrant, acting in aid of the constables, & would, therefore, not limit the effect of the traverse.—*EDMUNDS v. The question does not turn upon above Act, for it is not shown that the party executing the warrant was a constable of the district. Defts. must make out that they were entitled to take possession under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), & they have failed to do so (PARKE, B.).—*JONES v. (d) Appeals.

6965. Whether appeal lies—From finding of fact by magistrate.—On an application for a warrant under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), the magistrates found as a fact that the person who applied for a warrant was the duly authorised agent of the landlord, & made an order that unless the tenant went out in ten days a warrant would issue. On an application for a mandamus to the magistrate to state a case:—Held: the finding of the magistrate could not be questioned, but as to the issue of the warrant the practice was wrong, & the warrant could not be enforced before twenty-one days after its issue, & its issue could not be postponed for ten days on condition that the tenant gave up the premises, but since in this case no warrant had been issued & the tenant had left the premises, the mandamus would not be granted.—*R. v. See, generally, TRESPASS.

6968. Action for damages—For irregularity in proceedings—Proof of special damage.]—A landlord is not liable in trespass for ejecting a tenant where the tenancy has expired, although he may have taken proceedings against him under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74).

In an action against a landlord for irregularity in the mode of proceeding to obtain possession of premises under Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), where the landlord, at the time of applying for the justices' warrant under that Act, was entitled to the possession of the premises, there must be special damage arising from the irregularity complained of.

A declaration, setting out an informal notice of the landlord's intention to apply to the justices for a warrant to obtain possession under the Act, & alleging the issuing & execution of such warrant, & that under the authority of such proceedings pltf. was forcibly expelled from the dwelling-house of which he was tenant, does not sufficiently show special damage arising from the informality of the notice. Semble: the notice required by the Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), to be served on the person neglecting to give up possession must state that the person giving such notice is "the owner" or the agent for "the owner," & must also state the place at which the application to the justices is to be made.

The party aggrieved may, however, according to Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), s. 6, bring an action on the case for the irregularity, in which the damage alleged to be sustained is to be specially laid (CRESSWELL, J.).—DELANEY v. FOX (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 166; 26 L. J. C. P. 5; 21 J. P. 197; 2 Jur. N. S. 1233; 5 W. R. 148; 140 E. R. 70; subsequent proceedings (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 768.

6969. Jurisdiction—Whether right of re-entry condition precedent—Tenant's whereabouts unknown—Servant on premises.]—Where a tenant ceased to reside on the premises for several months, & left them without any furniture, or sufficient other property to answer the year's rent:—Held: (1) the landlord might properly proceed under Distress for Rent Act, 1837 (c. 19), s. 16, to recover the possession, although he knew where the tenant then was, & although the justices found a servant of the tenant on the premises when they first went to view the same; & (2) it is not necessary to state, in the record of the magistrate's proceedings, that the landlord had a right of re-entry, although such a right must exist in order to entitle the party to proceed under this stat.—*Ex p. 6972. — Premises must be deserted—Tenant seen on premises.—Two magistrates having, at the request of a landlord under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 16, proceeded to view a dwelling-house, deserted & unoccupied, & at the second view having perceived the tenant looking out of the widow, when, however, he did not pay the rent in arrear, the justices refused to put the landlord into possession:—Held: a mandamus would not lie to the justices to compel them to deliver possession.—FIELDER v. WINCHESTER JJ. (1840), 4 Jur. 507.

6973. — Whether lost—Judgment recovered for same rent—Judgment unsatisfied.—Where a landlord has recovered judgment for half a year's rent which remains unsatisfied, if the tenant desert the house leaving no sufficient distress in it, it is still open to the landlord to put the justices in motion under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), & to recover possession of the house.

Where justices are called on to act under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), in the case of a house, the doors & windows of which are locked & closed, they need not enter by breaking open the doors; but they may proceed though they only look into one room through the shutters, & find that empty; it being open to the tenant on appeal to the justices of the assize to rebut the inference from that fact, by showing that there was sufficient distress in other parts of the house.—Re EMMETT (1850), 4 New Mag. Cas. 164; 16 L. T. O. S. 131; 14 J. P. 530.

6974. What amounts to desertion—Question for justices.]—What is a desertion of premises under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19); the justices are the proper judges of the fact of desertion or non-desertion.—Ex p. ROBERTS (1839), 3 J. P. 290.

6975. — Servant of tenant on premises.]—Ex p. PILTON, No. 6969, ante.

(b) Practice.

6976. Information—Whether on oath.]—Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), s. 16, does not require that the magistrates, giving possession of deserted premises should act on information given to them on oath. If the record of their proceedings states sufficient circumstances to show, that they followed all the requisites of the Act, then it is evidence of itself, & is an answer to any action that may be brought against them.

In trespass against two magistrates for turning a tenant out of possession under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), a record of the proceedings, drawn up conformably to the statute, was given in evidence:—Held: it was a complete defence to the action, though they did not appear to have acted on the oath of the landlord.—BASTEN v. CAREW (1825), 3 B. & C. 649; 5 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 558; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 563; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 111; 107 E. R. 874.

The order of the judges was not directed to any person:—Held: mandamus could not issue commanding the two justices to make restitution.—R. v. TRAILL (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 761; Arn. & H. 78; 4 Per. & Dav. 325; 10 L. J. M. C. 57; 4 J. P. 778; 113 E. R. 1002.

6994. — After order for possession under County Courts Act, 1856 (c. 108)—Whether equivalent to ejectment.]—In an action of trespass for mesne profits by a landlord against a sub-tenant, after a judgment of a county ct. on a plaint between the same parties, ordering possession of tenements to be delivered up on a certain day, & which order was duly complied with by deft., pleaded "not guilty" only:—Held: (1) the judgment of a county ct., ordering possession of tenements to be given up, under above Act, sect. 50, on a plaint by the landlord against a sub-tenant, is not analogous to an action of ejectment, & therefore is not conclusive by way of estoppel in a subsequent action of trespass for the mesne profits by same pltf. against same deft.; & on a plea of "not guilty" in such action, pltf.'s title is not admitted, & in order to recover he is bound, on the issue raised thereby, to prove the trespass; & when a deft. has, both in letter & in spirit, obeyed the order of a county ct. to deliver possession, retaining possession so long only as the order warranted, he cannot be treated as a trespasser; & (2) under above Act, sect. 51, a landlord proceeding against his own tenant under sect. 50, is entitled to add a claim either for rent or mesne profits or both, but he has no right to insert a claim for mesne profits when he is proceeding under the above sect. not against his own tenant, but against a stranger or the person in possession under the tenant.—*CAMPBELL v. 7011. ——— Adjoining land in occupation of third party.]—A tenant taking in land adjacent to his own, by encroachment, must, as between himself & the landlord, be deemed, prima facie, to take it as part of the demised land: but that presumption will not prevail for the landlord's benefit against third persons. The landlord of A. & B., adjacent closes, mortgaged them, & afterwards demised A. The tenant of A. built upon B. without leave of the landlord, who, on permission being asked, refused it, saying he had granted rights over B to occupier of other adjoining lands. The tenant held both A. & B. for twenty years, paying rent to the landlord under the demise of A., but not expressly in respect of B.:—Held: on this evidence, he might insist, as against the landlord, on a twenty years' occupation of B. within Real Property Limitation Act, 1853 (c. 27), ss. 2 & 3.—DOE d. The landlord during the term brought an action for an injunction & damages for trespass:—Held: the action would not lie. The tenant must be deemed to have occupied the piece of ground as part of the holding, & he was entitled so to occupy it during the remainder of his lease.—TABOR v. GODFREY (1895), 64 L. J. Q. These plots were situate on the mainland, & were something between half a mile & a mile from the island demised by E. They were inclosed land. There was no evidence that they were occupied by E. as an addition to his holding under H. & no rent was paid in respect of them. After more than twelve years had elapsed, when E.'s tenancy of the island had determined H. brought an action against E.'s successor in title to obtain possession of the two plots. The county ct. judge held that there was a presumption that E. had occupied them as H.'s tenant, & in the absence of evidence to rebut this presumption H. was entitled to recover possession:—Held: there was no such presumption. Seem: the presumption that a tenant who occupies more land than is demised to him, occupies it for the benefit of his landlord is confined to encroachment on waste.—HASTINGS (LORD) v. In 1846 both pieces & certain other lands of the lessee were assigned by him to trustees to hold in trust for the lessee for life, & thereafter as to the foundry upon one set of trusts, & as to the residue upon another set of trusts. From some date prior to 1843, & down to the death of the lessee in 1858, two portions of the stable property were occupied by the lessee as part of & in connection with the business carried on by him on the foundry property. Mar. 1856, the foundry lease, & in Aug. 1856, the stable lease, were renewed, new leases on the same terms for ninety-nine years or three lives being granted to the trustees of the settlement. In July, 1890, a new lease of the foundry was granted to the then cestui que trust occupying the foundry & the two portions of the stable property. This lease was subsequently sold to defts. In 1894 a new lease of the stable was granted to the trustees, which was again renewed in 1898. This renewed lease was in 1901 sold to plffs., who on July 18, 1901, commenced this action, claiming to recover from defts. the two portions of the stable property which had been occupied as part of the foundry property:—Held: (1) plff.'s claim was not barred; at the date of the stable lease of Aug. 1856, the possession in law of the disputed portions was in the trustees so as to enable them to surrender them to the lessor & to obtain a regrant from him, & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run against the lessor in 1856, but only in 1894, on the determination of the stable lease of Aug. 1856; the occupiers of the disputed portions were persons claiming through a trustee within Stat. Limitations, 1833 (c. 27), s. 25, & the statute, therefore, did not run in their favour; (2) assuming that the statute began to run in 1856 against the lessor, the disputed portions became an accretion to the property comprised in the foundry lease, & on the determination & surrender of that lease in July, 1890, i.e., within twelve years of the commencement of the action, the lessor acquired a new right of possession, there being nothing to rebut the presumption that the encroachment enured for the benefit of the lessor.—*EAST STONEHOUSE URBAN COUNCIL v. 7018. Accretion—By reclamation under statutory powers—For whose benefit operating.]—A. entered into articles of agreement for leases of ninety-nine years from Lady Day, 1768, of certain building land abutting on the Thames with the trustees of D., who were tenants in fee. Soon afterwards by a local Act, A. & others were empowered to embank the Thames, & win part of the bed of it; & sect. 2 of the local Act enacted that the ground & soil of the river to be enclosed & embanked in the front of each house should vest in the owner of the house according to his respective estate, trust, or interest. A certain portion of the bed of the river, fronting the land on which he had built houses under his leases, was reclaimed by A. pursuant to the statute, & he occupied it more than twenty years before Lady Day, 1867. No lease of the reclaimed land was ever executed either by the trustees of by A. The leases, if they had been granted, would have expired at Lady Day, 1867. No rent was ever paid by A. in respect of the reclaimed land:—Held: by sect. 2 of the local Act the fee simple of the reclaimed land was vested in the trustees; & their representatives were not barred by Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), & were entitled to the reclaimed land at Lady Day, 1867.—*DRUMMOND v. Part XXVII.—Rent and Mortgage Restriction Acts.

NOTE.—The Acts now in force in England are Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), Rent Restrictions (Notices of Increase) Act, 1923 (c. 13), Rent & Mortgage Interest Restrictions Act, 1923 (c. 32), Prevention of Eviction Act, 1924 (c. 18), & Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions Continuation) Act, 1925 (c. 32), referred to in this Part as the 1920, 1923 (Notices of Increase), 1923, 1924 & 1925 Acts respectively. In considering the cases regard must be had to their date, the Act under which they were decided, & the effect of the subsequent Acts.

7020. Application to rent—Not to particular tenancies.]—On Aug. 3, 1914, the rent of certain premises let by the respondent to a weekly tenant was 10s. In Nov. 1917, the property was let to a new tenant at 20s. a week, with permission to sub-let apartments. The increased rent fell into arrear, & on an application by the landlord the county ct. judge granted leave to distrain, holding that Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), did not apply, as a new tenant had come in, & the property was not now let as a dwelling-house, but as a lodging-house:—Held: the Act was not limited to particular tenancies, but referred to the rent of the house generally, & the contention that an increase of rent to a new tenant was not an increase to which the Act applied could not be supported; the Act applied to houses, not to persons, operating in rem not in personam, & stereotyped the rent, so that where, as in the present case, the rent had been increased above the standard rent the increase was irrecoverable.—*KING v. See, also, Sect. 2, sub-sect. 2, post.

7029. Tenancy at sufferance—After expiry of notice to quit.]—A dwelling-house was let at a rental of £50 a year for three years from Mar. 25, 1912. At the end of the term the tenant continued on a yearly tenancy at the same rent; but this tenancy was determined by a notice to quit given by the landlord, which expired on Mar. 25, 1919. Negotiations were proceeded with for a new tenancy at £60 a year, the tenant still continuing in possession. These negotiations had not resulted in any arrangement when, on Apr. 2, 1919, the Increase of Rent & Mortgage (Restrictions) Act, 1919 (c. 7) was passed & came into operation. The tenant then claimed that he was within the protection of the new Act. The landlord issued a writ to recover possession:—Held: the landlord was not entitled to recover possession of the premises & the tenant was entitled to the protection of Increase of Rent & Mortgage (Restrictions) Act, 1919 (c. 7), he being a person to whom the premises had been let within sect. 4 & at the time when the writ was issued, not a trespasser, but a tenant at sufferance.—DOBSON v. RICHARDS (1919), 63 Sol. Jo. 663, N. P.

7032. Tenant holding over as statutory tenant—Premises not within earlier Acts.]—Two rooms to which the provisions of 1920 Act applied were let to pltf. on a quarterly tenancy to be surrendered four clear days before the quarter day for which any notice to quit might be given. Pltf. received notice to quit "on June 24 next or at the expiration of the year of your tenancy which shall expire next after the end of a half year from the delivery of this notice." Pltf. did not yield up the premises but remained in possession against the will of the landlords until the passing of the 1920 Act. Then the landlords entered the premises & retook possession:—Held: although the agreement of tenancy had come to an end by the notice to quit, the rooms were "let" within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2), & pltf. was a tenant who by virtue of the provisions of the Act retained possession within s. 15 (1), & the landlords could not lawfully disturb him in his possession.—REMON v. 7036. — Attornment of mortgagee by sub-demise.]—Pltf. in 1920 acquired the lease of a dwelling-house, which had an unexpired term of thirty-one years. In 1921 she mortgaged her leasehold interest in the house by a sub-demise which contained an attornment clause & attorned tenant to the mtgee. at a nominal rent of a peppercorn. The mtgee. did not enter into possession under the mtge. Pltf. resided in the house & let a portion of it. In Dec. 1923, after the passing of 1923 Act, pltf. let a room in the house to deft. Subsequently pltf. gave deft. notice to quit, & claimed to recover possession of the room, alleging that the Rent Restrictions Acts had ceased to apply to the house by virtue of 1923 Act, s. 2 (1). Deft. contended that as pltf. had attorned tenant to the mtgee. she had ceased to be a landlord & had become a tenant of the house, & that consequently the Rent Restrictions Acts still applied to the house by virtue of the proviso to 1923 Act, s. 2 (1):—Held: (1) as the rent reserved under the attornment clause in the mtge., namely, a peppercorn, was less than two-thirds of the ratable value of the house, the tenancy created by the attornment must under 1920 Act, s. 12 (7) be regarded for the purpose of the Rent Restrictions Acts as if it had never existed, & therefore under 1923 Act, s. 2 (1) the Rent Restrictions Acts ceased to apply to the house; (2) the holder of a long lease of which a substantial portion remains unexpired is for the purpose of 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), in the position of a landlord & not of a tenant.—JENKINSON v. WRIGHT, [1924] 2 K. B. 645; 94 L. J. K. B. 17; 132 L. T. 157; 40 T. L. R. 858; 60 Sol. Jo. 74, D. C.

7037. — Part of premises sub-let after 1923 Act.]—Deft. was the holder of a lease for ninety-nine years, expiring in 1940, of a dwelling-house at a ground rent of £10 a year. In Jan. 1925, she was in possession of the whole house, the standard rent of which was £60; & in Feb., 1925, she let an unfurnished room therein, together with part use of the scullery, to pltf. at a weekly rent of 16s. Deft. having levied a distress on pltf.'s goods for unpaid rent at this rate, pltf. brought an action for damages, alleging that on an apportionment the rent of 16s. was more than he was liable to pay under the Rent Restriction Acts:—Held: (1) deft. was the "landlord" of the house within 1923 Act, s. 2 (1); (2) 1920 Act

a. Occupation by servant of landlord—Part remuneration for services.]—Where a servant had possession of a dwelling-house belonging to his employer as part of the remuneration for his services, he is not entitled, on the termination of his contract of service, to the benefit of the restrictions on a landlord's right to recover possession or to eject a tenant, imposed by 1920 Act.—BUTE v. PRENDERLEITH, [1921] S. C. 281.—SCOT.

ceased to apply to the room let to pltf.; & the distress for rent at 10s. a week was therefore lawful.—FINEY v. GOUGOLTZ, [1926] 2 K. B. 322; 95 L. J. K. B. 770; 42 T. L. R. 501; 70 Sol. Jo. 758, D. C.

7038. Two flats let at one entire rent—Rent exceeding statutory limit—Letting not divisible.]—Where there is one letting of two flats at one entire rent, the letting is not divisible so as to bring each of the flats within the limit of rent below which dwelling-houses are brought within the Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Acts.—RIDER v. ROLLIT (1920), 36 T. L. R. 687; 84 J. P. Jo. 267.

7039. Continuation of application of Acts—Continued existence of dwelling-house.]—PHILLIPS v. BARNETT, No. 7132, post.

7040. — Sub-letting furnished of unfurnished house—Destruction of identity.]—(1) The word “let” in par. (i) of the proviso to 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) means “let to the occupying tenant,” & therefore where a landlord let a house unfurnished to a tenant who let it to a sub-tenant furnished, the former could not on an application by the landlord for possession claim the protection of the statute.

(2) The furnishing & letting furnished of a dwelling-house which had previously been let unfurnished is a sufficient destruction of its identity, within the principle of Phillips v. Barnett, No. 7132, post, to exclude the application of 1920 Act, s. 12 (6).—PROUT v. HUNTER, [1924] 2 K. B. 736; 93 L. J. K. B. 993; 132 L. T. 193; 40 T. L. R. 868; 69 Sol. Jo. 49; 22 L. G. 7041. — Part of flat sub-let by statutory tenant.]—An entire house within the protection of the Rent Restriction Acts was let to a tenant, who on the expiration of his lease remained in possession as a statutory tenant. On two occasions he sub-let the entire house furnished, but himself resumed possession after each sub-letting. On a later occasion he sub-let two rooms furnished, & while these rooms remained so sub-let, the landlords brought an action claiming possession of the entire house, on the grounds that (1) the earlier sub-lettings furnished of the entire house & (2) the later sub-letting furnished of the two rooms both put the house outside the protection of the Rent Restrictions Acts:—Held: the landlords were not entitled to succeed as (1) in the case of the earlier sub-lettings, the period during which the house was sub-let furnished had expired, & the statutory tenant had resumed possession before the action was brought; & (2) in the case of the later sub-letting, part only of the house was sub-let furnished & the landlords had claimed possession of the whole.—*LESLIE & Co. v. A. Dwelling-House.

(a) In General.

See 1920 Act, s. 12 (2).

7042. Question of fact—Main purpose of building.]—Deft. took a garage with living rooms above, putting his motor cars in the garage, & allowing his chauffeur & family to live in the rooms above, but not as a tenant. The agreement contained certain terms appropriate to a dwelling-house. The county ct. judge held that the premises were let for a double purpose, that of a garage & that of a dwelling-house, & that deft. occupied the latter by his chauffeur, & that he was therefore entitled to the protection of the Increase of Rent, etc. (Restrictions) Acts, as the premises were let as a “separate dwelling,” & as there was no evidence of alternative occupation refused to make an order for possession:—Held: the question was one of fact, & there was evidence to support the judge’s finding.—CALLAGHAN v. BRISTOWE (1920), 89 L. J. K. B. 817; 123 L. T. 622; 84 J. P. 250; 36 T. L. R. 841; 18 L. G. R. 442, D. C.

7043. — — —.]—1920 Act applies if premises are used as a dwelling-house, notwithstanding the fact that part of them is used for the purposes of a shop. 7045. — Part of a house—Effect of 1920 Act.]—Letting is not a necessary condition for premises to be protected by above Act.

The words “let as a separate dwelling” in above Act, s. 12 (2), only qualify the words “part of a house” & do not qualify the word “house” where the Act is made to apply to “a house or part of a house let as a separate dwelling.”

Although, prima facie, similar words in Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97) were not applicable only to part of a dwelling-house yet the above Act is an amending as well as a consolidating Act & those ambiguous words in the earlier Act were removed. Moreover the title of the Act shows that it was intended to protect mtgrs. as well as tenants.—WOODFIELD v. BOND (No. 1) (1921), 127 L. T. 204; 66 Sol. Jo. (W. R.) 14.

7049. Dwelling house in "actual possession" of landlord—Distinguished from notional possession.]—The provision of 1923 Act, s. 2 (3), which requires "actual possession" on the part of the landlord to take a dwelling-house out of the scope of the Rent Acts, is directed against a "notional" coming into possession by the landlord during the interval between the end of an old tenancy & the commencement of a new one. What amounts to "actual possession" is a question of fact for the county ct. judge.—HALL v. ROGERS (1925), 133 L. T. 44; 41 T. L. R. 341; 69 Sol. Jo. 397; 23 L. G. R. 550, D. C.

(2) Where an outgoing tenant has vacated & locked up the premises that he occupied, & has handed the key to the landlords, who have retained it for a considerable time before letting the premises to a fresh tenant, there has been "actual possession" by the landlords within 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), (3).—*JEWISH MATERNITY HOME (TRUSTEES) v. 7052. Premises ceasing to be used as dwelling-house—What amounts to.]—Where premises have been let as a dwelling-house & are protected by the Rent Acts a subsequent partial user as business premises will not take them out of the protection of the Acts. If a tenant can by mere user take premises out of the protection of the Acts such user must be unequivocal & complete.

Semble: where there is a complete change of user, so that the user of the premises as a dwelling-house is abandoned & the whole premises used for business purposes, the premises will lose the protection of the Acts.—HYMAN v. STEWARD, [1925] 2 K. B. 702; 94 L. J. K. B. 715; 133 L. T. 315; 41 T. L. R. 501; 69 Sol. Jo. 677; 23 L. G. R. 556, D. C.

7055. Shop.]—By an agreement dated Sept. 11, 1916, certain premises, which consisted of a shop & bakehouse, with ovens & other fixtures on the ground floor, & two floors of residential rooms above, were let for three years from Aug. 25, 1916, at an annual rent of £52 payable weekly, the tenant agreeing to keep in repair the interior of the premises with the ovens & fixtures, & to yield up the premises with the fixtures at the expiration of the tenancy, & to use the shop as a baker's & confectioner's shop only, the lessor agreeing to repair the outside & to pay the rates & taxes.

By a supplemental document of even date the tenant agreed, in consideration of the tenancy agreement & of the goodwill of the baker's business & of the use of the landlord's fixtures, to pay during the term a further sum of £1 weekly to be recoverable as rent in arrear. On the expiration of the tenancy the tenant remained in possession, claiming the benefit of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Acts, 1915 & 1919. The lessor threatened to take possession of & remove the fixtures, claiming that the Acts did not apply to the shop, bakehouse & fixtures, & that the rent was in excess of the limit contained in the Acts. The tenant applied for an injunction to restrain him:—Held: (1) the supplemental agreement did not constitute a demise of the business premises & the fixtures at an additional yearly rent of £52, so as to make the total yearly rent £104 & take the premises outside the limit of £70, to which the Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions Amendment) Act, 1919 (c. 7) applied; (2) the dwelling-house & the business premises together fell within the provisions of the Acts.

(3) Where a dwelling-house & business premises had been demised together there was no machinery which enabled the ct. to give the lessor possession of the business premises & to apportion the rent:—Held: the fixtures formed part of the business premises & came within the provisions of the Acts.—*ELLEN v. Deft., with his wife & family, occupied the premises under the agreements, he carrying on thereon his business. The standard rent of the premises was £40. In an action by ptlf., after expiration of the agreements, for recovery of possession, it was contended on his behalf that the premises were used for "business or trade purposes" within 1920 Act, s. 13 (1) & as that sect. had expired before the termination of the tenancy ptlf. was entitled to recover:—Held: the premises were a dwelling-house within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) & consequently that deft. was entitled to the protection given by the statute.—COHEN v. BENJAMIN (1922), 89 T. L. R. 10; 67 Sol. Jo. 147.

7058. Sleeping accommodation for hotel staff.]—Certain premises had been let on lease for a term of years to deft. D. During the currency of that lease, a portion of the premises was let on agreement by D.'s assignee to deft. hotel co. for three years. One of the terms of that agreement was that the tenants were not to carry on any business on the premises "or permit the same to be occupied or used in any other way than as sleeping apartments for their staff." Proceedings for the recovery of possession of the premises comprised in the original lease having been instituted by ptlfs. on the ground of the forfeiture of that lease by reason of a breach of covenant to keep in repair, the hotel co. claimed that they were entitled to

b. Temperance hotel.]—Premises were let to deft. to carry on the business of a temperance hotel; deft., as proprietress of the hotel, resided there:—Held: the premises came within 1920 Act, s. 13, on the ground that the hotel trading was a business of such a nature that the premises in which it was conducted never lost the character of a dwelling-house.—BURNS v. RADCLIFFE, [1923] 2 I. R. 158.—IR.

the protection of the Act, & in the alternative they counterclaimed for relief against forfeiture. The official referee held that the Act had at the date of the trial ceased to apply to the premises occupied by the hotel co. inasmuch as they were using them as business premises, & ordered them to pay their own costs. The hotel co. appealed:—Held: the premises occupied by the hotel co. being used by them as sleeping apartments for their staff constituted a dwelling-house to which the Act applied, & the official referee was therefore wrong in law in depriving them of their costs.—RICHMOND (DUKE) v. DEWAR & CADOGAN HOTEL CO., LTD. (1921), 38 T. L. R. 151, D. C.

7060. Boarding-house.—A flat, the standard rent of which was £42, was let by pltf. to deft. in 1919 at a rent of £109 4s. Deft. used the flat partly for taking in boarders, but she reserved & used certain rooms for her own residence. Subsequently deft. refused to pay rent at the rate of £109 4s., & on being sued she alleged that she was not liable for rent at that rate, which was in excess of the standard rent, & she counterclaimed the excess she had paid:—Held: (1) the premises came within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (ii); (2) deft. was not liable to pay rent in excess of the standard rent; (3) she was entitled to recover the excess she had actually paid over the standard rent.—COLLS v. PARNHAM, [1922] 1 K. B. 325; 91 L. J. K. B. 335; 126 L. T. 480; 20 L. G. R. 97, D. C.

7061. Subsequent letting in 1919 solely as business premises—Whether within 1920 Act.—Premises which were occupied from 1914 till 1919 partly as business premises & partly as a dwelling-house, were in 1919 let to deft. solely as business premises:—Held: the premises were not within the protection of 1920 Act.—WILLIAMS v. PERRY, [1924] 1 K. B. 936; 93 L. J. K. B. 521; 131 L. T. 471; 40 T. L. R. 539; 68 Sol. Jo. 617; 22 L. G. R. 471, D. C.

7062. Separate letting of part as business premises.—The landlord of premises, which consisted of a shop on the ground floor with a dwelling-house above, let both portions, when they became vacant in 1923, to a tenant, but under separate lettings. As regards rent the premises came within the scope of 1920 Act:—Held: the shop portion of the premises while so let separately was not within the protection of the Act.—PHILLIPS v. HALLAHAN, [1925] 1 K. B. 756; 94 L. J. K. B. 694; 133 L. T. 236; 41 T. L. R. 407; 69 Sol. Jo. 444; 23 L. G. R. 440, D. C.

7063. —[—]—Certain premises were leased in 1865 for a term expiring on Dec. 25, 1923, under the description of "all that piece of ground . . . with the warehouse thereon erected." Before 1913 the lessee's interest became vested in A. & R., who on Nov. 17, 1913, sublet the premises to deft. under the description of "all that piece of ground . . . with the coachhouse & stable thereof erected" for a period expiring Dec. 22, 1923. There was no evidence when the premises were converted from a warehouse into a coachhouse & stable, but before the sub-lease to deft. the premises had been used as a coachhouse & stable with living rooms for the coachman on the upper floor. Deft. converted the premises into a garage with living rooms over, the living rooms having a separate & independent entrance, & occupied them by keeping cars in the garage & by his chauffeur using the living rooms not as tenant but as servant. On Sept. 1, 1922, deft. let the living rooms to W. as a dwelling-house, but continued in occupation of the garage. In July, 1924, after the expiration of the head lease & the sub-lease to deft. the freeholders leased the premises to pltf., who brought an action against deft. for the possession of the whole of the premises or alternatively for possession of the garage:—Held: (1) pltf. was not entitled to an order for possession of the living rooms, as they were in the occupation of a tenant to whom they had been validly sub-let by deft. & who was holding over & was protected by 1920 Act, s. 5 (1). The fact that deft. was not himself in actual possession of the premises as a dwelling-house did not prevent him from claiming the benefit of the Rent Restriction Acts, as the claim was for actual possession, & an order for possession would be executed against whoever was on the premises; (2) pltf. was entitled to an order for possession of the garage, as that portion of the premises had been separated from the portion of the premises let off as a separate dwelling-house, & at the time the action for possession was brought was being used solely for business purposes, & therefore not within the definition of a dwelling-house to which the Act applied.—*GIDDEN v. NOTE.—1920 Act, s. 13 ceased to be in force on June 24, 1921.

B. Dwelling-House Let at Rent Including Attendance.

See 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i); 1923 Act, s. 10.

7068. "Let"—Let to occupying tenant.—PROUT v. HUNTER, No. 7040, ante.

7069. Whether payment for attendance included in rent—Intention of parties.—By 1920 Act, s. 12 (2), the Act applies "to a house or part of a house let as a separate dwelling, where either the annual amount of the standard rent or the ratable value does not exceed—(a) in the Metropolitan Police District including therein the City of London £105." Proviso (i) of the sect. enacts that the "Act shall not, save as otherwise expressly provided, apply to a dwelling-house bonâ fide let at a rent which includes payments in respect of board, & attendance, or use of furniture." A tenant covenanted to pay the yearly rent of £100 for a flat in a block, "&, moreover, to pay 10s.

weekly throughout the tenancy for services at the times & in manner herein set out." Besides this flat there were other flats in the same block, where certain of the tenants covenanted to pay an inclusive rent for service:—Held: (1) under the particular agreement, the parties had not purported to make the 10s. per week rent or part of rent, & had not done so, although payments for attendance might in certain cases form part of the rent within the meaning of the Act; (2) inasmuch as the rent was not inclusive, but exclusive, of the stipulated payments for attendance, the proviso in sect. 12 (2) did not apply. The rent was therefore under the limit of £105.—WOOD v. WALLACE (1920), 90 L. J. K. B. 319; 124 L. T. 539; 37 T. L. R. 147; 65 Sol. Jo. 135; 84 J. P. Jo. 517.

7070. — Payment referred to as additional rent.—A flat of a ratable value of less than £105 on Aug. 3, 1914, was let at a yearly rental of £170, with an additional rent of £30 to include certain attendance & the "use of certain articles of furniture, carpets, etc., as arranged & as used heretofore." The flat was not completely furnished, but the tenant had the use of certain articles of furniture. In an action for recovery of possession after notice to quit:—Held: the rental did not include payments in respect of attendance, nor for use of furniture; & therefore the Act applied & recovery of possession must be refused.—HOCKER v. SOLOMON (1921), 91 L. J. Ch. 8; 127 L. T. 144.

Annotations:—Refd. Wilkes v. Goodwin, [1923] 2 K. B. 86. Wood v. Carwardine, [1923] 2 K. B. 185.

7071. — Payments for premises & attendance separately charged—Payable quarterly in one payment—Referred to as rent.—Pltf. let a dwelling-house to deft. for three years at a rent of £74 4s. a year & 5s. a week for attendance. Both amounts were to be paid quarterly in one payment, & the agreement referred to the payment as "rent to include attendance." In an action to recover possession after the termination of the tenancy:—Held: as the rent included attendance the premises were not protected by 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i), as amended by 1923 Act, s. 10 (1), & pltf. was entitled to succeed.—NADLER v. WILSON (1924), 40 T. L. R. 639; 68 Sol. Jo. 772.

— "Standard rent."—See No. 7121, post.

7072. What amounts to "attendance"—Carrying coals to flat—& removal of refuse.—Pltf. let a flat to deft., with use of fixtures & of hall & common staircase at a certain rent. Pltf. covenanted (inter alia) to remove such refuse from the flat as could not be burnt, & to carry to the flat the lessee's coals daily, "free of charge":—Held: these services were part of the consideration for the rent, & constituted "attendance" within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i), & consequently, the Act did not apply.—NYE v. DAVIS, [1922] 2 K. B. 56; 91 L. J. K. B. 545; 126 L. T. 537; 20 L. G. R. 483, D. C.

7073. ——Held: the carrying of coals & the removal of refuse constituted "attendance" within the meaning of the Acts, & by the agreement of letting there was a well-recognised service which the tenant had a right to call upon the caretaker to perform, which was not negligible, & therefore the Acts did not apply.—DICK v. DUNCAN (1923), 92 L. J. Ch. 320; 67 Sol. Jo. 384.

Annotation:—Consd. Wood v. Carwardine, [1923] 2 K. B. 185.

7074. — Keeping common hall & stairway cleaned.—A flat was let to a tenant "together with use of, jointly with other tenants of the premises, the main entrance door hall & staircase of the premises, . . . together with right of access to & from the basement of the premises;" & the landlord agreed (inter alia) "to keep the hall & staircase properly cleaned":—Held: the agreement to keep the hall & staircase properly cleaned did not constitute "attendance" within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i), & consequently the flat was not outside the scope of the Act.—KING v. MILLEN, [1922] 2 K. B. 647; 92 L. J. K. B. 123; 128 L. T. 280; 67 Sol. Jo. 48; 20 L. G. R. 715, D. C.

7075. — Supply of hot water.—In the case of a flat:—Held: the supply of hot water through a pipe does not constitute attendance within the sect., & the caretaker's reception of letters, messages, & parcels for the tenant & their delivery by the caretaker to the tenant, though they might in a sense be attendance, nevertheless must be disregarded under the rule de minimis non curat lex, where these matters are only a trivial part of the caretaker's duties.—WOOD v. CARWARDINE, [1923] 2 K. B. 185; 129 L. T. 314; 39 T. L. R. 300; 21 L. G. R. 306; sub nom. CARWARDINE v. WOOD, 92 L. J. K. B. 593.

7079. Whether payment for use of furniture included in rent—Payment referred to as additional rent.—HOCKER v. SOLOMON, No. 7070, ante.

7080. — Rent to include use of linoleum.—In Oct. 1920, the owner of a dwelling-house at Brighton, of which the standard rent was £55, let a portion of it as a maisonette to a tenant at a rent of £80 per annum "to include the use of the linoleum" with which certain of the floors were covered. It was conceded that the payment for the use of the linoleum was included in the rent bond fide & not with the object of evading the Act. On an application by the tenant to have the standard rent apportioned:—Held: unless the linoleum was so trifling in quantity or value as to be negligible, which was a question of fact for the county ct. judge, its use was sufficient to satisfy the words "use of furniture" in the proviso, & there was no jurisdiction to apportion the rent. Qu.: whether, where furniture is let with a house, the fact that the tenancy agreement provides for a separate payment for the use of the furniture, instead of a lump sum to include rent & furniture, negatives the house being "let at a rent which includes payment in respect of . . . use of furniture" within the meaning of the above proviso.—WILKES v. GOODWIN, [1923] 2 K. B.

7081. — Proof of substantial charge required.—In order to exclude a dwelling-house from the provisions of 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i), as to use of furniture the landlord must show that there was included in the letting a substantial charge for a quantity of furniture sufficiently large to exclude any reasonable application of the rule de minimis non curat lex.—RIMMER v. CARSON (1923), 39 T. L. R. 349.

7082. What amounts to "furniture"—Must be substantial quantity.—The words "use of furniture" in 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i), mean something substantial in the way of furniture. A piece of fitted linoleum by itself does not come within the meaning of the phrase. Where, therefore, a dwelling-house is let at a rent which includes payment for the use of such a piece of linoleum, the protection of the Act is not thereby excluded.—CRANE v. COX (1923), 92 L. J. K. B. 544; 128 L. T. 831; 39 T. L. R. 204; 67 Sol. Jo. 335; 21 L. G. R. 226, D. C.

7085. Vacant plots let with cottage—Whether garden "within curtilage of dwelling-house"—Under Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 2 (2).—Pltf. let to deft. a small cottage in a road in which, under a building scheme, a number of similar cottages were to be built, with a small piece of ground behind each cottage for a garden. On one side of the cottage occupied by deft. several of the intended cottages were not built, & there were thus a number of vacant plots forming a piece of open ground, about one-fifth of an acre in extent, adjoining the cottage, & included in the same letting, & surrounded by a continuous fence, the whole forming one garden belonging to the cottage:—Held: the words in above sub-sect. applied to premises domestically appurtenant to the house, & the adjoining land was therefore within the purview of those words, & the tenant was entitled to the protection of the Act.—SCOTT v. AUSTIN (1919), 89 L. J. K. B. 1048; 122 L. T. 235.

7086. "Site" of house let with land—Whether outbuildings, stables & garden included.—(1) The landlord let to the tenant, deft., a dwelling-house, together with a stable, buildings, a garden, & a meadow, in one letting. Pltf., in 1919, purchased the premises freehold, & served on deft. notice to quit the premises in Dec. 1919. Deft. refused to comply with the notice, & pltf. brought an action of ejectment in the county ct. This action was heard before 1920 Act was passed &, in view of the compromise character of the letting, deft. could not claim the protection of the Increase of Rent Restriction Acts in force, & was, therefore, unable to resist pltf.'s claim for possession. He accordingly consented to an order for possession of the premises comprised in his holding, to be given on Sept. 29, 1920. In July, 1920, 1920 Act came into force, & deft. then applied to the County Court under sect. 5 (3) of that Act, to rescind the consent order on the ground that under the new Act he had become entitled to protection, as, if the land & premises forming part of his holding had been let separately from the house, the ratable value of the land & buildings would be less than one-quarter of the ratable value of the house. The county ct. judge was not satisfied that the premises were within the protection of the Act of 1920, & refused to rescind the consent order:—Held: 1920 Act, s. 5 (3), did not apply to a consent order or judgment, & the county ct. judge was right in refusing to rescind the consent order in this case.

(2) Semble: the term "house" in proviso (iii) to 1920 Act, s. 12 (2), may include beside the actual dwelling-house, the adjoining outbuildings, stable & garden.—WELLESLEY v. WHITE, [1921] 2 K. B. 204; 90 L. J. K. B. 926; 125 L. T. 92; 19 L. G. R. 255, D. C.

7087. — Public-house—Whether cottage & adjoining land included.—Applt. was the tenant, under one lease, of a public-house, cottage, & 7 acres, 31 poles of land. The ratable value of the house was £14 per annum & of the land £10 per annum. Proceedings were taken against applt. to recover possession of the premises & mesne profits, & judgment was given against him. On appeal it was contended on his behalf that he was entitled to the protection of 1920 Act on the ground that though the land did not fall within proviso (iii) to sect. 12 (2), as being land which was let together with a house & which had a ratable value of less than one-quarter of the ratable value of the house, yet the land formed part of the house as being conveniently enjoyed therewith:—Held: the land did not form part of the house within the meaning of the proviso, & applt. was not protected by the Act.—EARLY v. DRUMMOND (1923), 39 T. L. R. 171; 67 Sol. Jo. 314, D. C.

7088. "Land & premises"—Whether business premises included.—Pltf. claimed to recover possession of a dwelling-house of the ratable value of £7, & of a stable-yard, coach-house, etc., of the ratable value of £48. The house & stable-yard, etc., were let together to defts. under one agreement at a monthly rent of £6 13s. 4d. The stable-yard, coach-house, etc., were occupied by defts. in their business as livery stable keepers:—Held: 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (iii) deals only with the case of a single letting of a dwelling-house that is protected by the Act with land or premises that are not protected; it has no application to a single letting of a protected dwelling-house & business premises which are protected by s. 13.—READ v. GOATER, [1921] 1 K. B. 611; 90 L. J. K. B. 580; 125 L. T. 87; 19 L. G. R. 270, D. C.

When the sub-tenant terminated his sub-tenancy & relinquished possession of the rooms resp. entered into possession of them & by workmen, executed certain repairs & decorations. It was not disputed that 1920 Act applied both to the whole house & also to the rooms which had been sub-let:—Held: 1920 Act did not cease to apply to the rooms by reason of 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), & of the fact that resp. had come into possession of them, since the proviso to the sub-sect. specifically provided that, where a tenant, as distinction from a head landlord, came into possession of part of a dwelling-house which he had sub-let, the Act of 1920 should not cease to apply to that part.—CATTO v. See 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (e).

7092. Whether net or gross value.]—(1) 1920 Act, s. 12 (7) provides: "Where the rent payable in respect of any tenancy of any dwelling-house is less than two-thirds of the ratable value thereof, this Act shall not apply to that rent or tenancy nor to any mtge. by the landlord from whom the tenancy is held of his interest in the dwelling-house, & this Act shall apply in respect of such dwelling-house as if no such tenancy existed or ever had existed":—Held: the expression "ratable value" in this sect. means net & not gross value.

(2) The effect of the sub-sect. is to take the tenancy to which it applies entirely outside the operation of the Act, although the Act still applies to the house itself (LUSH, J.).

(3) On an application for possession under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (a), (b) or (c), no question of alternative accommodation can arise, the only point for the consideration of the ct. being whether it is reasonable to make an order or to give judgment for possession.

(4) A public-house which contains dwelling-house accommodation constitutes a "dwelling-house," & falls within the general provisions of the Act; it does not constitute business premises within s. 13.

(5) In considering whether an order for possession should be made on the ground that the tenant has been convicted of using the premises "for an immoral or illegal purpose" within 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (b), something more than an isolated instance of illegality must be proved in order to justify the making of an order.—WALLER v. 7097. Whether statutory definition exclusive—Meaning of "include."—(1) A single woman was the weekly tenant & sole occupier of a house which as regards rental came within the scope of 1910 Act. During her tenancy she died intestate. Some months later her sister was appointed administratrix, but she never resided in deceased's house, which had been sub-let to another person. The landlord claimed that on the death of the tenant intestate with no member of her family residing with her in the house the tenancy lapsed, & that he was entitled to recover possession of the house:—Held: the administratrix was a person who derived title under the original tenant within 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (f), & her right as tenant was not affected by the provisions of 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (g).

(2) 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (g), must be taken as applying only to cases where there is no exor. or administrator; in other words, to cases not falling within 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (f).—MELLOWS v. d. Whether "landlord" includes sub-lessor.]—The expression "landlord," as interpreted by 1920 Act, s. 12 (1), is not limited to the proprietor of a dwelling-house, but includes a tenant who has sub-let to a sub-tenant.—LOGAN v. FAIR, [1922] S. C. 76.—SCOT.

7098. Employee—After termination of employment.]—Deft. was employed by plffs. to take charge of a garage & while so employed he was allowed to occupy a dwelling-house belonging to plffs. adjoining their garage. His employment was terminated & he secured other employment, but remained in occupation of the dwelling-house. Plffs. served notice to quit on him & brought proceedings for ejectment against him. Deft. relied on the Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Acts, 1915 to 1919:—Held: the Acts referred to did not apply.—NATIONAL STEAM CAR CO., LTD. v. BARHAM (1919), 122 L. T. 315, N. P.

7099. Caretaker.]—(1) In May, 1919, plffs. entered into an agreement with deft. whereby deft. should act as a caretaker of a dwelling-house of which plffs. were the owners. Deft. was to have no remuneration but he was to have the use of the servants' offices & upper bedrooms rent free. It was a term of the agreement that deft. should give up possession of the house within two weeks after receiving notice to do so:—Held: deft. as a matter of law was never at any time a tenant of the house or part of it within the meaning of the Rent Restriction Act, & therefore was not entitled to its protection.

The tenant of a dwelling-house, which came within the scope of the Increase of Rent Restriction Acts, died. By her will she appointed deft. F. her exor., & deft. O., who had resided in the house with her, residuary legatee. After the death of the tenant O. continued to reside in the house. The landlord by notice to quit served upon F. required possession to be given up, & as possession was not given on the expiration of the notice, proceedings were commenced against both defts., who claimed the protection of the Increase of Rent Restrictions Acts:—Held: F., as exor., was tenant of the house within the meaning, & was entitled to the protection, of the Acts, although he was not in occupation of the house.—*COLLIS v. The ratable value of the premises was £40 & the rates & taxes amounted to £31 18s. a year. In an action by pltf. for recovery of possession, after the tenancy had been determined by notice:—Held: "rent payable" meant the rent which the tenant had to pay, & not the net amount which the landlord got after paying the rates & taxes. Upon this construction, the "rent payable" not being less than two-thirds of the ratable value, the Act applied to the tenancy, & pltf. was not entitled to an order for possession.—*MACKWORTH v. Must be actual rent.]—In 1910 a newly built dwelling-house was let on a building lease for ninety-nine years at a ground rent of £8 10s. a year, which was less than two-thirds of the ratable value. There was no other letting until Jan., 1923, when the house was divided into two flats, & the upper flat let to a tenant at a rent of £2 a week. The tenant applied for an apportionment under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), & the county ct. fixed a hypothetical rent as the standard rent for the comprising property on Aug. 3, 1914, & apportioned the standard rent for the flat at half that amount:—Held: having regard to 1920 Act, s. 12 (7), the lease of the comprising property in 1910 must be disregarded, & the standard rent of the flat was the actual rent of £2 a week, reserved under the tenancy of Jan. 1923, when the flat was first let separately as a "dwelling-house."—*JOY v. 7116. Deduction from agricultural wages—In respect of occupation of cottage—Under Corn Production Act, 1917 (c. 46), s. 12 (1) (b).]—Pltf., an agricultural labourer, was employed in 1902 by deft. at 14s. a week & no cottage. In 1904 pltf. went into occupation of a cottage belonging to deft., & from Mar. 1904, to Aug. 1917, deft. deducted from the wages 1s. a week in respect of pltf.'s occupation of the cottage. Since Aug. 1917, deft. had deducted 3s. a week from pltf.'s minimum wages as fixed by the Regulations & Orders made under above Act. In July, 1918, pltf.'s minimum wage was 31s. An order made by the Agricultural Wages Board (England & Wales) defined "the benefits or advantages which may be reckoned as payment of wages in lieu of payment in cash for the purpose of any minimum rate of wages" under the above Act, to include the provision by an employer for a workman employed by him of (inter alia) a cottage. The value of a cottage was to be taken at 3s. per week. The evidence was that the cottage in question would let at 3s. a week. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. to recover the amount of these deductions, contending that the deduction of 3s.

instead of 1s. was an increase of rent which was illegal by reason of the Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97). The county ct. judge gave judgment for deft., holding that the deductions were not by way of rent, but represented the benefit, etc., which pltf. derived from the occupation of the cottage. The Div. Ct. held, that the extra 2s. was deducted not by way of rent, but as the equivalent for the benefits or advantages which pltf. received from the occupation of the cottage, there had consequently been no increase of rent, & the Increase of Rent, etc., Act, 1915 (c. 97), did not apply. Pltf. appealed:—Held: the action was misconceived. The claim was for arrears of wages, & there were no arrears of wages in fact, as pltf. had been paid the minimum rate of wages; for he had been paid that which the Wages Board decided was the equivalent of 31s.—namely, 28s. in cash, & he had had the use of the cottage which was the equivalent of 3s.—*BAKER v. A. In General.

See 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (a).

7117. Jurisdiction of county courts to determine—As independent question.]—The county ct. has no jurisdiction under 1920 Act, or the Rules of 1920 made thereunder or otherwise to entertain an application to determine as a sole & independent question what is the "standard rent" of a dwelling-house within the meaning of the Act.—*BROOMHALL v. In Mar., 1918, a subsequent landlord let part of the house for a rent inclusive of rates, & the standard rent of that part of the house was apportioned at £2 10s. 6d. a month:—Held: that sum, as standard rent, was also the "net rent" within 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (c).—WESTCOTT v. BOWES (1925), 94 L. J. K. B. 492; 133 L. T. 127; 41 T. L. R. 332; 69 Sol. Jo. 411, C. A.

A dwelling-house in the Metropolis, which on Aug. 3, 1914, was let at a rent of £65 a year, was in 1916 converted into three separate self-contained flats, which were let to different tenants & separately rated. In Oct. 1920, the tenant of one of the flats applied to the county ct. under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), for an apportionment of the rent on Aug. 3, 1914, of the undivided dwelling-house, with a view to the determination of the standard rent of the flat :—Held: (1) (BANKES & ATKIN, L.J.J.) by the conversion of the house into self-contained flats the identity of the original house was destroyed, & in view of that fact the date of the conversion was immaterial; (2) (SCRUTTON, L.J.) as at the date of the conversion the house was not within the restriction of the Increase of Rent, etc., Act then in force the landlord was equally unrestricted as to the rent which he was entitled to ask for the flats carved out of it; (3) accordingly 1920 Act, s. 12 (3) did not apply to the case & the standard rent of the flat was the rent at which it was first 7132. House converted into factory—Rent at first letting as factory.]—(1) When Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), was passed there were three adjoining dwelling-houses to each of which that Act applied. In 1918 the owner of the three houses converted them into one factory in such wise that the three houses ceased to exist as dwelling-houses & were replaced by the new factory. In 1920 the owner let the factory on a lease for twenty-one years at an annual rent of £700, which exceeded the aggregate rents at which the houses were let on Aug. 3, 1914. The lessee contended that the amount of the excess was irrecoverable from him by the owner & claimed under 1920 Act, s. 14, to recover so much thereof as he had paid to the owner:—Held: the standard rent of the factory was the rent at which it was let in 1920, when it was first let, & as this rent excluded the operation of the Rent (Restrictions) Acts, the lessee's claim failed.

(2) It appears to me that throughout [1920 Act, s. 12 (6)] there runs the condition that there shall be a dwelling-house. . . . — Deduction from agricultural wages—Whether in lieu of increased rent.]—See No. 7116, ante.

7134. — Lease of tied public house—Whether tie & discounts considered.]—In 1910 deft. became tenant to pltf. of licensed premises at Henley upon a lease for three years at a yearly rent of £75. The lease contained the usual tied covenant as to the purchase of beer, wines & spirits. On the expiration of this lease deft. continued in possession, receiving a discount of 10 per cent. in respect of the tied prices. In 1914 & 1917 respectively further leases of the premises for three years each were granted to him. On Dec. 14, 1920, pltf. granted a further lease to deft., by which he was to hold the premises for seven years from Mar. 25, 1920. This lease contained the tied covenant as before, but there was no provision for a discount in favour of deft. on goods bought, & his obligations to repair were increased. Pltfs. claimed rent, & payment for goods sold & delivered; deft. counterclaimed, alleging that a discount of 10 per cent. was due to him on the price of goods bought, & pleading 1920 Act:—Held: (1) 1920 Act, s. 1, applied, & by the lease of Dec. 14, 1920, the rent had been increased "since Mar. 25, 1920"; (2) the standard rent was £75, being the rent provided by the lease of 1910, & as no notice of increase had been served, the rent reserved by the lease of 1920 must be reduced accordingly, but in other respects that lease was valid & binding; (3) both the tied covenant in the lease & the discount for goods supplied under the tie must be disregarded for the purposes of the Rent Restriction Acts; (4) as the High Ct., by 1920 Act, s. 2 (6), had no jurisdiction to deal with the question of repairs, final judgment must be postponed until the county ct. judge had given his decision on this point.

(5) This cessation of discount was not a "fine or premium," or other like sum for the grant, renewal or continuance of a tenancy (MCCARDIE, J.).—BRAKSPEAR (W. H.) & SONS, LTD. v. BARTON, [1924] 2 K. B. 88; 93 L. J. K. B. 801; 131 L. T. 538; 40 T. L. R. 607; 68 Sol. Jo. 719.

7135. — Transfer of burden from landlord to tenant—Landlord allowed to occupy part of demised premises.]—By an agreement of tenancy made in 1917 a lady let to a tenant "all that messuage, tenement & premises situate & being No. 33 R. Road" for a term of three years at a specified yearly rent in money, & the tenant agreed (inter alia) "to give unto the said landlady in consideration of the rent payable the use of the drawing-room & bedroom on the same floor in the within mentioned premises for her own occupation rent free"; & on the termination of that agreement the tenant remained in occupation of the premises as a statutory tenant on the same terms:—Held: (1) the right given by the tenant to the landlady to use the two rooms was not "rent" within 1920 Act, that term there denoting rent in money only, & consequently, that right could not be taken into account in considering whether or not the agreed rent exceeded the standard rent by more than the permitted amount; (2) the grant of the said right by the tenant to the landlady was not within 1920 Act, s. 2 (3), equivalent to a transfer to the tenant of a burden or liability previously borne by the landlord whereby the rent should be deemed to be increased; (3) the agreement of tenancy on its true construction was not a demise of the house with an exception therefrom of the two rooms, or a demise of only the portion of the house other than the two rooms, & therefore, the tenant was not entitled to an apportionment of the rent of the house under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3).—

7136. Time of increase—“Since” March 25, 1920—Whether date from which effective—Or date of agreement for increase.]—Rent is increased within Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1919 (c. 7), s. 4 (i), at the date when the increase becomes effective, & not at any earlier date at which an increase has been agreed upon between landlord and tenant.—GOLDSMITH v. 7137. — — — — —.]—Premises which on Aug. 4, 1914, were let at a rent of £60 a year, the landlord paying rates & taxes, were, by an agreement dated Mar. 12, 1920, let by pltf. to defts. “from Mar. 25, 1920, for the term of three years thence next ensuing & afterwards as a yearly tenancy unless six calendar months’ previous notice in writing shall be given by either party to quit at the end of the said term or on Mar. 25, in any subsequent year . . . at the yearly rent of £230 payable by four equal quarterly payments . . . the first of such payments to be made on June 24 next.” Defts. obtained the keys of the premises on Mar. 25, 1920, & actually went into possession on Mar. 26:—Held: by the agreement of Mar. 12 the increased rent began to accrue on Mar. 26, the rent had therefore, within 1920 Act, s. 1, been “increased since Mar. 25, 1920”; & as the increased rent exceeded the standard rent by more than the amount permitted by the statute, the excess was, notwithstanding the agreement of Mar. 12, irrecoverable from defts.—RAIKES v. (a) In General.

See 1920 Act, ss. 1, 2 (1) & (3); 1923 Act, s. 3.

7139. How increase calculated.—(1) Where premises have been let at a rent lower than the standard rent, a landlord cannot, by terminating the tenancy & giving notice of increase, raise the rent to the standard rent. But increases permitted under 1920 Act, s. 2, must be based on the standard rent.

(2) I think the object of the Act [1920 Act] was to give to the tenant fixity of tenure, & that it would not be within the purview of the Act that it should be used to destroy fixity of tenure unless the tenant agreed to pay an increased rent (HORRIDGE, J.).—DUFFY v. 7145. Increase caused by increase in ratable value included.—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 1 (1), a landlord who pays the rates is entitled to increase the rent by the amount of any actual increase in the rates, not merely where such increase in the rates is caused by an increase in the rate itself, but also where it is caused by an increase in the ratable value of the premises.—STEEL v. 7149. — — — — — Net amount paid—Where commission receivable by owner.—Pltf., the landlord of a dwelling-house within the Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), was a compounding landlord under Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), s. 3, which provides that in respect of certain hereditaments, if the landlord is willing to enter into an agreement in writing with the overseers to become liable to them for the poor rates assessed in respect of such hereditament for any term not less than one year from the date of the agreement, & to pay the poor rates whether the hereditament is occupied or not, the overseers may agree with the owner to receive the rates from him, & allow to him a commission not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount. The rates on the dwelling-house were paid by pltf. under this sect.:—Held: the landlord was not entitled under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915

7150. — Effect of subsequent reduction.]—The rates of a dwelling-house within 1920 Act having been increased above those paid in the period including Aug. 3, 1914, the landlord, by whom the rates were payable, served a valid notice under 1920 Act, s. 3 (2), of his intention to increase the rent by virtue of 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (b), in respect of the increased rates; & the tenant paid the increased rent. The rates were subsequently reduced, & thenceforth the tenant deducted a proportionate amount from the increased rent. The landlord brought an action in the county ct. to recover the sum of these deductions :—Held : the landlord was not entitled to recover, inasmuch as the permitted increase was not the amount by which the pre-war rates had at one time been exceeded, but was the amount by which they were exceeded at the time of the claim.—*STRICKLAND v. 7154. On creation of new tenancy—Agreement alone not sufficient.]—Deft. had until Dec. 31, 1920, been in occupation of part of a house as sub-tenant to pltf.'s former tenant, S., at a weekly rental of 21s. On the determination of S.'s tenancy it was agreed that deft. should continue in occupation if he would pay a rent of 35s. per week, whereby a new tenancy was created. The increased rent was paid until Aug. 13, 1921, when deft. disputed his liability. In an action to recover the arrears of rent :—Held : (1) the requirements of 1920 Act, s. 3 (2), had not been complied with, & therefore the standard rent of 21s. per week alone was recoverable.

(2) As against a new tenant a landlord could not, upon a re-letting, by a mere agreement increase the rent above the standard rent. Such increase could only become operative after the determination of an existing tenancy, & was then recoverable only if valid notice had been given under 1920 Act, s. 3 (2).—SCHMIT v. CHRISTY, [1922] 2 K. B. 60; 91 L. J. K. B. 629; 127 L. T. 305; 38 T. L. R. 627; 66 Sol. Jo. 539; 20 L. G. R. 434, D. C.

7155. — Where lease made before Act.]—The landlord of a flat which by reason of its ratable value was a dwelling-house within 1920 Act, had let the flat to a tenant before the passing of that Act for a term expiring on Mar. 25, 1920, at a rent of £107 18s. a year, which was the standard rent. On Feb. 17, 1920, the landlord's exors. granted to the tenant a lease of the flat for seven years from Mar. 25 at a rent of £160 a year. On July 2, 1920, 1920 Act was passed. The lessors claimed a quarter's rent under the lease. The lessee counterclaimed for payments made in excess of the standard rent :—Held : (1) the lessors could recover nothing above the standard rent & must repay what they had received in excess thereof, no notice in writing of their intention to increase the rent having been served on the lessee as prescribed by 1920 Act, s. 3 (2); (2) the service of such a notice was a condition precedent to the lessors' right to increase the rent, & it was immaterial that the lease purporting to increase the rent was made before the passing of the Act.

(3) The lease contained no covenant by the lessors to supply attendance or the use of furniture, but in fact the lessee had always had the services of a porter & the use of a lift for raising coal & lowering refuse :—Held : the flat was not let at a rent which included payment in respect of attendance within 1920 Act, s. 12 (2) (i).—*MICHAEL v. (b) Validity of.

See, now, 1923 Act, s. 6 (1).

7158. Conditions precedent—Amount of increase agreed or determined by court.]—Where the landlord of a dwelling-house, to which 1920 Act applies, gives notice of intention to increase the standard rent by the lesser sum mentioned in 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (d) (ii), & the amount of the increase has neither been agreed between the parties nor determined by the county ct., the notice is neither in the form in the First Schedule to the Act nor in a form substantially to the same effect & is therefore not a valid notice under 1920 Act, s. 3 (2), & the increase is not due or recoverable.

The landlord of a dwelling house to which the Act applied claimed to increase the rent above the standard rent by 15 per cent. of the net rent under 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (c), which was not objected to, & by a further 15 per cent. of the net rent under 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (d) (ii). On Aug. 24, 1922, he served on the tenant a notice in writing of his intention so to increase the rent, & for non-payment of the increased rent, which he alleged to be due & payable on Dec. 25, 1922, he brought an action in the High Ct. for arrears of rent, possession, & mesne profits since that date.

At the date of serving notice of intention to increase the rent the amount claimed under 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (d) (ii), had neither been agreed between the parties nor determined by the county ct.:—Held: the notice was not a valid notice within 1920 Act, s. 3 (2) & the increased rent not being due or recoverable, the action failed.—*BOURNE v. (c) Form of Notice.

See 1920 Act, sched. 1; 1923 Act, s. 6 (2).

7164. Must state dates of increases.—A notice to increase rent under 1920 Act, must state correctly the dates from which the increases are payable; & therefore a notice to increase rent which is invalid because it is not preceded or accompanied by a valid notice to quit cannot be rendered valid by a subsequent valid notice to quit.—PEIZER v. FEDERMAN (1921), 38 T. L. R. 54; 66 Sol. Jo. 108, D. C.

Annotation.—Refd. Newell v. Crayford Cottage Soc., [1922] 1 K. B. 656.

7165. — Sufficiency of statement.—(1) A notice to increase the rent of a dwelling-house to which 1920 Act applies, after the termination of an existing tenancy thereof, the notice being of the length & otherwise in the form prescribed by the Act, is not invalid under the provisions of s. 3 of the Act or otherwise by reason of the fact that it is served with or during the currency of the notice to quit by which the tenancy is determined & therefore before the termination of the tenancy, or that it is to take effect immediately after the termination of the tenancy. 1920 Act, s. 3 (1), provides that nothing in the Act shall be taken to authorise any increase of rent "except in respect of a period during which but for this Act the landlord would be entitled to obtain possession . . .":—Held: in that sub-sect. the words "be entitled to obtain possession" mean have a legal right to possession, & do not mean be able to enforce possession by an order of the ct.; & consequently, the period there specified is a period commencing on the date on which the landlord acquires a legal right to possession, as, for example, on the expiry of a valid notice to quit, & not on the later date on which, by having taken legal proceedings, he secures an order for possession from the ct.

(2) A notice of increase under the Act, which was dated Oct. 23, 1920, & served by post the following day, stated that the increase on account of rates "will date from Nov. 24, 1920, being one clear week from the date of this notice," & that the increase on account of other matters "will date from Nov. 24, 1920, being four clear weeks from the date of this notice":—Held: that notice was not prevented by 1920 Act, s. 3 (2) or by reason of any ambiguity from being a valid notice of increase of rent as from Nov. 24, 1920, on account of both rates & other matters.—HILL v. HASLER, [1921] 3 K. B. 643; 91 L. J. K. B. 134; 126 L. T. 186; 19 L. G. R. 699, D. C.

7166. Effect of claim for more than permitted increase.—A notice in writing of a landlord's intention to increase the rent of a dwelling-house to which 1920 Act applies, served by him upon the tenant, stating that the increase under 1920 Act, s. 2 (1) (c), is 15 per cent. of the net rent, when in the circumstances it can only be increased under that clause by 5 per cent. of the net rent, is not "a valid notice . . . in the form contained in the First Schedule to this Act, or in a form substantially to the same effect," within 1920 Act, s. 3 (2).—PENFOLD v. NEWMAN, [1922] 1 K. B. 645; 91 L. J. K. B. 528; 126 L. T. 697; 20 L. G. R. 697, D. C.

to serve notice to terminate the tenancy. The tenant paid rent at the increased rate until May, 1923, when she brought an action in the county ct. to recover the rent paid in excess between those dates. On June 5, 1923, the county ct. judge gave judgment in her favour for the amount claimed. On June 7, 1923, 1923 (Notices of Increase) Act came into force, whereupon the landlord appealed:—Held: (1) the Act was retrospective, & the question as to the validity of the notice having been raised in the county ct., the Act could be invoked in aid by the landlord on appeal; (2) the whole of the increases were validated by the Act & the landlord was entitled to judgment.—*LANDRIGAN v. In 1924 plff. claimed possession of the premises, but did not at the time give any notice to quit.

By above Act, s. 1 (1), a notice of intention to increase the rent "shall have effect & shall be deemed always to have had effect as if it were or had been also a notice to terminate the existing tenancy":—Held: as the deft. had received what was to be deemed a notice to quit in May, 1920, & had remained in possession, no fresh notice to quit was necessary.—*ASTON v. SUB-SECT. 4.—APPORTIONMENT.

A. In General.

See 1920 Act, s. 12 (3).

7182. Jurisdiction of county court.]—1920 Act, s. 12 (3), gives power to the county ct. to apportion the rent of a property in which a dwelling-house is comprised where the amount of the rent of the comprising property either on Aug. 3, 1914, or at the time of the letting of the part of it the standard rent of which is sought to be determined takes the comprising property outside the Rent Restriction Acts.

1920 Act, s. 12 (3), must be read as giving the county ct. power to apportion even when the result may be to show that appct.'s dwelling-house is not within the Rent Restriction Acts.—PHILLIPS v. POTTER (1925), 94 L. J. K. B. 819; 133 L. T. 256; 41 T. L. R. 460; 23 L. G. R. 383, D. C.

7183. — When sole & independent question.]—1920 Act, s. 12 (3), requires the county ct. to apportion the rent or ratable value of a dwelling-house in every case shown to fall within its provisions, whether the matter comes before it as a sole & independent question or otherwise.—*R. v. 7185. What court must consider.]—1920 Act, s. 12 (3), does not enable the county ct. when apportioning the rent to take into account the fact that the landlord pays the rates, or that the tenant enjoys gas, water, telephone, or other amenities at the landlord's expense. In making the apportionment the county ct. can only consider the size, accessibility, aspect, & other physical advantages enjoyed by the tenant of the dwelling-house in respect of which the standard rent is to be ascertained, as compared with those of the rest of the property in which it is comprised.—BAINBRIDGE v. CONGDON, [1925] 2 K. B. 261; 94 L. J. K. B. 682; 133 L. T. 286; 41 T. L. R. 480; 69 Sol. Jo. 557; 23 L. G. R. 561, D. C.

7191. — — — Substantial alterations.]—

(1) Where there has been a substantial alteration of a dwelling-house, as, for example, a reconstruction by way of conversion into a shop, offices, & a flat, no order for the apportionment of the rent of the flat can be made under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3).

(2) A flat may be self-contained within 1920 Act, s. 12 (9), which excludes such flats from the operation of the Act, notwithstanding that there is no partition dividing it from the rest of the premises, provided that it contains in itself all that is reasonably necessary for those who occupy such a flat as a residence.—DARRALL v. WHITAKER (1923), 92 L. J. K. B. 882; 129 L. T. 672; 39 T. L. R. 447; 67 Sol. Jo. 727; 21 L. G. R. 505, D. C.

7192. — — — .]—In Dec. 1920, the upper part of a dwelling-house in the metropolis, which was in Aug. 1914, let as a whole at a rent of £70 a year, was converted into a separate flat or tenement by means of structural & other alterations & let to a tenant at a rent of £150 a year. The tenant of the flat subsequently claimed apportionment & a return of the rent paid in excess. The flat, as the ct. found, was a dwelling-house within 1920 Act, & in order to ascertain the standard rent under s. 12 (1) (a), it was necessary to decide whether the flat was first let on Aug. 3, 1914, or in Dec. 1920:—Held: this question was one of fact which depended on the nature & extent of the structural alteration. It was not intended by 1920 Act, s. 12 (9), that apportionment should always be made unless the structural alteration amounted to complete reconstruction within that sub-sect. In considering whether apportionment should be made under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), the county ct. judge should have regard to the physical identity of the dwelling-house in each case. To justify a finding that a part of a dwelling-house was first let when it was first let separately there must be a new & separate dwelling-house not merely in law by virtue of a new & separate letting, but also in fact, by virtue of substantial structural alteration.—MARCHBANK v. CAMPBELL, [1923] 1 K. B. 245; 92 L. J. K. B. 137; 128 L. T. 283; 39 T. L. R. 120; 67 Sol. Jo. 184; 21 L. G. R. 90, D. C.

7193. — — — Right of tenant of unaltered part—Where benefit to tenant.]—A dwelling-house which consisted of several floors was last let as a whole before Aug. 3, 1914. In 1920 the owner of the house made substantial structural alterations in it which rendered it suitable for occupation in separate parts, & in consequence of these alterations the identity of the house as a whole was destroyed. The first floor remained structurally unaltered, except that it was provided with a new lavatory basin & pan, but that floor was indirectly greatly benefited by the alterations made in the house as a whole. The owner then let the floors to different tenants. On an application by the tenant of the first floor under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), for an apportionment of the rent of the house at the date when it was last let as a whole, for the purpose of determining the standard rent of the first floor:—Held: in these circumstances the first floor had been so altered as to have lost its identity, & the application for apportionment could not be entertained.

Undoubtedly the policy of the Act [1920 Act] was to encourage a landlord & not to hamper him in adding to the number of dwelling-houses (LUSH, J.).—STOCKHAM v. EASTON, [1924] 1 K. B. 52; 92 L. J. K. B. 926; 129 L. T. 762; 39 T. L. R. 472; 21 L. G. R. 652, D. C.

7194. — — — Where no benefit of tenant.]—A dwelling-house, to which 1920 Act applied, consisted of a basement & three upper floors. In 1921 the basement was let to a tenant at 11s. 9d. a week, & in 1923 the landlord converted the upper floors into two separate & self-contained flats. The basement was unaffected by the conversion & the tenant obtained no benefit therefrom. The standard rent of the whole of the premises was £60 per annum. The tenant of the basement applied for apportionment of his rent under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), & the Registrar apportioned the rent of the basement at one-fifth of £60, namely, £12:—Held: (1) as the reconstruction did not cause the house to lose its identity as a dwelling-house nor affect the tenancy of the basement, the tenant was entitled to an apportionment.

(2) Under the Rent Restrictions Acts, there may be one or more "dwelling-houses" within a "dwelling-house" (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—ABRAHART v. WEBSTER, [1925] 1 K. B. 563; 93 L. J. K. B. 1119; 132 L. T. 276; 41 T. L. R. 44; 69 Sol. Jo. 141; 22 L. G. R. 754, C. A.

7195. Where front part of house separately let—Without structural alteration.]—In Mar. 1921, a large dwelling-house was let on lease for five years at a rent of £100 a year, the lessees paying rates & taxes & doing internal repairs. The ratable value of the house in Aug. 1914, was £60 gross & £48 net. The lessees, being minded to occupy a part only of the house themselves, in June, 1921, sub-let to a tenant four rooms & certain appurtenances in the house for three years at £80 a year, the lessees paying rates & taxes & other outgoings. The tenant afterwards made an application to the county court under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), for an order for the apportionment of the rent of the premises with a view to fixing the standard rent of the four rooms & appurtenances:—Held: (1) the four rooms & appurtenances let to the appt. in June, 1921, were not first let as such on that date, & therefore the rent at which they were let to the applicant was not the standard rent within 1920 Act, s. 12 (1) (a), which defines "standard rent" as the rent at which the dwelling-house was let on Aug. 3, 1914, or, in the case of a dwelling-house first let after that date, the rent at which it was first let; (2) as there had been no structural alteration amounting to a reconstruction of the premises by way of conversion into separate & self-contained flats within 1920 Act, s. 12 (9), & the identity of the premises had not been lost, appct. was entitled to an order for apportionment, & to have the standard rent fixed & his rent reduced to a proportion of the standard rent of the whole house; (3) the county ct. had jurisdiction to make an order of apportionment under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), on an original application.—SUTTON v. BEGLEY, [1923] 2 K. B. 694; 92 L. J. K. B. 1086; 129 L. T. 773; 68 Sol. Jo. 82; 21 L. G. R. 679, C. A.

7196. — House not within the Act.]—

On Aug. 3, 1914, a house in Weston-super-Mare was let as one house at a rent of £60. In May, 1919, the second floor of the house was let separately to resp. at a rent of £55, but no structural alterations were made in the premises. This floor was not separately rated. In 1922 resp. applied for an apportionment of the standard rent of the house. The county ct. judge held that 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), applied, & there must be an apportionment.—Held: the fact that in May, 1919, when the second floor was let to resp., the house was not subject to any Rent Restriction Act, was for this purpose an irrelevant circumstance, & the county ct. judge was entitled on the facts to make an apportionment.—WOODHEAD v. PUTNAM, [1923] 1 K. B. 252; 92 L. J. K. B. 137; 128 L. T. 281; 67 Sol. Jo. 228; 21 L. G. R. 85, D. C.

7197. — House separately let before August, 1914.]—Applt., who was the owner of a leasehold house in the Metropolis, had since before Aug. 3, 1914, continuously let the second & third floors of the house to separate tenants. He had also before that date let to a tenant two rooms on the first floor at a rent amounting to £26 a year. On Aug. 1, 1922, he let to resp. these two rooms together with two other rooms on the same floor at a rent of £58 10s. a year. The standard rent of the house as a whole was £70 a year. On an application by resp. under 1920 Act, s. 12 (3), the county ct. judge held that the sub-sect. applied, & made an apportionment of the rent of the house as a whole, apportioning to resp.'s rooms a rent of £25 a year.—Held: the county ct. judge was wrong in applying the sub-sect., & the standard rent of resp.'s rooms was that at which they had been first let in 1922, namely, £58 10s.—*LELYVELD v. "Premium"—Purchase price of long lease.]—In Jan. deft. offered for sale by public auction certain cottage properties upon the terms that the purchaser of each cottage lot should have the right to have granted to him a lease thereof for ninety-nine years from Feb. 22, 1916, at a nominal yearly rent varying from 15s. to £1, & according to a form of lease set forth in the particulars of sale. At the auction R., became the purchaser of one of the lots, a ninety-nine years' lease of a cottage, at the price or premium of £55, & at a rent of £1 per annum; & D. became the purchaser of another lot, a similar lease of a cottage then in his own occupation, at the price or premium of £57 10s. at the same yearly rent. The cottages were put up for sale by deft. in ignorance of the passing of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), which received the Royal assent on Dec. 23, 1915. On becoming aware of the passing of the Act deft. declined to complete, & thereupon D. & R. commenced actions for specific performance of their contracts. No possession had been taken by either R. or D. under the contracts. It was clear that both the cottages were dwelling-houses to which the Act applied, & that the purchase-money, if paid, would be a "premium" within Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, s. 1 (2):—Held: (1) notwithstanding that the term to be granted was ninety-nine years, the leases would create tenancies within the Act, & the payments therefore of the sums for which R. & D. had purchased their cottages were premiums which the deft. was prohibited by s. 1 (2) from retaining; (2) the agreements to pay the premiums being illegal, & no possession having been taken under the contracts by either R. or D., deft. was entitled to be relieved altogether from the contracts upon repaying to R. & D. all moneys he had received under them.—*REES v. 7200. — Must be "in addition to the rent" & payable to landlord.]—Deft., who was a tenant for a term of three years from Mar. 1919, of a dwelling-house within the Act, was in May, 1920, desirous of giving up his tenancy, & in that month he agreed with pltf. that upon payment by the latter to him of a premium he would surrender his tenancy & the landlord would grant pltf. a new tenancy for three years at a slightly increased rent. The landlord did not know that pltf. had agreed to pay deft. a premium. Pltf. paid deft. the premium & the landlord granted pltf. a new tenancy for three years. After 1920 Act came into operation pltf. sued to recover back the premium:—Held: 1920 Act, s. 8 (1), was reasonably capable of two constructions; that, the sect. being a penal one, the ct. should give it the more lenient construction avoiding the imposition of a penalty; that, construed in this light, the prohibition in the sect. was limited to the person who required the payment of the premium "in addition to the rent" & "as a condition of the grant, renewal, or continuance" by him of the tenancy, namely, the landlord, & the pltf. was not entitled to recover.—*REMMINGTON v. By reason of the provision as to notice to quit, the "premium" was terminable with the tenancy. In an action to recover one week's payment of 11s. 6d.:—Held: the transaction must be looked at as a whole & the two documents read together, & so dealt with, 11s. 6d. was part of the rent & not premium, & was, as such, irrecoverable.—*RUSH v. The tenant paid the increased rent & in ignorance of the Act, continued to do so until Jan. 31, 1916. Having then become aware of the Act, he deducted from his subsequent payment of rent the total amount of the increase over the standard rent which he had paid between Nov. 25, 1915, & Jan. 31, 1916. In an action by the landlord to recover the amount so deducted:—Held: (1) the amount overpaid by the tenant was not a "fine, premium, or other like sum" which he was entitled to deduct from his rent under s. 1 (2); (2) although the Act provided that the increase beyond the standard rent was not recoverable by the landlord if the tenant had not paid it, yet the tenant having paid it under mistake of law, was not entitled to recover it from the landlord in any shape or form.—SHARP BROTHERS & KNIGHT v. COHEN (1923), 40 T. L. R. 123; 68 Sol. Jo. 313, D. C.

7211. Amount paid under invalid notice of increase.—Pltf. was the tenant & deft. the landlord of a dwelling-house, the standard rent of which was £7 1s. 10d. per quarter. In May, 1918, deft. served on pltf. a notice of increase of rent, & in May, 1919, he served a second notice of increase of rent. Both notices were regular in form, & as regards amount, were warranted by increased rates paid by deft., but no notice to determine the tenancy was given at any material time. The increased rent demanded was paid by pltf. without protest. He subsequently brought an action under 1920 Act, s. 14, to recover from his landlord the amount overpaid:—Held: as the landlord had never served on the tenant a notice to determine the tenancy, the tenant was entitled to recover the amount overpaid.—*SMITH v. 7213. — What amount recoverable—Effect of 1923 Act, s. 8 (1).—The landlords of a dwelling-house, to which the Rent Restrictions Acts, 1920 & 1923, applied, served notices of increase of rent, which were incorrect in certain particulars & were not accompanied by notice to quit. The county ct. judge, acting under 1923 Act, s. 6, amended the notices, & held that all money already paid thereunder by way of rent might be retained by the landlords. To this the tenant objected that by above sub-sect. no increase of rent payable by reason of such amendment was recoverable by the landlords "in respect of any rental period which ended more than six months before the date of the order," & that he was entitled under 1920 Act, s. 14 (1), to recover from the landlords' any excess rent paid prior to that period. He also objected that the county ct. judge had no power to amend a notice which was invalid owing to the absence of notice to quit:—Held: (1) above sub-sect. must be read together with 1923 Act, s. 6, & their joint effect was to limit the landlords' right in respect of rent due as the result of the amendment of the notices to rent due for the six months prior to the date of the order of the county ct., & the tenant was therefore entitled under 1920 Act, s. 14 (1), to recover from the landlords any increase in rent paid in respect of a rental period ending before such six months, as being rent irrecoverable by the landlords under 1920 Act, s. 1; (2) the county ct. judge had power to amend the notices of increase under the 1923 Act, s. 6, although they were not accompanied by notices to quit.—*WILLIAMS v. 7218. Recovery by action—Whether in time—Proceedings begun within time limit—Judgment recovered after time limit.]—The tenants of dwelling-houses within the protection of 1923 Act made payments of rent to their landlords, before the passing of 1923 Acts in excess of the standard rents. In each case they brought proceedings within the period of six months, limited by 1923 Act, s. 8 (2), to recover the overpayments, but in each case the action was not tried until after the expiration of the period of six months:—Held: it was sufficient that the actions were brought within the period of six months, though judgment was not obtained until after the expiration of that period & the tenants were entitled to recover.—*LEWIS v. These sums were, by 1923 Act, s. 8 (2), recoverable on or before Jan. 31, 1924, but not afterwards. The claim for apportionment could regularly be brought in the West London, ct., but the claim for repayment could not be brought in that ct. without the leave of the judge or registrar on an application supported by an affidavit. No affidavit was sworn until Feb. 5, 1924. Notwithstanding this the plaint was entered, a plaint note under the seal of the ct. was given to pltf. & a summons was issued, all bearing the date of Jan. 30, 1924. By C. C. R., Ord. 7, r. 2, a summons to appear to a plaint shall be dated of the day on which the plaint was entered, & the date thereof shall be the commencement of the action:—Held: the irregular entry of the plaint & issue of the summons before the necessary leave had been obtained did not deprive the county ct. of jurisdiction to hear the action, but the irregularity could be waived by deft.; as deft. had appeared to the summons & raised a defence in no way challenging the jurisdiction of the ct., he had waived the irregularity; the action must therefore be taken to have commenced on Jan. 30, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—*PRINGLE v. 7224. Leave to distrain—Discretion of court.]—A landlord made an application under the Courts (Emergency Powers) Acts, 1914 to 1917, & 1920 Act, for leave to levy a distress for rent. It was admitted that the tenant was not under inability to pay the amount by reason of circumstances directly or indirectly attributable to the recent war, but it was contended by the tenant that, having regard to 1920 Act, there was a bonâ fide dispute between himself & the landlord as to the amount due :—Held : the discretion to be exercised as to the making of an order giving leave to levy a distress was not limited to the question of the ability or inability of the tenant to pay the rent on account of circumstances attributable directly or indirectly to the war, but in an application under 1920 Act, s. 6, a tenant should be admitted to show, if he could, that there was a bond fide dispute as to the amount payable, & the discretion of the ct. should only be exercised after due inquiry had been made into the questions arising out of such an application.—TOWNSEND v. CHARLTON, [1922] 1 K. B. 700; 91 L. J. K. B. 714; 127 L. T. 96; 38 T. L. R. 397; 66 Sol. Jo. 389; 20 L. G. R. 382, D. C.

The sub-tenant, being entitled under the provisions of the Increase of Rent, etc. (Restrictions) Acts to continue in occupation, refused to quit. The tenant duly gave up possession to the landlord of his part of the premises, but was, for the above reasons, unable to give vacant possession of the whole :—Held : as the tenant had done all he could do to give vacant possession, he was not liable to the landlord for use & occupation for the period during which the latter was kept out of possession.—REYNOLDS v. BANNERMAN, [1922] 1 K. B. 719; 91 L. J. K. B. 651; 127 L. T. 300; 38 T. L. R. 509; 66 Sol. Jo. 504; 20 L. G. R. 439, D. C.

7236. — — — — — Whether on terms of former tenancy.—

The landlord of a dwelling-house subject to the Rent Restrictions Acts had covenanted to "keep the cottage dry & the outside in repair." The cottage was one hundred & fifty years old, without any damp courses, & in a bad state of repair, the cost of the repairs would be about £600, & the tenant's furniture was injured by the damp. The tenant, after receiving a valid notice to quit, remained in possession as a statutory tenant & requested the landlord to comply with his covenant, but the latter repudiated liability. In a claim by the tenant against the landlord for damages for breach of the covenant :—Held : the measure of damages was (a) the difference in value to the tenant of the house during the period from the date of the request to the assessment of damages between the house in its unrepaired condition & the house in the condition in which it would be if the landlord, on receipt of the notice to repair, had fulfilled his obligation; & (b) the damage to the tenant's furniture during the aforesaid period caused by the landlord's default in repairing. Both items would be subject to the extent of the landlord's obligation, having regard to the age & structure of the premises, & in assessing the damages, Lister v. Lane & Nesham, No. 4700, ante, as explained in Lurcott v. Wakeley & Wheeler, No. 4757, ante, should be considered. At the expiration of the term deft. remained in possession as statutory tenant. He subsequently became in arrear with rent & also committed a breach of covenant. Pltf. issued a summons for possession on these grounds. Subsequent to the summons but before trial deft. paid the rent & costs into ct. No notice of breach of covenant was served on deft. under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14. The county ct. judge made an order for possession:—Held: as a statutory tenant pltf. could not claim under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 212, which enacts that proceedings shall cease on payment of rent & costs into ct., or under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 14, which enacts that as a condition precedent to re-entry notice specifying the breach must be served on deft., & as he was only entitled to remain as statutory tenant on condition of observing the conditions of the tenancy, which he had broken, the county ct. judge was entitled, in the exercise of his discretion, to make the order for possession.—*BREWER v. 7245. Whether created by apportionment of rent.]—Pltf. was the owner of certain premises in Kentish Town. In 1920 he let these premises to C. for a term of seven years at £100 per annum. The tenant covenanted not to sublet or assign without the consent of the landlord, such consent not to be reasonably withheld. There was a proviso for re-entry in the case of rent being in arrear, but no proviso extending to assignment without leave. In Sept. 1922, the tenant applied for an apportionment of the rent of her premises; this rent was fixed at £35 2s. per annum, & accordingly reduced. In Mar. 1923, C. died, & D. became her exor. In Apr. 1923, application was made to the landlord for permission to assign the premises to F., & references forwarded. On Apr. 20, 1923, F. went into possession, subject to the landlord's consent being obtained. In June, 1923, the exor. assigned the lease to F. as the landlord refused to examine the references or consent to the assignment. The landlord brought an action for possession & mesne profits on the ground that C. had, by obtaining an appointment of her rent, converted her tenancy into a statutory tenancy, which was terminated by her death & was not assignable:—Held: the tenant, by obtaining an apportionment of the rent, did not avoid the lease or become a statutory tenant. The common law tenancy remained & became vested in the exor., & was therefore assignable.—FUMASOLI v. COMYN & FISH (1924), 132 L. T. 490; 23 L. G. R. 381, D. C.

During the pendency of 1920 Act a landlord must show that such an option was either expressly waived or abandoned by the tenant.—MCILROY (WILLIAM), LTD. v. CLEMENTS (1923), 155 L. T. Jo. 362, C. SECT. 5.—RECOVERY OF POSSESSION.SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Sec. now, 1923 Act, s. 4, re-enacting 1920 Act, s. 5 (1).

7256. “Satisfactory grounds”—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97)—House required for purchaser—Notice to quit given by landlord.]—In Aug. 1918, the landlord of a house to which Rent Restriction Acts applied sold the house to a purchaser, vacant possession to be given on Sept. 24, 1918, & gave the existing tenant a valid notice to quit, which notice expired on Oct. 27, 1918. The tenant not complying with the notice, the landlord brought this action for possession. In Dec. 1918, the Acts of 1915 & 1918 being then in force, the county ct. judge found that pltf. desired to give vacant possession to a bona fide purchaser for residence therein & held that this was a satisfactory ground for making an order for possession. On appeal before the passing of the Act of 1919 the Div. Ct. held that the Act of 1918 prohibited the making of an order for possession with a view to occupation by a purchaser from a landlord. On appeal after the Act of 1919 came into force:—Held: (1) under above Act, s. 1 (3), as amended by Increase of Rent, etc. (Amendment) Act, 1918 (c. 7), s. 1, the general discretion conferred upon the ct. by the sub-sect. could not be exercised on a ground inconsistent with one of the grounds expressly specified in the earlier part of the sub-sect., & therefore, there was no discretion to make an order for possession in favour of a landlord requiring possession for the residence of a purchaser; (2) the provisions of the Act of 1919, being retrospective, must be taken into consideration & the case remitted to the county ct. judge to decide whether the purchaser had rescinded the contract, whether he still required the premises for his own occupation, what alternative accommodation there was for the tenant, & whether, in view of the provisions of the Act of 1919, s. 5 (2), pltf. was entitled on the date of the further hearing to an order for possession.—*STOVIN v. The ct. will not consider the giving of such a notice “a satisfactory ground” within the sect., if it was given in the belief that it was merely a provisional notice.—*ARTIZANS, LABOURERS & GENERAL DWELLINGS CO. v. 7260. Whether order “reasonable” — What court must consider.—In breach of an express covenant in a lease under seal a tenant underlet part of a house without his landlord’s previous written consent, which consent could not be withheld in the event of a respectable & responsible tenant being introduced. On discovering the breach the landlord forfeited the lease & claimed possession. The house was within 1920 Act. At the trial the tenant proved that he only took the lease in the bona fide belief induced by the landlord’s house agents during the negotiations that they had obtained the landlord’s consent to his underletting part of the house from time to time, which consent they knew was a sine qua non to his taking the lease. On learning at the trial that the landlord had given no consent to actual underletting, but had only given the tenant permission to have some one to live with him, the tenant at once offered to give vacant possession in nine months’ time, or sooner if he could obtain other accommodation, & not to underlet again without the landlord’s consent, & in the meantime to pay over one-half of the under-tenant’s rent. The landlord refused these offers & demanded immediate possession :—Held : the circumstances under which the lease was taken were necessarily & directly relevant to the question whether it was “reasonable” to make an order for possession under 1920 Act, s. 5, which gave the ct. full judicial discretion in the matter; & having regard to the fact that the tenant only took the lease in the belief, induced by the landlord’s house agents, that the landlord had expressly consented to partial underletting, & taking into consideration the tenant’s offers, & the absence of any suggestion of structural alteration, or against the respectability or responsibility of the under-tenant, or of any real injury to the landlord, it would not be “reasonable” to order possession.—UPJOHN v. MACFARLANE, [1922] 2 Ch. 256; 91 L. J. Ch. 465; 127 L. T. 210; varied by consent, [1922] 2 Ch. 267, C. A.

7261. ———.—In considering whether it is reasonable to make an order for possession under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (d), as amended by 1923 Act, s. 4, the county ct. judge ought to take into consideration every circumstance that may affect the interests of the landlord or of the tenant in the premises, including the financial hardship which may be inflicted upon the tenant if an order for possession is made.—WILLIAMSON v. PALLANT, [1924] 2 K. B. 173; 93 L. J. K. B. 726; 131 L. T. 474; 22 L. G. R. 416, D. C.

7262. ———.—In considering whether it is reasonable to make an order or to give judgment [under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1), as amended by 1923 Act, s. 4], the county ct. judge must take into account all the circumstances affecting the holding of the premises by the tenant & as they relate to the landlord who wants to recover possession.—*SHRIMPTON v. 1916 a "dwelling-house" within the meaning of the Increase of Rent Acts was by agreement in writing let by pltf. to deft. on a quarterly tenancy from June 24, 1916, subject to a quarter's notice, at a yearly rent of £60, payable quarterly. The rent was afterwards increased to £65. In 1920 deft. was adjudicated bkpt. & the official receiver disclaimed the tenancy, whereupon pltf., after 1920 Act, came into force, brought this action for recovery of possession of the demised premises on the ground that the tenancy had expired by reason of the disclaimer:—Held: pltf. was entitled to possession.—*REEVES v. Deft. was afterwards adjudicated bkpt. & the trustee in bkpcy. disclaimed any interest in the house. In an action by pltfs. against deft. for possession of the house & mesne profits:—Held: the statutory tenancy to which deft. became entitled under 1920 Act was "property" within Bkpcy. Act, 1924 (c. 59), s. 167, & passed under s. 53 to his trustee in bkpcy., & on disclaimer thereof by the trustee that interest in the premises ceased to exist & was no longer available for the benefit of deft., & consequently that pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—*PARKINSON v. SUB-SECT. 2.—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

A. In General.

7270. At what time conditions ascertained—Change of conditions after notice to quit.]—For the purpose of applying Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 1 (3), the time to be considered is the time when the ct. is asked to make an order for recovery of possession. Where between the notice to quit & the service of a writ to recover possession of a dwelling-house, the person for whose employees pltf. requires the house has ceased to be a tenant of pltf. but has purchased the land of which he was previously the tenant, the ct. is entitled to consider that the fact that such person reasonably requires the house for the accommodation of his employees is a "satisfactory ground" within the sub-sect. for making an order for possession.—*HARCOURT v. B. Particular Conditions.

(a) Non-Payment of Rent or Breach of Covenant.

See, now, 1923 Act, s. 4, re-enacting 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (a).

7271. Non-payment of rent—Effect of tender in arrear.]—Where the tenant of a dwelling-house within Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest, War Restrictions, Act, 1915 (c. 97), has not paid the rent due under his tenancy agreement, but upon being served with a writ for the recovery of possession of the premises, tenders the rent in arrear, such tender does not preclude the landlord from obtaining an order for recovery of possession.—BEAVIS v. CARMAN (1920), 36 T. L. R. 396; 84 J. P. Jo. 197.

7272. ————]—Application of Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97), s. 1 (3)—"So long as tenant continues to pay rent."—(1) Where the tenant of a dwelling-house within above Act, is in arrear with his rent the provision of Increase of Rent, etc. (Amendment) Act, 1919 (c. 90), s. 1 (1), that no order for recovery of possession shall be made "so long as the tenant continues (inter alia) to pay rent at the agreed rate," is not satisfied by an undertaking that he will pay the arrears on a date subsequent to the hearing of the application for the order.

(2) When 1920 Act has come into operation between the date of the refusal of a county ct. judge to order possession & the hearing of an appeal, the Div. Ct. may, if 1920 Act contains a new & material provision, send the case back to the county ct. judge, in order that he may deal with it on the basis of such new provision.

(3) It has been contended for pltf. that the words "any proceedings pending in any ct.," in 1920 Act [s. 19 (3)] mean any proceedings pending in any ct. of first instance & that the appeal could not, therefore be deemed to have commenced under the Act. But it appears that the phrase "in any ct." is intended to give the tenant the benefit of that Act if he is a party to any proceedings in any ct. (LAWRENCE, J.).—BENARO v. HORSELEY (1920), 36 T. L. R. 859; 64 Sol. Jo. 727, D. C.

but which came within 1920 Act, passed on July 2, 1920, was in arrear with his rent & the landlord gave the tenant a valid notice to quit, which expired on June 21, 1920. In an action by the landlord for possession:—Held: under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1), the ct. had a discretion, & there would be an order for possession with costs, but the order would be discharged if within three weeks the tenant paid the arrears of rent & mesne profits.—REEKS v. SHELLEY (1920), 36 T. L. R. 868.

7277. Premises used for immoral or illegal purpose.—More than one instance must be proved.—WALLER v. THOMAS, No. 7092, ante.

7278. — What amounts to.—Receiving stolen goods.—The landlords of a dwelling-house within 1923 Act gave their tenant notice to quit. Before the date of the notice the tenant had been convicted under Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 33, of receiving at the demised premises certain property of the landlords well knowing the same to have been stolen. Notwithstanding that user of premises forms no essential part of this crime:—Held: the tenant, having made use of the premises in order to commit the crime of which he had been convicted, had been “convicted of using the premises for an illegal purpose” within 1923 Act, s. 4.

To bring a tenant within the sect. it is not necessary that the user of the premises for an illegal purpose should be continuous or frequent.—SCHNEIDERS (S.) & SONS, LTD. v. ABRAHAM, [1925] 1 K. B. 301; 94 L. J. K. B. 408; 132 L. T. 721; 41 T. L. R. 24, C. A.

Contract for sale.—Where landlord under no legal liability.—Whether “satisfactory” ground.—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915 (c. 97).—In Mar. 1919, the tenant of a dwelling-house gave a valid quarter's notice to quit. The landlord thereupon entered into a contract with a third party to sell the premises, the contract being conditional on the landlord being able to give possession on Lady Day, 1919. When the landlord required possession, the tenant refused to give up the premises, & the landlord in consequence was prevented from carrying out his contract of sale. He brought an action against the tenant for recovery of possession:—Held: as plff. had not been exposed to an action for damages for breach of the conditional contract by deft.'s refusal to quit according to his notice, the circumstances did not form a “satisfactory ground” on which the ct. could exercise its discretion under above Act, s. 1 (2), & make an order for the recovery of possession of the premises.—HUNT v. BLISS (1919), 89 L. J. K. B. 174; 122 L. T. 351; 84 J. P. 37; 36 T. L. R. 74; 64 Sol. Jo. 116; 18 L. G. R. 45, D. C.

7280. —.—The landlord of a house to which the above enactment applied, wishing to sell the house with vacant possession, made an agreement in writing with his tenant that in consideration of a present payment the tenant should give notice to quit & should peaceably yield up possession on a certain day. The landlord made the payment & the tenant gave the notice to quit, but when the day arrived the tenant refused to give up possession. The landlord brought an action for possession. No evidence was given that he had, otherwise than as aforesaid, contracted to sell or let the house or taken any other steps as a result of which he would be seriously prejudiced if he could not obtain possession:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. to make an order for possession is restricted by 1920 Act, s. 5 (1); if the conditions upon which alone an order can be made are not fulfilled, an order cannot be made in invitum notwithstanding any agreement of the parties to the contrary; & consequently the landlord could not recover.—*BAITON v. In consequence of his recommendation the landlord entered into an agreement with the person suggested for a tenancy of the premises. The original tenant, however, at the expiration of his notice, changed his mind, & refused to give up possession. He relied on above Act, sect. 1 (3), & contended that the ground on which the application for possession was based was not “some other ground which may be deemed satisfactory by the ct.”:—Held: the ground on which the claim for possession was made, namely, that the landlord wished to be protected against the consequence of a breach of contract induced by the tenant, was a satisfactory & reasonable ground within the sub-sect., & there would, therefore, be an order for delivery of possession.—*GREEN-PRICE v. 7288. — Landlord who has served in Forces.]—In 1914 a house was let by the owner to deft. under a lease expiring in Sept. 1920. Pltf. served with the Forces from 1914 to 1919. In Mar. 1920, pltf.'s father purchased the house. After the expiry of the lease deft. remained in possession as tenant. In Jan. 1921, pltf.'s father conveyed the house to pltf., & pltf. then took proceedings against deft. to recover possession under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (f), in order that pltf. & his father & mother might all live together in the house. Reasonable accommodation in the house was offered to deft.:—Held: pltf. was the landlord within 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (f), & as he wanted the house for his personal occupation, & not merely in order that his father might obtain possession for his own occupation, pltf. was entitled to an order for possession.—KENTISH v. SNEATH (1921), 37 T. L. R. 586; 65 Sol. Jo. 455, D. C.

7289. — Right of widow to possession.]—The landlord of certain premises, who had become landlord after service in H.M. Forces, gave notice to quit to a tenant in order that he might occupy the premises himself. After his death, possession not having previously been obtained, his widow, who was also his extrix., took proceedings in the county ct. to obtain possession of the premises. The county ct. judge made an order giving her possession:—Held: the fact that she had not served with H.M. Forces appeared to be conclusive of the matter, & the appeal must be

7291. —]—Deft., who was the tenant of a seven-roomed house, occupied five of the rooms herself & sub-let the remaining two rooms furnished. Pltf., who urgently required some rooms in which to reside together with her mother & niece, bought the house in Sept. 1924, & asked deft. to give her possession of the two rooms she sub-let furnished, & offered to allow deft. to retain possession of the five rooms she occupied in the house. Deft., however, refused to give pltf. possession of the two rooms. Pltf. thereupon served upon deft. a notice to quit the whole of the premises, & subsequently commenced proceedings in the county ct. under 1923 Act, s. 4 (1), (d), claiming possession of the premises, alleging that she required them for occupation for a residence for herself, & that she had offered deft. reasonable alternative accommodation. At the trial pltf. said that she was prepared to take the two rooms. The county ct. judge made an order for possession of the two rooms which deft. sub-let furnished on condition that the rent payable by deft. was reduced. Deft. appealed:—Held: (1) in the circumstances, inasmuch as deft. had refused to give pltf. possession of the two rooms, pltf. had proved that she reasonably required the whole premises for occupation as a residence for herself within 1923 Act, s. 4 (1), (d); (2) the offer by pltf. to allow deft. to retain the five rooms she occupied in the house was an offer of alternative accommodation reasonably suitable to the needs of the tenant, even although the alternative accommodation was in the same house, & therefore pltf. was entitled to an order for possession of the whole premises, subject to her allowing deft. to occupy at a reduced rent the five rooms which she already occupied.—*THOMPSON v. On that date he gave up occupation in consequence of being called upon to serve in the army. He was demobilised in May, 1919. In the meantime deft., who was the owner of the cottage of which pltf. was formerly the tenant, had gone into occupation thereof. Pltf. applied to the county ct. for an order for the recovery of possession of the cottage. The county ct. judge made an order for possession. On appeal:—Held: the action failed, inasmuch as 1920 Act was not an enabling Act, & did not confer upon a tenant a right of action which he had not before the passing of the Act. The object & scope of 1920 Act was to restrict the right of landlords to raise rents or to recover the possession of dwelling-houses in certain specified cases.—GOODWIN v. RHODES, [1921] 2 K. Forces during the war," is to be read as meaning that the house is required by the landlord for the occupation of a former tenant, & it is not necessary for the party claiming possession to prove that he was himself the former tenant & sub-let the house on joining the Forces.—MESSENGER v. JACQUES (1920), 36 T. L. R. 773.

Sect. 5.—Recovery of possession: Sub-sects. 3 & 4.]

7304. — Breach of covenant not to use for any business.]—A dwelling-house to which 1920 Act applied was held from pltf. under an agreement by which the tenant was not to permit it to be used for any business without the landlord's written consent. The tenant, without such consent, let part of the house to a sub-tenant for a piano business. Subsequently the tenant's holding was determined by consent, & the sub-tenant remained in occupation of the part sub-let to him. In an action by the landlord against the sub-tenant to recover possession:—Held: the word "tenancy" in 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (a) was not to be confined to the statutory tenancy between pltf. & deft. but also covered the original contractual tenancy, & as the original tenant had broken the terms of his contract of tenancy, pltf. was entitled to recover possession from deft.—CHAPMAN v. HUGHES (1923), 129 L. T. 223; 39 T. L. R. 260; 67 Sol. Jo. 518; 21 L. G. R. 350.

7305. —]—Where a tenant has incurred a forfeiture of his lease, an order for possession against the sub-tenant would not be justified having regard to 1920 Act, s. 5 (5) & s. 15 (3), unless the sub-tenancy had been wrongfully created, i.e., by an act in breach of covenant to which the sub-tenant was privy.—WARD v. LARKINS (1923), 130 L. T. 184; 67 Sol. Jo. 657.

7306. — Notice to quit by tenant—Application of 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (c).—(1) The tenant from year to year of a dwelling-house, to which the above Act applied, duly gave the landlord notice to quit. During the currency of the notice the tenant with the consent of the landlord sub-let the house for the unexpired residue of the tenancy from year to year to a sub-tenant, & the landlord granted a lease of it to a new tenant for a term to commence on the date of the expiration of the tenancy from year to year. The sub-tenant claimed to be a "tenant" within above sub-sect. & as he had not given any notice to quit he refused to give up possession of the house on the date above specified. The landlord accordingly brought an action against him under that clause for recovery of possession of the house, in which action the above facts were found & also the fact that the landlord would be seriously prejudiced if he could not obtain possession:—Held: the sub-tenant was not a "tenant" within that sub-sect., & although he had not given notice to quit, the landlord was entitled to an order for possession against him under the sub-sect.

I think that the term "tenant" as used in the [above] Act is prima facie a generic term including the original tenant, a person deriving title under him, a sub-tenant, or any one else who comes within the definition, but that it is only used in that wide sense where the context does not otherwise require. It seems to me that in above sub-sect. the context requires that the term should be used in a narrower sense . . . & that "tenant" as there used must mean the original tenant of the landlord (ROWLATT, J.).

(2) In my view [sect 5 (5)] only means that where there is a sub-tenant lawfully & de facto in possession of the house, the landlord who desires to recover possession cannot avail himself as against the sub-tenant of any order or judgment which he may have recovered against the tenant, but must commence separate proceedings against the sub-tenant (ROWLATT, J.).

(3) I think that [sect. 15 (3)] merely means that where the interest of the original tenant has been lawfully determined, then any sub-tenant, assuming that he is entitled to retain possession under the provisions of the Act, shall, notwithstanding that the title under which he derived his interest has come to an end, continue to be tenant, the terms on which he retains possession being the same as those on which he would have held from the tenant if the tenancy had continued (ROWLATT, J.).—HYLTON (LORD) v. HEAL, [1921] 2 K. B. 438; 90 L. J. K. B. 606; 125 L. T. 178; 37 T. L. R. 288; 65 Sol. Jo. 311; 19 L. G. R. 196, D. C.

7307. Where tenant has quitted without notice.]—The protection given to a sub-tenant by 1920 Act, s. 15 (3), where the interest of the tenant is determined, is not taken away by the fact of the tenant's having quitted the premises without notice, since the words "the tenant has given notice to quit" in 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (c), do not include a vacation of the premises without notice.—STANDINGFORD v. BRUCE, [1926] 1 K. B. 466; 95 L. J. K. B. 223; 134 L. T. 282; 42 T. L. R. 122; 70 Sol. Jo. 346, D. C.

(2) The fact that the landlord owing to the refusal of the tenant to give possession has had to obtain other premises where he is temporarily residing at the time of the hearing of the action, is no reason for holding that the dwelling-house is not then reasonably required by the landlord as a residence for himself.

7322. What constitutes alternative accommodation—Alternative dwelling accommodation—Tenant of dwelling-house & shop.—Deft. was the tenant of premises comprising a dwelling-house & shop & pltf. was the landlord. The tenancy was determined by notice to quit, but deft. did not give up possession relying on Increase of Rent, etc. (Amendment) Act, 1919 (c. 90), s. 1 (1) (c), & contended that there was no alternative accommodation available. Alternative dwelling-house accommodation was offered her by pltf., but no alternative shop accommodation. The county ct. judge held that it was not reasonable to offer deft. alternative house accommodation only, & gave judgment in her favour:—Held: Increase of Rent, etc. (War Restrictions) Acts dealt with dwelling-houses only, & therefore, it was unnecessary for pltf. to offer deft. more than alternative house, as opposed to shop, accommodation, but that the county ct. judge, in considering the alternative house accommodation, may take into account the position of the house offered.

In construing these emergency statutes regard must, of course, as in other statutes, first be had to the plain meaning of the statutes themselves as a matter of construction, but we think that, restricting as they do the ordinary rights of individuals arising from their mutual contracts & relationships, the Acts should not be needlessly extended beyond the particular mischief which they are designed to avoid or to remedy (BRAY, J.).—WILCOCK v. BOOTH (1920), 89 L. J. K. B. 864; 122 L. T. 678; 84 J. P. 76; 36 T. L. R. 213; 64 Sol. Jo. 292; 18 L. G. R. 221, D. C.

which the county ct. judge could find that there was available alternative accommodation for the tenant, because if the wife had gone to live with her husband it would have amounted to a cancellation of the order for judicial separation, & the order for possession should not have been made.—CRUTCHLEY v. WHITE (1920), 89 L. J. K. B. 815; 84 J. P. 145; 36 T. L. R. 249, D. C.

Annotation:—Reid. Flint v. Ead (1921), 91 L. J. K. B. 132.

7324. — Tenant having another place of residence.]—Where deft., in proceedings for the recovery of possession of a dwelling-house, has also another place of residence, that other place of residence does not necessarily constitute "alternative accommodation" within 1920 Act, s. 5 (1).—FLINT v. EAD (1921), 91 L. J. K. B. 132; 125 L. T. 857; 37 T. L. R. 708; 19 L. G. R. 502, D. C.

7326. Must be immediately available—When order made.]—LEES v. DULEY, [1921] W. N. 283, D. C.

7327. — —.]—The words "is available" in 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (d), mean that the ct. must be satisfied of the existence of alternative accommodation at the time of making the order or giving judgment for possession.—KIMPSON v. MARKHAM, [1921] 2 K. B. 157; 90 L. J. K. B. 393; 124 L. T. 790; 37 T. L. R. 342; 19 L. G. R. 346, D. C.

7328. What may be considered—Position of house offered.]—WILCOCK v. BOOTH, No. 7322, ante.

7329. — Tenant's family & lodgers.]—The landlord of a dwelling-house, who had purchased it after service in H.M. Forces during the war, brought an action in the county ct. under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (f), against the tenant for recovery of possession of the house for his personal occupation & offered the tenant accommodation in the same house. The tenant, a widow, was herself in occupation of the house with members of her family & two lodgers. She had fully furnished the house with her own furniture, & had for some years continuously let furnished lodgings on which she was in part dependent for her livelihood:—Held: the ct., in considering pursuant to 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (b), whether the accommodation offered to the tenant was reasonably sufficient in the circumstances, was entitled to have regard not only to the tenant herself & the members of her family, but also to her lodgers.—CHIVERTON v. EDE, [1921] 2 K. B. 30; 90 L. J. K. B. 491; 124 L. T. 765; 37 T. L. R. 242; 65 Sol. Jo. 260; 19 L. G. R. 217, D. C.

7330. — Tenant's occupation not continuous.]—In considering the question of alternative accommodation under 1920 Act, s. 5 (1) (d), the ct. may have regard to the fact that the tenant's occupation is not continuous.—CRUISE v. TERRELL (1921), 37 T. L. R. 936; on appeal, [1922] 1 K. B. 664, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 5.—ACTION FOR RECOVERY.

A. In General.

See 1920 Act, ss. 17 (2), 19 (3).

7331. Proceedings pending under previous Act—dwelling-house under 1920 Act, s. 6 (1) (d), & indicated as alternative accommodation certain vacant premises in every respect suitable except that the landlord refused to accept the defts. as her tenants:—Held: the alternative accommodation was not available within the sect.—TOPPING v. HUGHES (1924), 58 L. T. 156.—IR.

What proceedings included.]—BENABO v. HORSELEY, No. 7272, ante.

7332. Proceeding "arising under the Act"—Action against statutory tenant.]—In an action by a weekly tenant for the recovery of possession of his rooms which had been taken possession of by deft., his landlady, on the allegation that he had given her notice to quit, the ct. held, on the evidence, that the notice to quit was insufficient, & the entry by deft. improper. Judgment was given for pltf. with forty shillings damages.

A year before this action deft. had given pltf. notice to quit, but he had remained on as tenant & deft. had received rent for twelve months from the expiration of this notice to quit:—Held: pltf. was in the position of a statutory tenant & this action was a proceeding arising under 1920 Act; & inasmuch as the action might have been brought in the county ct. pursuant to 1920 Act, s. 17 (2), & 1920 Act, s. 16 (3) was inapplicable having regard to the decision in Shuler v. Hersh, No. 7173, ante, pltf. was not entitled to the costs of the action in the High Ct.—WOLFF v. SMITH, [1923] 2 Ch. 393; 92 L. J. Ch. 635; 130 L. T. 154; 67 Sol. Jo. 766.

7334. Right to judgment under R. S. C., Ord. 14—Action for possession for non-payment of rent—Where defendant relies on 1920 Act, s. 5 (1).]

(1) Where, in an action in the High Ct. by a landlord to recover from his tenant possession of a dwelling-house which is subject to the provisions of above Act deft. relies on the provisions of the statute, as, for example, under above sub-sect. that no rent is lawfully due or that the ct. will not consider it reasonable to make an order for possession, an application under above Ord. for summary judgment is misconceived, & deft. is entitled to have leave to defend the action.

(2) Semble: pltf., who brings an action in the High Ct. for the recovery of possession of a dwelling-house to which the statute applies, is not entitled to recover any costs, even if successful.—GILL v. LUCK (1923), 93 L. J. K. B. 60; 130 L. T. 331; 40 T. L. R. 38; 68 Sol. Jo. 100; 22 L. G. R. 292, C. A.

7339. Power to vary or rescind order—Where premises not within former Acts—Effect of 1920 Act.]—By 1920 Act, s. 5 (3), where any order or judgment has been made or given before the passing of that Act, but not executed, & in the opinion of the ct., the order or judgment would not have been made or given if that Act had been in force at the time when such order or judgment was made or given “the ct. may, on the application of the tenant, rescind or vary” the order or judgment. The word “may” in the sub-sect. means “may” & not “shall” & the effect of the sub-sect. is to give the county ct. judge, who is otherwise functus officio, a discretion to revise his judgment in the light of the new Act, but he is not bound to apply the new Act.—TAYLOR v. FAIRES (1920), 90 L. J. K. B. 391; 124 L. T. 732; 37 T. L. R. 55; 65 Sol. Jo. 116; 19 L. G. R. 56, D. C.

7343. Jurisdiction of county court—Where annual rent exceeds £100.]—An action by a landlord to recover from a tenant possession of a house to which 1920 Act applies is a claim or proceeding “arising out of this Act” within the meaning of s. 17 (2), & the county ct. has jurisdiction to entertain the action, notwithstanding that the rent payable by the tenant is in excess of £100.—RUSOFF v. LIPOVITCH, [1925] 1 K. B. 628; 94 L. J. K. B. 355; 132 L. T. 789; 41 T. L. R. 278; 23 L. G. R. 230, C. A.

7347. Claim against trespasser—Premises within the Acts—Whether claim “arising out of” the Acts.]—Pltf. obtained judgment against deft., who was a trespasser, for possession of premises which by reason of their rental were within 1920 Act:—Held: although the premises were within the Act, the claim for possession against a trespasser was not one “arising out of this Act” within s. 17 (2), & consequently, pltf. was entitled to costs.—GUNTER v. DAVIS, [1925] 1 K. B. 124; 94 L. J. K. B. 352; 132 L. T. 538; 69 Sol. Jo. 841.

Annotation:—Refd. Rusoff v. Lipovitch, [1925] 1 K. B. 628.

7348. Duty of judge to consider—Where defendant relies on the Acts.]—Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. to recover possession of a house which she had purchased for her own occupation & of which notwithstanding notice to quit duly served on deft., the tenant, deft. refused to give pltf. possession. The county ct. judge refused to make an order for possession on the ground that upon the evidence he was not satisfied that alternative accommodation was available for deft. within Increase of Rent, etc. (Amendment) Act, 1919 (c. 90), s. 1 (1) (c), & made no order as to costs. A bill of costs was served upon pltf.'s solrs., being deft.'s costs in the county ct. indorsed with a two days' notice of taxation before the registrar. Correspondence followed, which resulted in the registrar sending to pltf.'s solrs. a note made by the county ct. judge the material part of which was, “I made no specific order as to costs, but I did not intend to deprive deft. of any costs to which he might be entitled as the successful party.” The costs were taxed & had since been paid:—Held: the registrar had rightly taxed the costs, inasmuch as they were the costs of an action within County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 113, & were not governed by Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Rules, 1916, r. 17 (1). They therefore followed the event, as the county ct. judge made no specific order as to them.

Where deft. relies on the Rent Restrictions Acts as a defence to an action for recovery of possession of premises, the judge should consider expressly the question of costs, & not leave them to fall automatically on one party.—BENSUSAN v. BUSTARD, [1920] 3 K. B. 654; 89 L. J. K. B. 1117; 124 L. T. 278; 85 J. P. 15; 36 T. L. R. 811; 64 Sol. Jo. 669, D. C.
